1899	XVII	The Indian Registration (Amendment) Act, 1899.	The whole.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. This is a pure consolidating Bill. The provisions relating to the registration of documents are now scattered about in seven enactments. The object of the present Bill is to collect these provisions and to incorporate them in one Act. This will make the law more easily ascertainable. It will further clear the Statute-book of three entire Acts and will enable two more Acts to be entirely removed from it on the coming into force of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and of the Indian Limitation Bill, now before Council.

2. The fact that the General Clauses Act, 1897, will apply to the Bill when passed has rendered it unnecessary to retain some provisions of the present Acts. The opportunity has been taken to incorporate alterations of a formal character intended merely to improve and simplify the language of the existing Act. The numbering of the sections of the Act of 1877 has been preserved.

3. It has been found that the mere process of consolidation might result in the law being changed in some respects. To avoid this some few amendments appear to be necessary, and to these reference is made in the Notes on Clauses below.

4. A table showing the disposal of the sections of the Act is appended to this Statement.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 46.—Section 46 of the Act saves the provisions of section 259 of the Indian Succession Act, 1865, relating to the filing and preservation of wills in the Courts of District Judges and Delegates. Exactly the same provisions have since been enacted in section 81 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, in respect of wills to which the Succession Act does not apply ; these provisions being contained in a later enactment are not affected by the provisions of the Registration Act to the contrary. To avoid any question as to the effect of the re-enactment of the law relating to registration and to preserve the law unaltered, the provisions of section 81 of the Probate and Administration Act have been expressly saved by introducing a reference to that enactment in the clause.

Clause 49.—The words "in accordance with the provisions of this Act" occurring at the end of section 49 of the Act may give rise to some difficulty if they are retained in this clause. No doubt seems ever to have been cast on the view that under the law, as it stands, documents prior to the Act of 1877, if registered in accordance with the law for the time being in force, are not rendered inoperative or inadmissible in evidence by this section. Regard being had however to the terms of clause 17, which reproduces section 17 of the Act, a strict adherence to the definition of the word "registered" contained in the General Clauses Act, section 3 (45), might lead to a construction of clause 49 which would make these documents inoperative and inadmissible if the words quoted above are retained. They have accordingly been omitted.

Clause 50.—The words "if duly registered" in section 50 of the Act have been interpreted by the Bombay High Court to mean "registered under this Act" so that an unregistered document of which registration is optional would be avoided by a later registered document of which registration is compulsory only if the latter document has been registered under the Act of 1877 (Shivram v. Sava, I. L. R. 13 Bom. 220). The effect of leaving the words as they are would be that by virtue of section 3 (45) of the General Clauses Act, 1897, they would mean "registered under the law for the time being in force." Accordingly a document registered under any Act prior to the Act of 1877 would acquire priority over a previous unregistered document. This would alter the law as interpreted in Bombay ; but as it is not quite clear what is the view taken of the section by the other High Courts the wording of the section has been left unaltered for the present. Attention is invited to the point.

Clause 93 (2).—The provisions of the Act relating to optional registration have to a great extent been superseded by the provisions of sections 54 and 59 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, in cases to which that Act extends. Special provisions relating to the registration of certain documents are also contained in some other later enactments, as, for instance, in section 12 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Clause 93 (2) is inserted to make it clear beyond doubt that the re-enactment of these partially superseded provisions of the Registration Act is not intended to effect any alteration in the existing law.

1908		The Indian Emigration (Amendment) Act, 1908.	Ditto.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. THIS is a pure consolidating Bill. The provisions as to emigration are now scattered about in six Acts to which will be added a seventh when the Bill for the further amendment of the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, now before Council, is passed. The object of the present Bill is to collect these provisions and to incorporate them in one Act. The result will be that the law will be more easily ascertainable and that one Act will take the place of seven on the Statute-book.

2. The fact that the General Clauses Act, 1897, will apply to the Bill when passed has rendered it unnecessary to retain some provisions of the present Acts. The opportunity has been taken to incorporate alterations of a formal character intended merely to improve and simplify the language of the existing Act. Chapter XIV of the Indian Emigration Act, 1883, was added by Act X of 1902; the provisions of this Chapter with the exception of section 111 have been removed to their proper place and form Chapter XI of the Bill; section 111, which relates to offences, has been placed in Chapter XIII. The saving and repealing clauses are placed at the end.

3. No amendment has been made in the existing Act except on the points to which reference is made in the Notes on Clauses below.

4. A table showing the disposal of the sections of the Act of 1883 and the amending Acts is appended.

The 29th July 1908. H. ERLE RICHARDS.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 3 (1).—Karachi has been added as emigration from it has been declared to be lawful by notification under section 7 (1).

Clause 104 and the First Schedule.—Emigration to the French Colonies mentioned in paragraph II of the Schedule has been prohibited by notifications issued by the Governor General in Council; emigration to those places is not at present lawful and they have therefore been removed from the schedule. As, however, emigration to those places may again be made lawful by the issue of a notification under clause 4 (1), sub-clause (a) of section 103, which applies the provisions of the Act to emigration from British ports to French Colonies, has been retained as clause 104 (a) with a proviso that it is to take effect only in the event of such a notification being issued.

First Schedule.—The Seychelles has been added to paragraph I; emigration to it has been declared lawful by a notification issued under section 8 (1) of the Act.

Third Schedule.—References to the French Colonies have been removed as emigration to those places is, as above explained, not at present lawful.

The probable lengths of voyages by sailing vessels to some of the places mentioned in the schedule have been altered and the length of voyages to the Seychelles has been declared, by notifications issued under section 101 of the Act. The schedule has been amended accordingly.

REPORT ON THE COTTON CROP OF BENGAL, AUGUST 1908.

THE following note is published for general information.

F. W. DUKE,

Offg. Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

The 17th August 1908.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

First Report on the Cotton Crops of Bengal, August 1908.

(On an average of the five years ending 1906-07, the area under cotton crop in the territory to which this forecast relates has represented some 0·38 per cent. of the total area under cotton in India.)

Explanatory.—This report deals with the area sown and prospects of the early crop, and furnishes information also regarding the progress made in the sowings of the late crop.

Character of the season.—The early cotton crop which is generally sown before the rains is important in the Sonthal Parganas, Sambalpur, Manbhum, Singhbhum and Ranchi.

Sowings were normal except in Manbhum, Angul, Palamau and parts of Monghyr where they were late owing to want of rain. The weather conditions have been generally favourable, Bankura, parts of Midnapore and of Monghyr and the Sonthal Parganas excepted, where prospects are not good. A little damage has been done to the crop by caterpillars in Sambalpur.

The chief late cotton-growing districts are Saran Muzaffarpur, Darbhanga, Singhbhum and Cuttack. Sowings were normal and the prospects of the crop are reported to be fair so far.

Area sown.—The area sown with early cotton is estimated at 40,506 acres, against 35,341 acres finally returned in the previous year.

It is not possible now to estimate the area that will be put under late cotton during the season, as sowings have not yet been completed. The information to hand shows that 28,760 acres have already been sown. In the final cotton forecast of 1907, the total area under the crop was shown as 34,924 acres.

The mean pressure, temperature, etc., are deduced from the traces of the Knudsen's Barograph and from eye observations.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. The rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.

o, overcast; g, dark gloomy; d, drizzling rain; p, passing temporary showers; t, thunder; <, lihgtning; K, thunderstorm.

PRELIMINARY FORECAST OF THE SUGARCANE CROP OF BENGAL, 1908.

THE following note is published for general information.

F. W. DUKE,
Offg. Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

The 19th August 1908.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

(Preliminary Forecast of the Sugarcane Crop of Bengal, 1908.)

(On an average of the five years ending 1906-07, the area under sugarcane in the territory to which this forecast relates has represented some 18·8 per cent. of the total area under this crop in British India.)

Character of the Season.—Planting of the crop was late in the Burdwan and Presidency Divisions owing to short rainfall in the beginning of the season. In the rest of the Province it was normal. Deficient rain affected the growth of the crop in several districts in the early part of the season, but recent rain has improved prospects somewhat. The present condition of the crop is fair except in parts of the Presidency Division and of the Burdwan, Bankura, Saran, Purnea, Manbhum and Singhbhum districts.

Area planted.—The area under sugarcane this year is returned as 382,800 acres, against 436,200 acres returned last year. The normal acreage is estimated at 439,300 acres. The decrease in cultivation this year is due to deficient rain at the time of planting.

Outturn.—From District reports annexed to this note, it will be seen that only three districts, viz., Balasore, Ranchi and Palamau expect a normal crop. Two districts, viz., Shahabad and Darbhanga give estimates of 90 and 91 per cent. crops respectively. Ten districts report crops between 80 and 89 per cent., 8 districts between 70 and 79 per cent., and six districts between 60 and 69 per cent. The estimates for the remaining four districts, viz., Jessore and Saran (each 55 per cent.), Singhbum (56 per cent.) and Murshidabad (48 per cent.) are poor. According to these estimates, the total outturn of the crop for the Province amounts to 78 per cent. of the normal, against 85 per cent. estimated for last year. But as the recent rains have improved prospects in several districts, it is anticipated that the outturn of the crop of this season will not fall below that estimated by this Department last year.

Other sources of Gur.—The manufacture of raw sugar from the date palm is confined to the Presidency Division. The quantity of this product likely to be obtained this year is estimated at 1,597,149 cwts. and the output of sugar from the palmyra-palm is estimated at 22,962 cwts.

The decrease in the acreage is due to want of moisture at the time of planting, which was late in some parts of the district. The general condition of the crop is not very good and hence a low outturn is expected.
	Birbhum ...	1,121,280	776,300	9,000	8,900	6,900	60	75	45,571	1889 to 1891 and 1906.	184	Last week of May and 1st week of June.	The date of sowing was very late this year owing to want of rain and to the general water scarcity in the district. The present condition of the crop appears to be fair, but as the date of sowing was very late, the out turn is expected to be 75 per cent. only.
	Bankura ...	1,677,440	642,800	15,000	13,000	12,000	50	60	14,979	1889 to 1902 and 1906.	...	11th May	The decrease in area is due to the cessation of rain during the planting season. The general condition of the crop is not good, as the heavy rain in June has considerably damaged the growth of the plants. Hence a low outturn is expected. The date of planting was late this year.

The decrease in the area as well as in the outturn is ascribed to the want of favourable weather and rain at the time of sowing and the total absence of the rainfall thereafter. The weather and general condition of the crop are not good. The date of planting was late everywhere in the district except in Basirhat, where it was normal. The normal area has been revised.

Presidency ...	Nadia ...	1,787,520	1,043,800	11,400	7,900	6,300	54	64	Not cadastrally surveyed			February ...	The decrease in the area sown and in the estimated outturn is due to want of seasonable rain. The date of planting was late in most places.

	Gaya ...	3,015,680	2,118,100	36,100	36,400	36,400	85	85	514,592	1893 to 1895 and 1900 to 1902.	6,530	First week of January.	Insufficient rain in May and June slightly affected the prospects of the crop, otherwise the weather was favourable. The general condition of the crop is good. The date of planting was normal. The estimate of some thana officers in the Sadar subdivision as regards the area under the crop this year is low, but there appears to be no reason to account for the decrease in the area and the normal figures have therefore been adopted.

TECHNICAL AND INDUSTRIAL INSTRUCTION IN BENGAL, 1888-1908.
(PART I OF SPECIAL REPORT.)

CHAPTER I.

SUMMARY OF THE DISCUSSIONS AND PROPOSALS OF THE PAST TWENTY YEARS.

SECTION I.—THE GENESIS AND RESULTS OF MR. COLLIN'S REPORT OF 1890.

Explanation of terms used.

IN opening the Finsbury Technical College in 1883, Sir Philip Magnus said that in all discussions about technical education it was customary to commence with a definition. He called that education, training or instruction "technical" which had a direct reference to the career of the person who received it; but explained how in practice the term had the narrow signification, which applied to the training of the engineer or chemist rather than to that of the surgeon or lawyer. In England by 1897, technical education became practically any course of study prescribed by the Science and Art Department, while in Germany it has been described as the study of the principles underlying every kind of human craftsmanship. In India Lord Curzon in 1901 explained that he interpreted technical education as meaning that practical instruction which would qualify a person for the practice of some handicraft, industry or profession. He excluded research, the commercial revival of industries and manual training as a part of general education. The Simla Educational Conference held in 1901 defined technical education as (a) the study of the scientific methods and principles underlying the practice of any handicraft, industry or profession; (b) the application of those methods and principles to the practice of the handicraft, industry or profession. Mr. Nathan in his Review of the Progress of Education in India, 1898-1902, discussed the subject under the title, "Professional and Technical Education"; and this distinction is continued by Mr. Hornell in his Review of Education in Bengal from 1902 to 1907. The Simla Conference used the word 'technical' in its broadest sense: Mr. Nathan clearly gave to it the restricted significance which is ordinarily assigned to the word. Mr. Collin in his report of 1890 on the Arts and Industries of Bengal pointed out the vagueness attached to the term. In the present review, technical instruction must be taken to mean that special training for imparting skill, through the knowledge of principles, in any of the careers mentioned. Industrial education again is a branch of Technical Education, as exhaustively described by the Simla Conference; but is to be taken as concerned with the imparting of skill from practice in some handicraft. In other words technical instruction is the instruction necessary for the foreman or the manager, the employer or the director; while industrial education is that which is necessary for the artisan. Expressed in this form, the term technical education should not leave its meaning open to misconception. The Commissioner of Labour to the American Government in his Report of 1902 on Trade Education and Technical Education in various countries assigned to the term "technical education," a meaning, restricted both as to the career involved and as to the nature of the training: it was to give to the workman an understanding of the scientific principles involved in his work. By "trade education," the American report meant the instruction, mainly in the workshop, which consists in perfecting the pupil in the practice of the manipulations and operations of skilled workmen in particular trades. This is synonymous with industrial education as accepted in official correspondence in India.

The pronouncement of 1888 on Technical Education.

In 1886 the Government of India pointed out that little progress of a substantial character had been made in promoting technical education. It was in that year that Mr. (later Sir Antony, now Lord) MacDonnell prepared a memorandum on Technical Education in India. From that we learn that the only promising institution in Bengal beyond the Survey schools was an Industrial School in Midnapore district; that Industrial schools in Bengal were merely excrescences on the educational system with neither plan nor object; and that from isolated schools no general good was likely to come. Hence it was laid down that all such schools should be subordinate to a Central Institution. The difficulty about teachers was indicated. In 1888 an important pronouncement on the subject of technical education was made by the Government of India. The Resolution which was issued in that year recommended the institution of schools at places where industries were centralized, and in large towns where there would be a demand for superior skill. For each province an industrial survey was suggested; also the appointment of a standing committee of educational experts and professional men; and the possibility of the erection of Technological Institutes and of the enlargement of Provincial Schools of Art was foreshadowed. In Bengal we shall find that an industrial survey was made; that the scope of the Sibpur College and of the Government School of Art has been considerably enlarged, and that practical steps have been taken towards the institution of a Technological Institute; but that the increase in the number and quality of the industrial schools has been slight. This is no more than was anticipated in 1888.

The Bengal Industrial Survey of 1890.

To Mr. Collin, I.C.S., was entrusted the preparation of an industrial survey; and his Report on the existing Arts and Industries in Bengal was prepared at the end of 1890. The second portion of the Report dealt with the subject of Technical Education. He emphasized the point that there cannot be uniformity; that each locality should adopt a system specially suited to its wants; and that it is useless to imitate European systems except at a distance. The chief proposals made in connection with technical and industrial training, as distinguished from the improvement of industries, were summed up as follows:—

(1) The institution of a school for mining students in connection with the coal mining industry.

(2) The training of mechanical engineers by the introduction of apprentices into the workshops connected with State Railways.

(3) The provision of special training for apprentices and intelligent workmen in the Railway and Canal workshops in Calcutta and the suburbs.

(4) The institution of improved industrial schools and the encouragement of industrial classes.

(5) The appointment of an Inspector to supervise industrial education.

(6) Private firms and Municipalities and District Boards should be encouraged to open technical schools.

Its results as regards Technical Education.

It will be found that the Government have done a full share in promoting mining instruction; that there is now a system of apprenticeships in all the large Railway workshops (Kanchrapara, Jamalpur, Kharagpur); that full use has however not been made of the large workshops belonging to the State for the training of artisans; that the opening of technical and industrial schools has been encouraged, but that more might be done, though one of the obstacles has been the attitude of the middle classes themselves to manual labour, and another has been the difficulty of obtaining efficient teachers; and finally that while the appointment of an Inspector of Industrial Schools has not yet been made, it is now even more necessary than it was before, but that the Bengal Government have not yet been able to obtain sanction for the appointment, though such an appointment exists in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies.

It is unfortunate that the Report of Mr. Collin was not formally published. The circle of consultants was an official one, and the result is that the very existence of such a report of which practically all the recommendations still hold good is in danger of being forgotten. Five years after its preparation I was informed, when I asked for a copy, that it was confidential. When a question was asked in the Bengal Council in August 1906, regarding an industrial survey of the province, the existence of Mr. Collin's Report of 1890 was formally brought to notice.

In due course the proposals of Mr. Collin were considered in detail. As regards his proposal to utilise the municipal workshops in Calcutta for a technical school, it was found not conveniently practicable. Sir Alfred Croft, the Director of Public Instruction, considered that the District Boards would devote themselves to the establishment of industrial schools as soon as the demand declared itself. Sir Alfred Croft, as will appear from the context, was thinking primarily of the improvement of the artisan, by teaching him improved manual skill and the use of machine tools and by developing his intelligence. The District Boards have however taken up the training of the youths of the middle class who wish to become sub-overseers rather than the training of the artisans. Colonel McNeill, R.E., Secretary to the Government in the Public Works Department, pressed home the point that in order to train youths as mechanics it is essential that they should be where real work has to be done on a commercial basis; and that such youths will never learn in workshops established simply for educational purposes. This is why the existing Industrial School of the East Indian Railway colliery estate at Beniadih is more sound than the Government Industrial School at Ranchi; and why the youths trained in Sibpur have hitherto not won a reputation as mechanical engineers. It is also a strong argument why more use should be made of existing State workshops. Mr. Fouracres who was in charge in 1873 of the Canal Workshops recognised this, and at Dehri-on-Sone created a living industrial school for the children of his workmen which, it is to be regretted, was not kept up on the original lines. Another criticism of Mr. Collin's report, as regards the proposals for training in mining engineering, was that mining engineering was a new thing with a strong element of uncertainty about it. But it is precisely in this direction that Mr. Collin's proposals have borne most fruit. The course of instruction in mining which is now being given both at Sibpur and in the coal districts is much appreciated: expert instructors have been recruited: a Mining Advisory Board has been constituted: certificates of competency in mining engineering are being granted; and for three years the State Technical Scholarships in Bengal have been given in the subject of mining, while the Bengal Chamber of Commerce have recommended in 1908 that this selection should continue in preference to any other industry. Under this head of Technical Instruction it may be said with justification that Government have anticipated the requirements of the industry. During the last twenty years the annual output of the collieries in Bengal has risen from under two million tons to over ten million tons. At the end of 1907 there were over eighty companies with an ordinary capital of over four crores of rupees.

Views of the Bengal Government of 1891.

The report of Mr. Collin was itself reviewed by the Bengal Government of Sir Charles Elliott in 1891. It was determined to push on the training of mining assistants; to establish a boarding-house for the training of apprentices in Mechanical Engineering at Kanchrapara; and to establish a school for cotton-weaving at Berhampore. But it was laid down that the advancement of technical education was not a matter which could be pressed regardless of the demand or of economy. It was expected that when Sibpur College had attained its true position as the centre of industrial education in Bengal, it would be of the greatest service to local technical schools, by supplying them with trained teachers, and by receiving the most promising pupils of such schools; and it was to the maintenance of the Sibpur College, together with the Calcutta School of Art, in the highest scale of efficiency and to development on various, if then unforeseen, lines that the Lieutenant-Governor looked for the promotion of technical education. This then has been the policy of the Bengal Government and the history of the Sibpur College will show that it was kept in view. With reference to these orders of 1891, it may be stated here in anticipation of the exact sequence of narration that as regards Sibpur College provision was made in 1896 for a course in electrical engineering, and in 1906 for instruction in mining engineering, as mentioned above, and that, as regards the School of Art, it was reorganized in 1896, and in 1904 steps were taken to revive Eastern ideals in the teaching at the School; that drawing has been introduced into both primary and secondary schools and in training schools, while it has been made a compulsory subject in the latter, and that the provision of teaching in drawing is an essential condition for any grant-in-aid to the other schools including primary schools since 1901; that in 1904 a committee appointed by the Bengal Government recommended the institution of a central weaving Institute at Serampore (instead of at Berhampore), the appointments for which have been sanctioned by the Secretary of State in 1907; and that in 1908 an apprentice home is being built for the accommodation of the European and Eurasian apprentices at the Kanchrapara State Railway workshops.

The necessity for instruction in drawing.

The position in 1892 was reviewed in Chapter VIII of the Quinquennial Review, 1888-1892, of the Progress of Education in India, prepared by Mr. A. M. Nash. It was considered at that time that it would take half a century to supply from the Calcutta School of Art sufficient teachers for the existing high schools in order to carry out the orders of 1891 regarding the teaching of drawing. But this forecast has been fortunately falsified in the event, as the teachers have been obtained from the training schools. Drawing was made by the Calcutta University an optional subject for the Entrance Examination in 1890; the results however were most discouraging. It had been one of the chief recommendations of Mr. A. P. MacDonnell that instruction in drawing, as a preparation for technical education, should be made compulsory in all schools the teachers of which were competent to instruct in drawing. As regards technical education proper, Mr. Nash wrote that no general scheme had been drawn up for Bengal, and recapitulated the heads of Mr. Collin's proposals.

Affiliation of minor institutions to Sibpur.

After 1892, the first step of importance which was taken was the affiliation in 1894-95 to Sibpur College of the Survey Schools of Dacca, Cuttack and Patna, which had been established in 1876. This act of affiliation was in accordance with the principle laid down in the Memorandum of 1886. The chief obstacle to the advance of technical education had been the want of a governing principle; all progress had been fragmentary and isolated. This was the complaint of Mr. Tawney, who was then the Director of Public Instruction in Bengal. It was laid down that the lower course in a comprehensive system should not only serve its own purpose, but lead to a more complete course elsewhere. Of the affiliated schools the Survey School at Patna was raised in 1896 to the status of a School of Engineering by amalgamation with the Industrial School for Bihar started in Patna in 1892. Under the title of the "Bihar School of Engineering," it teaches now up to the Overseer course. The Survey School in Cuttack still trains only for the survey examination; but at the present time (1908) it is proposed to raise it also to the level of the others under the name of the "Orissa School of Engineering."

Sibpur Artisan Department.

In 1893 the artisan department was reopened at Sibpur; but this has never been a successful department. It is self-evident, and the remark frequently occurs in the literature on the subject, that the practical instruction of the artisan can only be carried on in a commercial atmosphere; and though many improvements in the Sibpur workshops have since been made, they can never take the place of a workshop run on commercial lines, even if the difficulties of residence for artisans at Sibpur were overcome. The attendance of artisans was 35 in 1902, 27 in 1906 and 15 in 1907.

The Review of 1897.

The progress of technical education in Bengal up to 1896 is summarised in paragraph 195 of Mr. J. S. Cotton's Quinquennial Review of the Progress of Education in India, 1893–1897, published in 1898. By that date, Mr. Cotton wrote, no appearance of a system of Technical Education was to be found anywhere in India; the scheme which existed in Madras was rather a scheme of technical examinations, not of technical instruction. It is unnecessary in this review to consider in detail the direction on more practical lines of the general course of study in ordinary schools: only the training in special institutions will be considered. At Sibpur in Bengal considerable improvements had been made in providing instruction in photography and in electrical engineering. The students however found great difficulties in meeting the Calcutta University tests in engineering. The Calcutta School of Art was brought to its present site in Chowringhee in 1893 and was thoroughly re-organised in 1896. The study of design which had been ignored was taken up in a systematic course for draftsmen, drawing masters, industrial art workmen and designers, and the defect was brought to light that oriental art was more or less ignored, whereby Indian Art students were being led in the wrong direction. The prospects of the students of the Survey schools were improved by giving them openings in Government service: it was found that in private service they found abundant employment at remunerative rates. In the matter of Industrial schools, Government contributed Rs. 6,325 and Local Funds Rs. 13,229 out of a total expenditure of nearly half a lakh spread over 23 schools with 623 pupils,—a small enough total for a province with a population of 75 millions. Steps were taken to prepare for the affiliation of suitable schools to the Central College at Sibpur. The Burdwan School was linked up in 1895. The local pupils could thus study for the first two years at the local school, and then proceed to Sibpur to compete for the sub-overseership test on the same terms as those who had read at Sibpur. The only Government Industrial School was at Ranchi, where carpentry, blacksmiths' work, cane work, carriage building, besides a little reading, arithmetic, writing and free-hand drawing were taught. The difficulty of persuading ex-pupils to be teachers in the Primary Fund Industrial Schools in Chota Nagpur was the subject of remark, and this difficulty still exists. As regards Industrial Schools throughout the Province, it must not be forgotten that the most of them and some of the most successful are those under the charge of missionary agencies.

The attempt through a bifurcation of studies to prepare for a technical education.

In 1898 Mr. Hill, Inspector of Schools, proposed that technical classes should be opened at the Government district schools; and in 1899 a scheme was prepared by Mr. Slater, who was then Principal of the Civil Engineering College at Sibpur. This led to a consideration of what, in view of the poor results obtained in Bengal, is rather grandiloquently styled the Bifurcation of Studies in accordance with the recommendation of the Education Commission of 1883. In 1900 it was determined that classes be opened at Ranchi, Bankipore and Midnapore and also at Comilla, Mymensingh, Rangpur, Barisal and Pabna of the present Eastern Province for instruction in such technical subjects as are required in the training of sub-overseers. Pupils who were ready to enter the second class of High Schools might decide whether they would continue their studies for the University Entrance Examination, or in the "modern side" classes. Two years' local training was to be equivalent to one year at Sibpur, and was to entitle the pupils to join either the Sub-overseer classes of the Technical Schools or the second-year apprentice class at Sibpur. The subjects were English, Mathematics, Drawing and Practical Geometry, Mensuration, Elementary Engineering, Surveying and Manual training. These B classes, as they were called, were started in 1901 with great hopes: other classes styled C classes with a syllabus for Commercial and Industrial training were to be opened in 1903. It was anticipated that there would be a great future for this scheme; but it is no exaggeration to say that in both cases the result has been a failure, and that in the former the parents and guardians of pupils have played at cross purposes with the views of Government. My own observation agrees with what I have found on record. It was hoped that public opinion was awakening to the recognition of the fact that a literary education was not the best training for the battle of life, and that industrial and commercial activity was necessary. Whatever other factors have come into play, as regards the B classes, there is no real "election" to join the modern side. A dull boy who cannot hope to pass the Entrance examination is placed in these classes in the hope that he may squeeze into Sibpur without the full general education which Sibpur demands from direct entrants. The result is good neither for the boy nor for Sibpur. The only hopeful feature is, as stated by Mr. Heaton, the successor to Mr. Slater, in a review written in 1906, that modern classes in other countries have had the same history, and it is a mere question of waiting for the breaking down of the natural apathy.

The Review of 1902.

The position of technical and industrial education in Bengal was again reviewed in Chapter VIII of Mr. Nathan's Quinquennial Review of the Progress of Education in India up to 1902, published in 1904. By this time it could be said that Sibpur College had well equipped laboratories and workshops and a large staff of European professors. The beginning of practical instruction in mining engineering had been made by sending B. E. students with scholarships for two years to a selected mine. The Calcutta School of Art after its reorganization in 1896 had special classes for engineering and mechanical drawing, wood engraving, lithography and modelling. In its second division, which corresponds to the syllabus of a School of Art in England, it had classes for those who wished to become painters or sculptors. Paragraphs 861 to 868 of Mr. Nathan's Review are of interest with reference to Industrial schools proper. The difficulties encountered by industrial schools are thus explained:—"It may be admitted at the outset that the endeavours made up to the end of the quinquennium under review to provide through State agency or under State control a system of technical education better than routine training of the bazar have met with little success. The subject which has taxed the ingenuity of the educationalists of all countries, presents a specially difficult problem in India. For the organized industries the conditions are not dissimilar from those which prevail in Europe; but for the industries which are prosecuted on a small scale by the majority of the industrial population they are much more complex and difficult." Mr. Nathan pointed out that there was one class of school which aimed at raising the intelligence and increasing the manual skill of the artisan, and another class which simply trained up boys to earn a livelihood. In Bengal, besides the artisan classes at Sibpur College and the Government school at Ranchi, there were artisan classes at the technical schools at Burdwan and Midnapore: also sixteen aided and three unaided schools. The subjects of instruction were almost entirely carpentry or blacksmiths' work or both; and the teaching in most instances was little better than that of the bazar. Most important of all, he pointed out that Bengal in common with the rest of India had little co-ordination between the instruction in the industrial schools and the local industries of the province.

SECTION II.—THE PROPOSALS IN BENGAL SUBSEQUENT TO THE SIMLA CONFERENCE OF 1901.

The Appointment of a Committee on Industrial Education.

From this stage in 1901 starts a cycle of enquiry, discussion, detailed investigation, and resolution by the Government of India on the subject of technical education; and it is useful to summarise the principles evolved for application to Bengal. The general enquiry by Sir Edward Buck in practical and technical education, the resolutions on technical education at the Simla Educational Conference, the instructions of the Government of India, the enquiries and recommendations of the committee on industrial schools in India, and the resolution of the Imperial Government on the committee's report all follow each other in close succession from 1901 to 1904. These State papers should be examined in original by those who are interested in the subject; but it is useful to place on record what bed-rock principles for application to the Bengal province can be evolved from this voluminous, suggestive, but comparatively infructuous literature. Sir Edward Buck's report of 1901 shows that technical education as applied to industries should be under a separate executive department in each province; and what is required is a special trade school for a particular industry in the locality where a trade is carried on, and only those should be taught who are likely to follow the trade. Part II, chapter III of the report is full of immaculate common sense. The Simla conference of 1901 pointed out that technical instruction should have a definite object and should be specialized. The letter of the Government of India of the 20th November 1901 considered that, while much had been done and was being done and should continue to be done for higher technical education, yet the development of industrial schools was a matter of supreme importance and instruction in such schools should be dissociated from ordinary literary education. The Committee on Industrial Schools strongly maintained in their report of 1903 that a system of apprenticeship in workshops be relied on for training artisans in preference to a system of class instruction in schools. From the point of view of the Bengal province, it is unfortunate that the committee did not make any local enquiries in the Bengal province except in Calcutta itself. The recommendations of the committee were condemned by the Government of India in their resolution of 14th January 1904 on the report of the committee, because it was believed that the central recommendation of the committee,—industrial instruction on the model of the Casanova Boy Artisan School at Naples,—would have as its end the abolition of industrial schools and the substitution of supervision in workshops. It should, however, be remembered that at any rate as far as Bengal is concerned, the most effective improvement of the artisans in mechanical engineering has been by a system of apprenticeship either expressed or implied in large workshops. The Government of India, while admitting the great difficulty of building up rapidly an enormous fabric of technical education in India, lay down two broad principles. One is that at great industrial centres it should be possible to have whole-time schools for instruction in both workshop practice and theory; and that the active co-operation of employers of labour should be enlisted. The other is that for local handicrafts half-time industrial schools should be started,—for teaching on the one hand through the agency of an approved artisan accuracy of workmanship so as to develop a boy's inherited skill, and on the other hand, for teaching in a primary school such general education as will enlarge his prospects as a craftsman while preventing him from falling into a clerical groove. It may here be stated in anticipation that, as far as Bengal is concerned, a type of the former institution is to be found in the Bengal Technical Institute, which was started in Calcutta in the first outburst of enthusiasm for the swadeshi movement as an answer to the partition of Bengal, but which has been kept on proper lines by the level-headedness of its principal engineering adviser; and a type of the latter in the more successful of the village artisan schools started in Hazaribagh district by the Deputy Commissioner Mr. Radice, who was one of the members of the Industrial Committee. The great difficulty in both cases is the supply of competent teachers.

The views of the Imperial Government on the Committee's Report.

One other dictum of the Imperial Government remains to be recorded, especially as it is quoted in later papers in rather a loose fashion. It is frequently broadly laid down that Government should not enter into any industry on a commercial scale. In the first place, Government in India is in fact a manufacturer on a commercial scale of tents and harness, of great coats and blankets, of steam-launches and railway carriages; the justification is the economy which benefits the general tax-payer. In the second place as regards the prohibition in question, the dictum is qualified. While maintaining that industrial schools should be primarily educational and agreeing that the industrial schools as at present conducted frequently fail to train their pupils up to the standard of manual skill required for the market and pursue impractical methods, the resolution proceeds as follows:—

Educational versus Commercial Methods.

"It is most wholesome therefore that they (the schools) should be brought to the test of producing saleable articles. But this is a very different thing from requiring progressive and methodical industrial training to be sacrificed to the necessity of showing a profit on the work done by the boys and in so far as the two objects are incompatible with one another, the Government of India desire to give precedence to the former."

This qualification should not be overlooked. We may now return to the discussions in Bengal itself from the year 1901 onwards.

On receipt of the letter of 20th November 1901 from the Government of India Mr. (now Sir Alexander) Pedler, the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, was asked to prepare a scheme of industrial education in Bengal. Mr. Pedler, writing in January 1902 advocated cautious and tentative steps; and suggested in the first instance the establishment of craft schools at Serampore for weaving and at ten other places in Bengal for other selected crafts. For these schools the most competent local workman, foreman or master was to be selected as an instructor, and instruction in drawing and designing was to be imparted to the artisan pupils. In the second place, Mr. Pedler advocated the importation from Europe of experts for research and enquiry. Nearly two years later at the end of 1903, Mr. Pedler, on the receipt of the views of the Government of India concerning the report of the committee on industrial education, gave his views on the proposed policy for Bengal. They were as follows:—(1) class instruction should be continued; (2) geometrical drawing and designing should be taught; (3) industrial education should be on caste lines; (4) Government, local bodies and the public should help in providing scholarships; (5) in Bengal, a beginning should be made with one of the industries recommended in the letter of 1902, preferably weaving, and preferably weaving in silk, and preferably weaving in silk at Rampur Boalia in Rajshahi district;

The proposals of the Bengal Director of Public Instruction.

(6) the apprentice system should be also encouraged; and (7) if a beginning be made at Rampur Boalia, other weaving schools might be established at Berhampore and in Serampore.

The scheme for a Weaving School at Serampore.

It is convenient to continue the narrative under this head, namely, the proposed establishment of a weaving school under the guidance of an imported expert. Early in 1904 the Government of Bengal reviewed the discussion from the time of the Simla conference of 1901; and appointed a representative committee to consider Mr. Pedler's proposals, which were estimated to cost annually Rs. 20,000, and also the proposals of the Government of India for whole-time schools at large industrial centres, as well as for half-time schools for handicrafts in small private establishments. The committee duly met in February 1904. The non-official representatives were nominees of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce. The committee were in favour of cotton-weaving as the primary subject for instruction, in place of silk-weaving, with the suggestion that instruction in weaving in silk and wool should also be imparted. As regards the site for the school of instruction, the committee were in favour of Serampore instead of Rampur Boalia. Other more ambitious proposals for teaching the manufacture of soap, matches, glassware, cutlery and brass were considered but not accepted. The recommendations of the committee were adopted as the basis for the proposals submitted in June 1904 to the Government of India. The more important of these proposals were:—

(1) that a school for the teaching of improved methods of hand-weaving in silk, cotton and wool should be opened at Serampore under an expert inspector to be recruited from some big manufacturing centre in England, a head-master and a master of drawing and design;

(2) that a higher class should be opened there for the instruction of men of the Sibpur apprentice type, who would in turn become teachers, assistants to manufacturers and manufacturers; and

(3) that a lower class should be opened there for the instruction of weavers and their sons, that similar instructions be given at other selected centres and that all pupils at the school be supported by scholarships.

Provision was made for a hostel, and the question of advances for the purchase of appliances was considered. It was mentioned, that further enquiries would be made in the leather and brass trades.

The Government of India considered that their proposals were conceived in the right lines and were well adapted to the local conditions and requirements. It was intimated therefore in October 1905, that the proposed establishment would be recommended to the Secretary of State, who would be asked to select the best man who could be found qualified to organize such an institution. By January 1907 the Government of India forwarded a despatch to the Secretary of State regarding the development of technical and industrial education in four provinces including Bengal, and as regards Bengal supported the proposals of the Bengal Government made in June 1904. In April 1907 the Secretary of State sanctioned the appointments of a principal and an assistant for the Central Weaving School at Serampore, but up till April 1908 the officers required for the charge of the school have not arrived from England, as the appointments have not yet been made. In the meantime every preparation for the opening of the school has been made in the purchase of land and the selection of temporary buildings.

It should not be overlooked that Mr. Collin had in 1890 recommended the institution of a weaving school for silk at Berhampore. The policy now adopted is to make a beginning by the establishment of an institution for the improvement of that cottage industry which, judged by numbers is the most important in the province, namely, weaving. The experience of the Madras Government in their experimental and instructional weaving station at Salem has been fortunate; and the Serampur institute should be similarly successful.

The improvements, however, in mechanical appliances for hand-loom weaving and in the organization of the trade are a separate matter and are dealt with in the separate report on industrial development.

Proposed appointment of Inspector of Technical and Industrial Schools.

We may now revert to the subject of the inspection of industrial schools. It has been stated above that Mr. Collin had recommended that an inspector be appointed to supervise industrial education. The subject lay fallow till 1902, when Mr. Slater of Sibpur gave illuminating suggestions for its cultivation. After describing the schools then in existence, he desired that European and Eurasian experts be appointed in the various industries which it was proposed to foster; that these experts should be inspectors of local industries; and that the principal of the central technical college should be ex-officio director of technical and industrial schools. The Government of India in their letter of 30th September 1903 suggested towards the end that there should be an inspector of such half-time industrial schools as might be created; and in reply the Bengal Government in their letter of the 8th June 1904 proposed in connection with the weaving scheme described above, that there should be one expert inspector of weaving in Bengal, who should also be the principal of the Central Weaving School at Serampore This proposal, however, did not touch the matter of the inspection and control of technical and industrial schools in the province. The opinion of all observers had been that these schools were found wanting in methods, objects and in teachers. The rather heterogeneous collection of existing industrial schools was reviewed again in 1904, this time by Mr. Heaton, the Principal of Sibpur College and by Mr. Fedler, the Director of Public Instruction. Mr. Heaton's review was practically an indictment of the existing system. In November 1905, the Bengal Government considered that the industrial education which was under the Education Department should be placed under the Director of Agriculture, with the object of making enquiries, visiting industrial schools, collecting information and submitting proposals on the lines upon which industrial education should be developed. Much information was collated by Mr. Oldham, who was the Director of Agriculture at the time, in the course of his tours; but the advantage of this was lost when he left the department on transfer. This is another argument in favour of a whole-time officer in order to ensure continuity. At the end of 1906 the Bengal Government considered that in view of the increasing interest in the subject and the potential results of a sound system, a more effective agency should be created for the direction and supervision of technical and industrial education. It was held that a special officer was required for the province on the analogy of the appointments of an Inspector of Technical Schools in the Bombay Presidency and of a Director of Industrial and Technical Enquiries, who was also to be Inspector of Technical Schools in the Madras Presidency. The views of Mr. Heaton of Sibpur, who was consulted, were:—the maintenance of the paramountcy of Sibpur College; the appointment of the Principal of Sibpur as Superintendent of Industrial and Technical Education for the modern Bengal province, and the appointment of an inspecting officer under him, to be styled the Inspector of Industrial and Technical Education. In the opinion, however, of the Director of Public Instruction, Mr. Earle, what was required was a recruitment from England, preferably from one of the provincial technical colleges, of an officer who would be responsible for inspecting all technical and industrial institutions in the province, and who at the same time would promote the industrial development of the country by making investigations regarding the larger industries, especially the leather, glass and brass industries. Such an officer was to be styled Superintendent of Industries and Inspector of Technical and Industrial Institutions, and was to be attached for the present to the office of the Director of Public Instruction. This view was accepted by the Bengal Government, and the appointment was recommended to Government of India in August 1907. Two portions of the letter of the Bengal Government may be quoted here. "All branches of professional training should finally, in Mr. Earle's opinion, be under the guidance of a co-ordinating authority or department not connected in any way with education, but concerned with the industrial development of the country." The other was—"The present time is particularly favourable for the development of local industries. His Honour is convinced that only by means of the whole-time service of an expert officer can the present interest in the question be turned to practical and profitable account." In November 1907 the Government of India stated in reply that there were objections to the recruitment of such an officer from England, and suggested that certain conditions should be fulfilled before the proposal could be submitted to the Secretary of State. The matter is still (April 1908) under correspondence. I may place on record here that my enquiries have shown that in this province what the capitalists, who are anxious to embark on industrial enterprise, most desire is disinterested advice, and this can best be obtained from a Government officer who possesses scientific training, direct experience of the country, enthusiasm and business capacity and the primary object of whose appointment is to advise and assist such capitalists in industrial enterprise. If it be said that it is difficult to obtain an officer with the qualifications named, then the emoluments should be made sufficiently attractive. I hold strongly that one practical enthusiast who would inspire confidence is more required at this present juncture than any departmental scheme, in order to break down the dead wall of want of enterprise, absence of mutual trust and lack of business capacity, which are the real obstacles to indigenous industrial development in the province.

Proposed classes in industrial chemistry at Sibpur College.

Besides proposals under the heads of Weaving and Industrial Schools, the Bengal Government have considered within recent years the proposal for the teaching of chemistry as applied to manufactures. In 1905-1906, the Association for the Advancement of Scientific and Industrial Education of Indians submitted proposals for the establishment of a technical college in Bengal. The model held up for imitation was the Victoria Jubilee Institute in Bombay. This, it should be remembered, is not a Government but an aided institution. A conference under the presidentship of Mr. Oldham, C.S., who was then Director of Agriculture, was held to consider how far the existing College of Civil Engineering at Sibpur might be developed so as to include the departments which it was proposed should be opened. It was recognized that the college already dealt with subjects outside the scope of the title of the college, such as sanitary science, agricultural science, and mining. The subjects proposed for the new technical college were nine in number—mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, spinning and weaving, sheet metal and enamel work, industrial chemistry, dyeing and paints, ceramics, silk, mining and metallurgy. The first, second and ninth subjects were found to be already in the Sibpur curriculum. The third was to be taken up at the proposed weaving institute at Serampore, and the seventh was left to private enterprise. The proposals which Mr. Oldham submitted were:—

(1) that classes be opened, when the Engineering College is transferred from the site at Sibpur to Ranchi, in sheet metal, enamel and tinsmith's work and in industrial and technological chemistry in connection with dyeing, paint manufacture, leather work and assaying;

(2) that research work in lac be undertaken;

(3) that Government grants be offered to persons engaged in the glass industry, to proceed abroad for study, and that assistance be given to them in finding a market for their goods; and

(4) that the Bengal Silk Committee be consulted regarding the opening of a technical school in connection with the silk industry.

Now the college at Sibpur has not yet been removed to Ranchi, although it has been decided that this be done. In the meantime proposals for the tentative opening at Sibpur of classes in technological chemistry, and in dyeing and the chemistry of dyeing, coupled with the plan that instruction should be given in the scientific principles underlying the chief industries of the country, and that facilities be given in research work, were submitted to the Government of India in November 1906. This scheme has also been returned by the Government of India in December 1907, in this instance on the basis of the criticism of the Secretary of State that there was an absence of any information regarding the demand in India for men with the training which the proposed classes would afford. The subject is also still under discussion, but the following points, which have been suggested to me by competent observers, may be noted in connection with that criticism:—

(1) The whole trend at present is to indigenous industrial development; and it is of importance that those concerns should be started which are capable of being worked in small factories on a small capital.

(2) This scheme was the outcome of an appeal from representative Indian gentlemen.

(3) Similar classes have been started by private enterprise at the Bengal Technical Institute in Calcutta.

(4) Four batches of Indians have been sent abroad under the auspices of the association which submitted the appeal named above, and seventeen of them have taken up chemistry as applied to manufactures.

(5) Applications have been made to Sibpur College for chemists, who are required for manufacturing concerns.

The policy of the Bengal Government.

On the whole then the principle which underlies the action of the Bengal Government within the last twenty years is that technical education is to be improved by the increased scope and efficiency of central institutions,—a principle which the Bombay Government formally recognized in 1906 and which the Bengal Government announced in 1891. The Madras Government have formally adopted the policy, in Sir Arthur Lawley's words, "that Government should rather develop industries in the first instance precedent to the introduction of schools." Mr. Heaton of Sibpur pointed out in 1904 that the history of industrial schools in other countries shows that they follow the establishment of an industry, but they do not precede it. This too has been kept in view in the proposal which the Bengal Government have made in applying for wholetime expert officers to encourage industries. The Government of the Central Provinces have recently put in a plea for caution and circumspection. The Chief Commissioner, Mr. Craddock, has stated that the real requirement for the development of industries is not a system of teaching existing methods, but a system of teaching improved methods, after it has been ascertained what industries seem to be capable of improvement, to those who are likely to carry on these industries. This, I submit, is the principle underlying the proposal for the Central Weaving Institute at Serampore which, as has been stated above, has been accepted. The policy of the Government of the United Provinces is an advanced policy—the establishment of large central institutions officered by the best teaching talent which can be obtained. Sir John Hewett has stated that his personal inclination is in favour of the training of foremen in theory in the first instance, and afterwards in practical work in the factory and mill. This, it should be noted, is the principle of the organization at Sibpur.

Circumstances of the Bengal Province.

The circumstances of the provinces are not the same. The United Provinces have a natural protective barrier of seven to eight hundred miles of railway freight charges from the seaboard, which gives a bias in favour of manufacture as opposed to commerce. Madras again has very few indigenous manufactures of its own; and the action of its Government in pioneering industries is really not in competition with any existing local enterprise. And finally as regards Bengal, manufactures have generally to compete with imports. The principle accepted at the Simla conference applies especially here, namely, that the supply or development of the existing Indian markets, so far as this is likely to result from technical instruction, is of superior importance to the creation of new export trades.

CHAPTER II.

INSTITUTIONS FOR TECHNICAL INSTRUCTION.

Section I—Sibpur College and its Scheme of Affiliated Schools.

Standards of instruction.

An engineering college was established in Calcutta in the year 1856 by the Public Works Department with the object of training engineers and subordinates for their service. In 1864 it was placed under the charge of the Education Department and transferred to the Presidency College of which it became an important department. In 1880 the college was removed to the site of the old Bishop's College at Sibpur in Howrah district, where the Public Works Department were building large workshops, and it was there established as a civil engineering college.

There are two standards of education at the college:—

(1) Engineering standard for the training of engineers for the Public Works Department and other Government bodies.

(2) The lower or apprentice standard for training men to fill subordinate ranks of the Public Works Department and to carry out similar duties under public or private bodies.

Reason for the development.

It must be remembered that the manner in which the Sibpur College and its connected institutions were organised is due to the fact that it gave an opportunity to students of finding employment in the Public Works Department. The upper subordinate establishment of the Public Works Department contains overseers, supervisors and sub-engineers. These appointments range from Rs. 60 a month to Rs. 500 a month. The lower subordinate establishment are generally called sub-overseers. The pay does not exceed Rs. 40 a month. The overseer and sub-overseer standards may thus be understood with reference to the appointments bearing these names in the Public Works Department. The improvements in the subjects of instruction have already been detailed in the first chapter. The course of instruction for the engineering standard has always been maintained at a high level. Great prominence has been given to practical training in the workshops and in the science laboratories. The course extends over five years, in the last year of which the work is entirely practical. The standard of admission has been since 1892 that of the First Arts, and since 1895 many graduates have joined. The great attraction is the comparative certainty of subsequent official employment. Eight out of every ten students of the Engineer Department find employment under Government, and only one out of ten finds private employment. Mr. Heaton, the Principal, has remarked that this discloses in a startling manner the state of arrested industrial development in Bengal. It is proposed under the new regulations of the Calcutta University that the examination in engineering will take place at the end of the second instead of the third year of the course; and that thereafter the students will have a choice in three branches, namely, civil engineering, mechanical and electrical engineering, and mining.

The higher course.

Mr. Heaton has proposed to enlarge the scope of the Engineering Department by admitting special persons who have no desire for Government posts, but who desire a superior training in engineering. He thinks that on receiving first class instruction such students of the college will contribute largely to the commercial development of the province. During the fifth year of the course students are placed for their practical training, as far as possible, according to their choice, under the Public Works Department, under the Sanitary Engineer, on a selected railway or on a selected mine or at the college itself. The chief prize of the college is the appointment of an assistant engineer in the Public Works Department which is open for competition amongst those who were being sent under that department for training. There is also a demand by municipalities for those who have been trained under the sanitary engineer. The demand for qualified electricians is increasing, and coal mining requires men who combine practical with theoretical training.

The lower course.

The lower standard or apprentice standard consists of three stages:—the sub-overseer course for two years, the overseer course for one year and a half, and a course of practical training extending over another year and a half. An examination is held at the end of the sub-overseer course, and the successful candidate receives a certificate showing that he possesses the qualifications required for a sub-overseer in the Public Works Department. Success at the examination held at the end of the second stage entitles the student to a third grade overseer's certificate. After the completion of the course of practical training, an apprentice would be entitled to a certificate of foreman mechanic and sub-engineer or of a simple foreman mechanic according to the percentage of marks which he may obtain. The practical training throughout the course is considered by foreign critics to be the best that can be devised; and it is solely owing to the equipment of the Sibpur workshops that the practical instruction can be imparted. For the first year the student attends the carpentry shop; in the second, the smith-shop; in the third, the pattern-making and foundry shop; in the fourth year, the fitting shop. The fifth year is devoted to all-round practical training. During 1907 the numbers under training in these two departments were 94 in the Engineering Department and 233 in the Apprentice Department. It is a comment on the backwardness of the Muhammadan community that there were only five Muhammadans in these two departments.

Affiliated schools.

The affiliation of certain technical schools with Sibpur College has already been mentioned in the previous chapter. The following schools are at present affiliated:— Bihar School of Engineering, Victoria School, Kurseong, Ranchi Industrial School, all under Government; and the Burdwan and Midnapur Technical Schools under their respective District Boards. It is proposed to include also in the scheme the Orissa School of Engineering which is to be formed out of the Cuttack Survey School; and finally St. Andrews Colonial Homes, Kalimpong. It is intended by Mr. Heaton to re-organize the Apprentice Department also. There will be a junior apprentice class for the first two years, and thereafter a senior apprentice class, to whom he would offer a choice of taking specialised courses, namely, a civil engineering course, a mechanical and electrical engineering course, or a mining engineering course. The first course would be for the training of overseers for the Public Works Department, District Boards and municipalities. As has already been explained, it is open for students of the affiliated schools to appear for the sub-overseership examination at Sibpur, and if successful to proceed to the overseer class there. Pupils who would pass what is known as the B Final examination at certain district schools may enter the second-year class of the sub-overseer course at Sibpur. This scheme applies to the Patna Collegiate School in conjunction with the Bihar School of Engineering; the Ranchi Zilla School working with the Ranchi Industrial School; and the Midnapur Zilla School working with the Midnapur Technical School. Mr. Hornell in his quinquennial review of the progress of education in Bengal to 1907, states that the aim of these B classes is general in so far as their inauguration represents an attempt to give a more practical turn to school education; and that it is specialised in so far as these classes were deliberately intended to impart a preliminary training suitable for a specific profession; but that at any rate the B class experiment has hitherto proved a failure. Since the system was inaugurated, only one-third of the candidates has qualified in the final examination. The door was to be open here for the youth of the country who desire to prepare themselves for an industrial career. The misfortune is that at the present time both in the district schools and in the technical schools those enter who do not desire primarily a mechanical training but who wish a short cut (not being themselves sufficiently quick-witted for a literary career) to a qualification which will give them dignified service under some public body. It should be added that B classes were started at the Bhagalpur Zilla School in 1906, but there the mechanical appliances are of the most meagre description, and, although the applications for admission have become numerous, yet it is a curious fact that many pupils are coming from other districts where there are already opportunities for better technical instruction.

Sub-overseer classes.

B classes.

Joint examination board for the two Bengals.

It is not out of place to add here that it is practically settled that in future in order to maintain a uniform standard for sub-overseers and overseers and to take away every suspicion of unfairness, examinations will be held for the two provinces by a board representative of the Public Works Department in both provinces, of the Sibpur College and of the Engineering Schools of Dacca and Bihar. The Principal of Sibpur will be a permanent member and the secretary of this board.

Electrical training.

A special course for electrical training was started at Sibpur in 1906, and the development of this branch of instruction was due to an electric installation for motive power. About ten of the best apprentices who had passed the overseer course were placed for their special course of practical instruction at the college, where they were entrusted with the charge of the workshops and the electric light installation. It is stated that this training is prized because it leads to well-paid appointments.

Mining Engineering.

In 1904 the Government of India requested the Bengal Government to prepare a scheme for instruction in mining engineering. It was decided not to create a separate school of mining in the mining districts, but to make use of the existing facilities for giving the major part of the instruction at the Civil Engineering College. A mining class has now been formed. A student who has passed the sub-overseer standard may join the class for a specialised course of two years. Six weeks of each year are also to be spent in a mining district, in the study of mining surveying and in practical training. Diplomas are awarded. Under the Indian Mining Act of 1901 certificates of competency are required. The possession of the diploma in mining engineering can exempt the possessor with the permission of the Board of Examiners from a term of two years out of the period of five years' practical experience which is required for a first class certificate. In addition, under the auspices of the college, a scheme has been inaugurated for providing instruction in mining for assistants and others employed in the Bengal colliery districts; and a special Mining Advisory Board has been attached to the college. Since November 1906 there has been a regular course of instruction at the centres, Sanctoria and Charanpur in the Raniganj coal district, and Jherria and Sijua in the Jherria district. Both from the reports and from my personal enquiries I gather that the scheme has been most successful, and that local committees have been of great assistance in arranging sites and accommodation for the lectures.

This instruction in mining has required the addition of two expert Europeans to the staff, one for the professorship at Sibpur and the other for the instructorship in mining for the district lectures.

Motor driving.

An extension of the scheme is desirable. Continuation schools for teaching arithmetic, physics, chemistry and mechanics are recommended by the instructor, Mr. Griffiths, for Dhanbaid and Asansol, and also evening classes at Ekra, Raniganj, Kalipahari, Barakur and Jamuni.

A further development has been in the establishment of the training of motor-driver mechanics. The course of instruction includes both maintenance and driving. There is a great and increasing demand for competent mechanics who can drive. The beginning was made by taking over from the Public Works Department a second-hand car which had to be practically reconstructed.

It can therefore be maintained with justification that the Sibpur College curriculum has kept abreast of the requirements of the time, and that the principle laid down in the Government resolution of 1891 on Mr. Collin's report has been consistently followed, though not always consciously.

Section II.—Bihar School of Engineering and the Cuttack Survey School.

Origin and progress of the school for Bihar artisans.

The Bihar School of Engineering is a handsome building on semi-oriental lines, and with its hostels and workshops forms a striking block on the bank of the Ganges at Bankipore. In 1890 the Patna Survey School was transferred from the Patna College buildings to new premises made over to it by the committee of the Bihar Industrial School Fund, a fund which originated from the balance of the fund raised in Bihar in 1877 for the reception of the Prince of Wales, the present King. In 1893 the Principal obtained particulars of the occupation of more than half of the ex-students: they were found to be employed as overseers, sub-overseers, draftsmen, surveyors and survey teachers both in public and private employment. By 1894 the school was being gradually transformed into one in which all the instruction was given in English. In 1896 the Survey School was amalgamated with the Bihar Industrial School and the new institution at Bankipore was entitled the "Bihar School of Engineering." The course provided complete instruction for sub-overseers. The next improvements were the appointment of an European foreman mechanic for the workshops in 1899, and the appointment of a European head-master under the sanction of the Secretary of State in 1890. In the latter year the foundation for instruction up to the overseer standard was made. In 1904 a hostel was erected; and in the following year it was found that this had developed in a marked degree the corporate and social life amongst the students,—setting an example which many colleges in Bengal might follow with great advantage. The curriculum now follows the same ground as that covered by the four years' course of the Apprentice Department of the Sibpur College; and though it has not yet any formal arrangements for conducting the practical training which completes the Apprentice course at Sibpur, nevertheless Mr. Walford, the present Head-master, has been able to arrange for practical training under Executive and District Engineers in Bihar. There is also a one-year class for the training of Amins. The electric light plant has made it possible to give a practical training in electricians' work. Mr. Walford has informed me that the school has acquired a reputation in all Hindi-speaking districts and that enquiries come to him from some Native States and from the Central Provinces.

There has been on more than one occasion a request from the leading residents of Patna that the school be raised to the status of a college. I am not, however, sure that it is on their part quite understood or known what the establishment of a college would entail. The reply of the Bengal Government has been that for the present it is not possible to have more than one civil engineering college thoroughly equipped both in plant and establishment. The number of possible Bihari candidates for Sibpur is still too small to justify the extra staff and expenditure. The history of the school shows, however, a steady advancement, and it is natural that Biharis should desire the prestige which would attach to the establishment of a college. It is an undoubted fact that Biharis at present are unwilling to proceed to the central college at Sibpur situated as it is in a Bengali district. When the Sibpur College has been transferred to Ranchi, a district which has more in common with the Bihari districts, the unwillingness of the Biharis may possibly disappear. But at the same time it is quite feasible that a system of practical training for one year and a half may be formally organised, similar to that of Sibpur; and this is the first natural step in the future progress of the institution. In this way the institution would be able to give a certificate up to the foreman mechanic and sub-engineer standard. If it is possible to generalise, it would appear that the Biharis have a natural aptitude for practical engineering. Professor D. N. Mallik of the Patna College, who has recently visited technical institutions in England informs me that the Brighton Technical School in its technical branches furnishes an ideal to which the Bihar school should work up in time.

While we can record nothing but success and progress in the scheme for technical instruction at Bankipore, yet it must be admitted that the arrangements for training artisans have been an entire failure, just as at Sibpur, and that the B classes are nothing but a farce. I doubt very much whether it is sound to arrange at the same institution for the instruction of overseers who come from the middle class and for the instruction of artisans. I shall deal with this more fully in connection with the chapter on industrial schools.

School for the Orissa districts.

The Cuttack Survey School is the only school of its kind in the province. The curriculum includes surveying, road-making and smithwork, but not carpentry or science. Mr. Hornell has explained in his Quinquennial Review of the Progress of Education in Bengal, 1902-1907, that the school teaches up to the sub-overseer standard in the sense that students who pass the final examination are eligible for sub-overseerships in the Public Works Department, but that the school does not yet teach the full sub-overseer course. There is also a class for Amins. The proportion of Uriyas continue to be two out of three students. Practically no change has been made since 1890. The obvious form of advancement is to make use of the existing Canal workshops of the Public Works Department at Cuttack and to raise the instruction to the sub-overseer standard. It has been settled that this be done. The school will then be called the Orissa School of Engineering, and in all probability the supply will not be in excess of the demand for qualified subordinates in the Uriya-speaking tracts.

Section III.—Technical Schools.

Burdwan Technical School.

Burdwan. The Burdwan Technical School is administered by the District Board. The subjects taught are carpentry and smithery. The average attendance is 47; more than half are Brahmans and Kayasths, and more than half are boys from districts other than Burdwan district. The course is a sub-overseer course leading up to the overseer standard at Sibpur. During the last three years 25 pupils have been sent up, of whom 17 passed the sub-overseership examination. The workshops I found to be cramped. A local committee takes considerable interest in the school. While this school does not turn out men who are likely to be mechanical engineers, but men who desire to be sub-overseers or possibly overseers, it should nevertheless be continued in its present form as a feeder to Sibpur College, for the demand for well-trained sub-overseers and overseers is not likely to diminish. I advise the committee, however, to refrain from slackening the strictness of the standard of general education required from would-be students.

Midnapore-Maisadal Technical School.

Midnapore. This school teaches up to the sub-overseer standard. It is named after a well-known landed proprietor in Midnapore, who was a generous contributor to the fund by which the school was started about twenty years ago. In the first year of the sub-overseership course the work is carpentry, and the second, smithery. The head-master is a passed foreman mechanic from Sibpur. As at Burdwan practically all the pupils desire to go in for service. As at Burdwan the accommodation is scanty.

The pupils live in a hostel about quarter of a mile away from the school. What is required is more money and more organized management. In 1905 the condition of affairs was so bad that the Principal at Sibpur recommended that the privilege of affiliation should be withdrawn. A strong committee has, however, been since appointed in which are included the District Engineer, the Executive Engineer of the Public Works Department and the Chief Mechanical Engineer of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, the headquarters of which are at Kharagpur close to Midnapore. The school does not, and is not likely to, turn out men who will become practical mechanics. I recommend that on no account should a mistaken kindness be exercised in admitting students who have not passed the Entrance Examination. The system of apprenticeships for the Kharagpur Railway workshops gives an opening to any passed pupil who wishes to obtain practical and remunerative employment, but every applicant must remember that there is far more drudgery to be undergone in a commercial workshop than in the workshop attached to an academical institution. Government has made a grant of Rs. 5,000 for the erection of a new school building.

Bengal Technical Institute.

Calcutta. This institute was founded by a society called "The Society for the Promotion of Technical Education in Bengal" which was registered under Act XXI of 1860. It was started in August 1906 at 92 Upper Circular Road, where large workshops have been erected—mechanical workshops, smithery, electrical engineering shed, and a carpentry shed. There are also arrangements for teaching drawing, chemistry and dyeing. There are moderately well equipped physical laboratories. The institute was started under the revulsion which followed the partition of Bengal, but the system of instruction has fortunately been directed on sound lines. For funds the committee are principally indebted to Mr. Palit, Barrister-at-law, and have the advantage of the assistance of two master minds in the mechanical and educational world of Calcutta. All the courses have not yet been started. The secondary course, as it is called, is for three years, though, it is hoped, it will be extended to four years.

It is proposed to have courses in mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, sheet metalling, technological chemistry, commercial course and economic geology. This is an ambitious syllabus, but for the present complete arrangements have only been made in the mechanical engineering course. The governing body propose that the technological chemistry course will deal with the following subjects:—geology, ceramics, tanning, paint and varnish-making, dyeing and bleaching, soap, candle, oil and perfume-making, and the preparation of matches. On the engineering side the instruction will be similar to that given at Sibpur. But there is here an excellent opportunity for young men to become foreman mechanics in reality as well as in name, and to take advantage of the demand which the anticipated industrial activity will promote. The course for industrial chemistry is still in its infancy, but it has anticipated the proposals for the establishment of similar classes in Sibpur, which classes, I hope, may be the nucleus of a Government technical institute in Calcutta, after the engineering branches of Sibpur College have been removed to Ranchi. I advise the governing body of the Bengal technical institute to place it on a sound financial footing, and to insist that only those youths who have received a sound general education, should be allowed to join its classes. It is quite a mistake to think that only the dullards, who have no chance of success in the usual literary careers, should take up a specialised branch of technical study. John Stuart Mill said in 1866:—"Special knowledge is sought after only by a certain number of young men, and it is only when they have completed their education, properly so called, that they should be permitted to enter upon it. The good or bad use which they will make of each knowledge will depend chiefly on their mental character, and character can be formed only by general education."

Technical Department of the Bengal National College.

The Bengal National College has been inaugurated under the auspices of the National Council of Education, Bengal. It has been established at 166, Bowbazar Street since July 1907. It has a secondary technical course extending over three years. A workshop has been erected with machine plant to the value of Rs. 11,000. The syllabus includes a general course of instruction in physics, chemistry, mathematics, drawing, and a special course in machine drawing, mechanics, machinery tools, pattern making, brass modelling, smithery, turning and fitting. The proposed college course on the technical side, which is to follow, is proposed to be subdivided into (a) agriculture including forestry; (b) manufacture, including mining; and (c) commerce. The scheme of education has been thought out with a view to help the students in "finding new and independent careers in life in the departments of arts and industry." The instruction imparted is to be theoretical, experimental and manufactural. In January 1908 there was an exhibition of the articles turned out in the workshops and laboratories during the year 1907, and Professor Brühl from Sibpur was able to say that the articles were not only of solid construction, but that they showed in general that finish which is proper to all first class work, and that some of the models indicated the exercise of great care and patience. This institution like the Bengal Technical Institute was founded in a spirit of independence, and if that spirit will train up youths to aspire, not to seek dignified and somewhat leisurely careers, but to become capable foremen and masters in the indigenous industrial activity which may yet come in this province, the institution will serve a useful purpose. At the present moment, apart from the advice of Indian publicists, the better class youths have been forced, in spite of their traditional prejudices against manual labour, into industrial lines on account of the competition which has closed up the avenues hitherto open to them in literary careers. This institution is also making manual instruction in some form or other a part of a general liberal education, not necessarily with the intention that all the pupils should take to mechanical employment.

Calcutta Technical School.

In 1900 Mr. Finlay, the Chief Engineer of the East Indian Railway, with the assistance of some of the leading engineering firms, started a night school with continuation classes for giving instruction to apprentices who are working in large workshops in Howrah. As it was found that a large number of the apprentices lived in Calcutta, the site was changed to the Doveton College, Calcutta, where classes are held twice a week. The staff consists of three highly qualified European lecturers. The school is fulfilling a useful purpose, that is, supplementing daily practice by theoretical instruction. The accommodation is not suitable and the school is ill equipped with apparatus. If the institution were improved in these respects, for which improvement I have separately submitted recommendations, there should be no reason why a larger number of Indian apprentices should not take advantage of the school.

Railway Technical Institution.

This was started in 1908 at 83 Dhurrumtola, Calcutta, to provide a means for acquiring some practical training in the various methods employed in the actual working of railways. Practical training is to be given in telegraphy, signalling, goods and coaching. There is no other such private institution in Bengal. The school is well equipped for teaching practical signalling and practical telegraphy. It has already over twenty students—all natives of Bengal—in the telegraph class. A student can become adept in two months, working for six hours a day, at a fee of Rs. 10 a month. The school deserves encouragement, if it can show that its students are obtaining employment. It has been started on sound lines.

Victoria School, Kurseong.

Darjeeling District. A sub-overseer class for Europeans and Eurasians was opened in 1904 in connexion with the Victoria School, Kurseong, and is affiliated with the Sibpur College. Of the eleven students since sent up for the sub-overseership examination, seven have been successful.

St. Andrews' Colonial Homes, Kalimpong.

At the annual meeting in March 1903, it was announced that the affiliation with the Sibpur College had been sanctioned, and that the first batch of boys was now being prepared for the engineering curriculum.

Section IV.—Schools attached to Railway Workshops.

This may be considered as part of a system of continuation schools. In Chapter VIII of "Continuation Schools in England and elsewhere" edited by Professor Sadler of the University of Manchester and published at the University Press, 1907, there is a summary of the replies received from 16 railway companies and 56 other employers of labour in England regarding the facilities granted to their employees for the study of subjects dealing with their daily work. The system of requiring apprentices to attend technical schools is extending in England, and facilities in varying degrees are being given to that end. In 1890 Mr. Collin said that the apprentices at the Jamalpur workshops of the East Indian Railway were obliged to attend evening classes, not for technical instruction, but as a continuation of their general education. At that time there were no other railway night schools in the province. In 1908 we find that the technical night school at Jamalpur is giving instruction in technical subjects, such as steam-engine and machine construction, applied mechanics, algebra and mensuration. The average nightly attendance is 50. At the Kharagpur workshops of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, attendance for apprentices at the technical night school is compulsory. The subjects are geometry, applied mechanics, algebra, mensuration, geometrical drawing and arithmetic. At the Carriage and Wagon Workshops of the East Indian Railway at Lillooah, the technical school for apprentices gives instruction within working hours, one hour in the morning for two days a week. The subjects are arithmetic, algebra, mensuration, applied mechanics, linear drawing, projection and mechanical drawing. There is an attendance of 33 youths, of whom no fewer than 17 are Indian lads.

At the Kanchrapara workshops on the Eastern Bengal State Railway, there is no technical school or evening class, but it is proposed that on the completion of a hostel for apprentices, which is now under construction, a night school will be held for the apprentices. At Samastipur on the Bengal and North-Western Railway, there is no night school or other means of studying machine drawing or technical subjects. There is also no drawing office here, and so a machine foreman cannot obtain any training in drawing. While on the one hand it is too much to expect that commercial undertakings will supply an education in advance of their requirements, yet on the other hand it would appear to be in the interest of the employers themselves to give to their apprentices a knowledge of the theoretical principles which underly their practical work. This should be encouraged. The system at Lillooah is best, I think, namely, that instruction should be given within working hours, and not at night. These schools should teach theoretical work directly connected with practical work, and the minimum qualification in general education should be the Entrance Examination or its equivalent.

Section V.—Calcutta Government School of Art and other Art Schools.

Calcutta School of Art.

The School of Art was started in 1864 and until 1893, when the school was removed to the new building in the Chowringhee Road, it had been held in various houses in Bow Bazar which were in every way ill adapted for the purposes of a school of art. In 1890 it was recorded by Mr. Collin that the Calcutta School of Art had been established partly to develop the native industries, but that it had not accomplished much for industrial art. In 1891 the Bengal Government said that it was not too much to hope that, if duly supported and encouraged, the School of Art might do for Bengal all that South Kensington had done and was doing for industries, both manufacturing and artistic, in England. This ideal has not yet been reached. In 1894 Sir Alfred Croft, who was then the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, pointed to the popularity of the school and to the fact that there was a remunerative demand for the special skill which was then being developed in the subjects of drawing, designing, wood-engraving and modelling (Papers relating to Maintenance of Schools of Art in India as State Institutions, Home Department serial No. 23, 1898, page 81). Mr. A. N. Tagore, Officiating Principal of the Calcutta School of Art, in describing the progress from 1902 to 1907 considered that the School of Art had neither fulfilled the conditions of a truly industrial establishment, nor had it done much towards the improvement of the fine arts of the country. The disposal of all European pictures and the purchase of Indian art ware in 1904 marked a step towards the one ideal of forming a truly Indian art gallery; and the present intention to bring the Industrial Art section of the Indian Museum under the control of the Principal of the School of Art and the recommendation of the Conference of the Principals of Schools of Art in India held in 1905-06, to issue for the use of artisans pattern books containing typical and pure examples of traditional art are an advance towards the other ideal. At present the School of Art in Calcutta does nothing to affect indigenous industrial art outside of Calcutta: a closer touch with the best workmen in the province is required. I also think that the diploma in mechanical and architectural drawing should have a higher value than it now has with a view to remunerative employment.

The course of instruction is in two divisions:—one affording a systematic instruction in drawing and design for drawing and technical art teachers, draughtsmen, artisans, art workmen and designers for art industries; and the other for those who wish to study drawing, painting and modelling with a view to become painters or sculptors. The summary on pages 88 to 90 of Mr. Hornell's Progress of Education in Bengal, 1902-1907, gives as full a summary as is necessary to understand the present position of the school. The fault of indigenous art is the slavish imitation of conventional European patterns. The remedy is not altogether in the hands of Government.

Mr. Tagore assures me that he fully agrees as to the necessity of circulating good Indian examples in art designs—the view eloquently expressed by Lord Curzon at the opening of the Art Exhibition of Delhi in 1903: "Indian art will never be revived by borrowing from foreign ideals, but only by fidelity to its own."

Private Schools.

There are three private art schools in Calcutta—the Albert Temple of Science started in 1875, the Indian Art School in 1895, and Jubilee Art Academy in 1897. The details will be found in appendix II. None of these is aided by Government. They teach drawing, painting, engraving and modelling and kindred subjects, but they turn out principally artists in painting. At the first named school I found European casts, European drawing books and European designs for painting. The managers of this school are strongly representative of the swadeshi movement. I have pointed out this inconsistency to the Principal of the school.

CHAPTER III.

INSTITUTIONS FOR INDUSTRIAL INSTRUCTION.

Existing defects and lines of improvement.

Details regarding all the technical and industrial institutions in the province will be found in appendix II. I deal below with various types of industrial schools—in the sense of schools for the instruction of would-be artisans, most of which I have visited. Mr. Hornell has given a short account of these schools at page 109 of the Bengal Quinquennial Review, but this is based principally on departmental reports In 1890-91 there were in the two Bengals 15 industrial institutions with 580 pupils and after ten years in 1900-01 there were 27 such institutions, with 887 pupils. In 1906-07 there were in the Western Bengal Province 1,275 pupils in 52 institutions of which more than half are in the Chota Nagpur Division; many of them have practically no effect on industrial development, and the people themselves do very little without assistance. So industrial education is yet in its infancy. The arguments in favour of a whole-time officer for the promotion of industries and industrial education cannot be better expressed than in the words of Mr. Hornell, at page 111 of his Review, which I reproduce in full.

"There is still apparent that lack of definiteness, both of methods and objects, that want of co-ordination with local industries or trades, and that uncertainty of initiative and support which will always prevail so long as the schools have to depend upon the volition of local bodies rather than upon any sustained policy of Government. Moreover, in the face of the great preponderance of classes teaching carpentry and smithy work it is difficult to resist the conclusion arrived at by Sir Edward Buck as regards technical and industrial schools in India, viz., that their object appears to be to teach these subjects to boys who have no intention to become carpenters or to engage in any manual occupation whatever. It is not maintained that there are no industrial schools at which sound work is being done. It must, however, be admitted that the effect of the existing schools on the industrial development of the province is practically negligible.

"The reason for this want of progress is not far to seek. A system of industrial schools co-ordinated to the trades and industries of the province can never be created except on the initiative of a department or at least an officer whose business it is to study those industries. If any real and steady progress is to be made, there must be at least one officer possessed of the required capacity who, while it will be his business to be generally acquainted with the larger industries of the province, will be available to conduct special investigations into the conditions of any particular industry which either he or others may think it desirable to develop by some such scheme as that proposed at Serampore. Such an appointment has recently been proposed to Government, and it has been suggested that the officer to be recruited should be styled "Superintendent of Industries and Inspector of Technical and Industrial Institutions." It is recognized that industrial development, even in that aspect of it which is called industrial education, lies outside the proper scope of the Education Department, and even though it is proposed that the officer whose recruitment has been suggested should, to start with, work in connection with the Education Department, it is not considered that this is desirable as a permanent arrangement. On the contrary it is hoped that this appointment will lead in time to the creation of a Department of Industry to the control of which all technical and industrial institutions will be transferred."

Section I.—Managed by Government.

Mr. Collin on page 21 of the 1890 report made suggestions for industrial schools. He made suggestions for Ranchi, Burdwan and Midnapore; and for Rajshahi and Chittagong, now in the Eastern Province. At Ranchi there was a private Missionary school started in 1870. It was reorganized in 1890-91, and taken over by Government in 1894. Had the school not arisen in this way, Ranchi would have been the most unpromising centre for Government to institute an industrial school; for until lately it was remote from all industrial centres. This school has a certain amount of antique machine plant, sent from Sibpur in 1901; it has also a carpenter's shop; and the course includes cane-work and carriage painting. The instruction given here is for sub-overseers, the B classes and for artisans. The sub-overseer class should disappear when the Engineering College is removed from Sibpur to Ranchi. The B classes for the same reason should disappear: for the object of the B class is to provide an easy up gradient to the Sibpur curriculum. Strangers came to Ranchi attracted by easy conditions and a good climate. The artisan classes are for blacksmithery, carpentry, cane-work and carriage painting. Instruction is also given in reading, writing and arithmetic. The Munda boys who fill the school are, I am informed, relaxing their traditional repugnance to metal work. There are now practical engineers on the committee, representing the District, the Public Works Department and the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, and I trust that the artisan classes, which represent 60 out of 82 pupils, will be strongly developed. In fact, the school should be primarily an industrial school. A good fitter on Rs. 70 is required for the blacksmith's shop. More room for the teaching of carpentry is required. Mensuration and mechanical drawing should be taught to all boys. Every endeavour should be made to link up the industrial school with the Bengal-Nagpur Railway workshops at Kharagpur and Adra, and to give the boys opportunities for remunerative employment. The school must also act as a Normal training school for supplying teachers to the local industrial schools in the Chota Nagpur Division In 1906-07 six from the carpenter's department, and one from the blacksmith's department passed the qualifying test, and are now earning a livelihood in Ranchi district. There is a further opening in the training of the boys as motor-car mistris. There is, and will be a local demand for youths who, while not fully trained mechanics, have the qualification of a "cleaner" in a locomotive running shed. This is the principle followed by Mr. Chatterton in Madras in training youths for the maintenance of the oil-engines which he is distributing throughout that Presidency.

The artisan classes at Bankipore and Sibpur come under this head. They are a failure at Bankipore, and declining at Sibpur.

Section II.—Industrial Schools connected with Commercial Workshops.

The best school in the province is that of Beniadih attached to the workshops of the East Indian Railway Company's collieries at Giridih. Formerly the lower primary standard was the qualification for admission, but this is being raised to the upper primary standard. The Company are primarily concerned with recruiting youngsters who will in time become competent journeymen on the railway staff. The boys from the beginning receive a wage of some kind. A Government grant was allotted; but it was not enough to obtain the stamp of teacher required. A teacher has now been obtained from the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute in Bombay. He teaches drawing and mensuration. Since 1904-05, no English has been taught. For three-fourths of the working hours of the day, the boys have practical training in the workshop under European supervision. In school hours they receive instruction in simple mechanics from one of the Assistant Managers. The school is visited by educational officers: the remarks of Mr. Stark, the Inspector of Schools, are encouraging and friendly, but the Sub-Inspector and Deputy Inspector do not appear to realize that the class for instruction is an appanage of the workshop; and thus they misapprehend the object in view.

At Samastipur an artisan primary school has been started by the District Board of Darbhanga in conjunction with the Locomotive workshops of the Bengal and North-Western Railway. Here the case is different. The pupils are outside boys of artisan castes who attend a primary school, and who receive practical instruction for half the day in the workshop. It is an approximation to the kind of school suggested in the Government of India letter of 30th September 1903:—(1) "Keeping up and developing a boy's inherited manual skill; (2) giving him a general education which will enlarge his prospects as a craftsman, while preventing him from falling in a clerical groove"; but the practical work was proposed to be "working for half the day; as registered and supervised apprentices under approved artisans." This school is not, however, quite satisfactory; and will not be satisfactory as long as the primary education is considered the more important. A competent teacher is required.

More than thirty years ago at the Dehri-on-Sone Canal workshops, a class for instruction for the young employees was started by the Superintendent; but in time the original idea that it was to be subordinate to the workshop was overlooked. There is a village school now, but it is a regular school under the Educational Department.

I hold strongly that as far as possible industrial education should be given in a commercial atmosphere: that where the school is in commercial surroundings, competent teachers are usually available and a future livelihood for the artisan is open; and that in Bengal more practical effect should be given to the counsels in the Government of India letter of 1903, paragraph 10, which affirms that where there are organization and capital, there must also be the intelligence to appreciate the value of properly trained workers. But this, as will appear from the context, was intended rather for the training of the foreman than for the training of the journeyman.

The State Railway and Canal workshops provide an opportunity for the training of the would-be journeyman. I shall enlarge on this later.

Section III.—Industrial Schools in connection with Missions.

Much good industrial work is being done in the Missionary industrial schools. They have the advantage of European control, usually enthusiastic and frequently practical. Yet even in these schools the fact is not kept sufficiently in view that the teaching which is given is meant to enable the pupils to earn a livelihood, and that the test of their efficiency is whether old pupils are actually earning their livelihood at the craft which has been taught to them. I give short notes on some of the schools.

London Mission Society at Kaurapukkur, 24-Parganas District.—Carpentry and carpet making are taught; but rather as a training for hand and eye than as a form of industrial education. There is, moreover, no local demand for either craft. The teacher in carpentry is a skilled artisan from a Calcutta shop.

Oxford Mission at Ballyganj, Calcutta.—The system is to give manual instruction to all boys up to twelve years of age. Above that age the less clever boys stick to the industrial classes. It is unfortunate that only one in five continues in industrial work after leaving the school; half of the boys who leave go back to cultivation. Still the fault is not with the teaching which is good. Carpentry, carving and viceman's work are taught. There is a good demand for the carpentry.

Church Missionary Society at Hatchapra, Nadia District.—This was started under a mechanical genius, Mr. Blackburn, and continued under Mr. Kamcke. The school has now an engine and some sawing and planing plant. The teaching is good and sound, the intention being that the boys shall earn their living in industrial lines. The school has the local advantage that it is linked up with the Eastern Bengal State Railway workshops at Kanchrapara, and the Nadia District Board helps with scholarships some pupils who go there.

Wesleyan Mission at Bankura, Bankura District.—An attempt is made to attract some of the clever boys away from the literary side. Carpentry, cane-work and boot-making are taught. The carpentry is good. Seven boys have obtained employment in the Adra work-shops of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway. I have suggested that there should be a hostel for the boys either at the Kharagpur or the Adra workshops.

American Free Baptist Mission at Balasore and at Santipur, Balasore District.—The work at Balasore is sound: the boys are taught to be artisans, in carpentry, book-binding and shoe-making and the like. The school deserves some Government assistance.

The school at Santipur is doing good work in weaving, carpentry, mat-making and rope-making: it is subsidised by Government.

Society for the Propagation of the Gospel Mission School at Chaibassa, Singhbhum District.—The Mission has put considerable stress on industrial teaching; and much good work in carpentry has been turned out. Instruction is also given in carving, in stone-work and in weaving.

SECTION IV.—INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS CONNECTED WITH AND AIDED BY DISTRICT BOARDS.

Khulna District.—The Coronation Technical School is the result of a compromise between the views of those who wished instruction to be given in survey to youths of the middle class, and those who wished instruction to be given to the sons of artisans. There is an Amin class for the former, and instruction in carpentry for the latter. This is a good type of an artisan school, but the boys should be taught to understand and make simple sketches, and work from plans. B classes have lately been started here; but I see no good in them.

Saran District.—There are three Dome schools, but these are not very efficient. They are special schools started for the purpose of keeping Dome boys out of mischief, rather than with the hope of teaching them remunerative employment. If it were possible, better teachers should be obtained.

Hazaribagh District.—Through the efforts of Mr. Radice, the Deputy Commissioner, 18 half-primary, half-industrial schools have been started on the lines of the Indian Government proposals of 1903. The scheme is to start a class of practical instruction under a competent artisan in conjunction with a primary school, the teacher in which is expected to teach geometrical drawing in addition to the three R's. The subjects of practical instruction are smithery, carpentry, weaving and pottery. A beginning has been made, but much has still to be done. Mr. Radice would be the first to admit that all the schools are not equally successful. Everything depends on the teachers. If he is above the average, and boys will attend both the primary school and his practical school, the boys will improve as craftsmen. But as the schools are subsidised by the District Board, there is every temptation for pupils to join who desire only the general education; and I found at one school well-dressed sons of Baniyas who had no industrial ambitions at all. On the other hand at Palawal, I saw that the teacher was teaching practical work. It should be borne in mind that the conditions laid down by Government in 1903 were:—(1) only artisans should be admitted; (2) the education should not fit the pupil for clerical employment; (3) scholarships for pupils should be given, and (4) an efficient Inspector should be appointed. In Hazaribagh there is a Special Sub-Inspector, but he has not sufficient technical knowledge. A praise-worthy attempt, however, has been made to start the half-time industrial school. But if this is to be continued, there must be better teachers. The Ranchi Government School should be able to provide some. And there must be a more capable Sub-Inspector. And only artisans' sons should be admitted. There is an increased demand in the Chota Nagpur area for skilled craftsmen, and each of these schools which is successful, helps a little in the rural tracts.

Ranchi District.—There were schools at Bandu, Patuahata and Basounda. The teaching at the last two was inferior, and the District Board proposed to close them. The school at Bandu had an intelligent and qualified artisan. The monthly grant for Bandu was Rs. 19-8; so it depends on the teacher.

Manbhum District.—At Jhalda I saw probably one of the best of these half-time industrial schools. The teacher was competent: the boys were all artisans; one who had left had started for himself as a blacksmith. But only six out of the sixteen were attending also the primary school. The weaving institution at Raghunathpur near Adra had become a farce, and I have endeavoured with the help of Mr. Watson, the Deputy Commissioner, to have it placed on a commercial basis.

Burdwan District.—There is nominally an artisan class at the Burdwan Technical School; but there are no pupils.

Midnapore District.—The artisan class at the Midnapore Technical School could boast of only one pupil.

Section V.—Private schools, aided and unaided.

The Muhammadan Orphanage Industrial School in Calcutta is a type which deserves encouragement. The boys really learn and the teachers are competent: the subjects are tailoring, embroidery, carpet-making, press work and lithography. I would ask that more trouble be taken to keep an exact record of all the boys after they leave the school. On the other hand the Anjumani-Rafiq-ul-Islam Industrial School in Calcutta is not working on sound lines. It is rather a denominational school, with a little sewing and watch-repairing thrown in. I have appealed to those responsible to remember that the boys have to earn their livelihood by what they learn there and that the instruction should be real, not make-believe.

The Lab Chand Matichand Jain Literary and Technical School is the result of a pious foundation, the object of which is to give both a literary education and a training in "practical arts relating to the manufacture of jewellery as well as industrial and technical arts". This has now 80 boys, although it started only in August 1907. I have advised the management to give two-thirds of the instruction to practical training and one-third to literary training, instead of one hour of practical instruction out of five and a half hour's attendance—a proportion which can hardly entitle the school to be called an industrial one: to use standard drawing books, and to insist on the accuracy of the mechanical drawing.

The Fakharpur Carpentry School in Gaya District and the Alalpur Industrial School in Balasore District are two instances of spontaneous industrial training. The former has a competent teacher, but he does not teach properly. In the latter case, the founder is an Uriya gentleman with a practical turn of mind, who has raised the standard of craftsmanship in his neighbourhood. Such schools need guidance, and deserve pecuniary encouragement.

Section VI.—Industrial Schools for Women.

There is a school called the Mahila Shilpasram in Calcutta; and there are the schools under Missionary guidance for lace work at Ranchi, Khunti, Chaibassa and Kalimpong. These are considered under the heading of this industry in Part II of the Special Report. These lace schools appear to be likely to provide remunerative employment, and are capable of much development under the lace experts, who have been imported by the Missions, provided the disposal of the product is effected on commercial lines.

Section VII.—Reformatory Schools.

The Reformatory Schools at Hazaribagh and Ranchi have been treated since 1900 as educational institutions, and crafts are taught which the boys may follow up when they reach the statutory age for their detention. The following table gives the numbers under instruction at the two schools.

	Alipore.	Hazaribagh.
Blacksmithy	13	7
Bookbinding	18	...
Cane-work	13	...
Carpentry	50	15
Painting	9	...
Printing	22	...
Shoe-making	3	7
Tailoring	16	5
Tin-work	9	...
Weaving		13

It is interesting to know what becomes of the boys after they leave the Reformatories. From the figures which have been collected for the past three years, we learn that of the boys who received instruction in trades, 22 per cent. from Alipore and 25 per cent. from Hazaribagh adhere to these trades for their livelihood after their release.

CHAPTER IV.

SYSTEMS OF APPRENTICESHIP.

Apprenticeships in railway and other workshops.

Mr. Collin pointed out in paragraph 58 of his Report that whereas a number of handicraftsmen of all sorts was being trained in railway workshops, mills and private firms in Calcutta, yet this training did not reach the educated classes in India, who are required as supervisors and foremen; and that the latter were in most cases imported. In paragraph 61 he further pointed out that proprietors were alive to the advantages of having a local supply of trained youths ready to take the place of foremen, but that they preferred the imported Europeans. I gather that the opinions of employers are now not so rigid, and that the educated youths are now showing a willingness to join as apprentices if they had the opportunities. A youth of good family and good education has informed me that he was willing to indenture himself with Messrs. Burn & Co, but that his guardians disallowed his request. On the other hand I recommended another youth of similar qualifications who seemed to have an aptitude for mechanics to join the motor workshops of Messrs. Kilburn & Co., and he is now earning as a mechanic in private employment five times as much as he would have earned in the clerical line in which I found him. The Superintendent of the East Indian Railway Locomotive Workshop at Jamalpore, Mr. Tomyns Browne, informs me that he is in favour of indentured apprentices and that he would like to see that Government should insist, wherever it was able to do so, that workshops should entertain at least a certain fixed percentage of indentured apprentices to their entire mechanical staff. In the Carriage and Wagon Department of the East Indian Railway at Lillooah I found that out of the 33 apprentices in the workshops, 17 were young Bengalis, nearly all of whom were Brahmins, and some of whom were sons of professional men. The Superintendent, Mr. Danby, is taking a great interest in them, by periodical examinations to test progress and otherwise. His rules of 24th September 1907 should be studied by parents and guardians. The Entrance Examination is the minimum qualification. The Chief Mechanical Engineer of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, Mr. A. S. Bailey informs me that the Company is ready to engage Indian apprentices. Under the Bengal-Nagpur Railway system the legal guardian of the apprentice is expected to execute an agreement of indemnity in case the apprentice in any way misconducts himself or leaves its service without permission. The Eastern Bengal State Railway issued in 1907 rules for the appointments of literate Indian apprentices. The minimum qualification is the second class of a higher English school, but preference, it was stated, would be given to those who possess higher educational qualifications. The Superintendent of the Samastipur Workshop of the Bengal and North-Western Railway informs me that he is unable to recruit Indians as apprentices, although he has frequently tried to persuade the youths of the middle class to take up mechanical engineering as a profession. Mr. Collin also proposed that each of the Railway workshops should take in a number of apprentices, and I repeat this recommendation for all the workshops over which Government has any control. At present the Calcutta Technical School gives theoretical instruction to a number of apprentices working with Messrs. Burn & Co., Jessop & Co., and others. And attendance at this night school is one of the conditions of apprenticeship in the case of certain Calcutta firms. The Bengal-Nagpur Railway Company and the East Indian Railway Company also insist on attendance at their night schools as one of the conditions of apprenticeship. Mr. Collin stated in his paragraph 59 that private firms did not hold a favourable opinion of the passed students of the Sibpur Engineering College as mechanical engineers. The same unfavourable opinion I find still exists, but the training in mechanical engineering at the college has advanced considerably within the last 18 years, and it is possible that the attitude of the students themselves to mechanical engineering as a profession is altering. But even so the practical training which can be given in a commercial workshop must be superior to that given in an academical institution in the case of those who desire to be master mechanics. I can only urge that guardians or others should allow and encourage young men of the country to make use of the opportunities which even now exist for apprenticeship in mechanical engineering.

CHAPTER V.

TECHNICAL SCHOLARSHIPS.

SECTION I.—STATE SCHOLARSHIPS.

Proposals of 1901.

PROPOSALS for the institution of State technical scholarships was one of the results of the Simla Educational Conference of 1901. It was proposed that selected candidates should be sent abroad to undertake definite courses of studies in subjects connected with industrial science and research, and that an allowance of one hundred pounds a year in addition to travelling expenses and fees should be granted for two years on an average. The Government of India proposed that two such scholarships should be allotted to Bengal. Local Governments were to be asked to consider what industries were of importance and which should be best encouraged by scholarships, particularly such industries in which native capital and native enterprise were likely to be engaged. It was added that it should be borne in mind that men who have received an expensive European training could be employed only upon such industries as were susceptible of being organized upon a considerable scale. The principles of the scheme met with the approval of the Secretary of State, and the proposed amount of the scholarship was subsequently fixed at one hundred and fifty pounds a year. It was suggested to the Government of Bengal that the mining industry would find a favourable field for the initiation of the experiment. The scheme was put in force in 1904, and eleven State scholars in mining engineering were selected in that year and in the three subsequent years, and sent to Birmingham in England. Of these three have returned: Mr. H. C. Read is Manager of the Bhaskajari Colliery; Mr. S. C. De is unemployed as, for an apparent technical reason, he has not yet obtained an Indian certificate of competency; and Mr. P. K. Mazumdar joined the bar and gave up mining engineering, whereby the object of his selection by Government was nullified. At the end of 1907 it was determined to offer from 1908 and onwards one scholarship annually to each province. In calling for applications the principles summarised below were enunciated:—

Rules for future selection.

(a) That the students must have a competent knowledge of English or of the language of the country to which they may be sent.

(b) That Government will also be guided by considerations of the capacity and intelligence of applicants and of the practical interest shown by them in the industries selected, as also of the assurance which they may afford that they will continue to devote themselves to the industries selected on their return in India.

(c) That a scholar before being nominated should have received the best technical education available in the province in the particular industry which he proposes to study.

(d) That no age-limit would be fixed for the present.

The representatives of the mercantile and industrial communities were consulted as to the industry which should be primarily encouraged. The Government of Bengal decided in accordance with the opinion of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce that for the present at any rate the coal mining industry should be encouraged and after that the manufacture of leather. The 1908 scholarship has been allotted for the former, and an extra scholarship has been given for the latter industry. The opinions of those consulted varied considerably and included suggestions for the encouragement of power-loom weaving, sheet metal work, mechanical engineering, glass manufacture, chemical industries, paper and match manufacture. The letter of the Government of India of the 9th October 1902, presents a full consideration of the principles to be followed in the grant of such State technical scholarships and should be perused by those who think that Government is not doing enough in this direction.

The difficulty which Government have had in selecting candidates may be judged from the criticism of Mr. Chatterton, the Director of Technical Enquiries in Madras who stated that he had to reject all the applicants in 1905, because they were not in the least fitted to receive technical education. Most, he said, were carried away with the impression that they could spend a period of two years in an English country at the expense of Government on a stipend of a hundred and fifty pounds a year.

It is interesting in this connection to see what has been done in other provinces; for the current year 1908, the subjects selected have been:—

Madras	...	...	...	Textile chemistry.
Punjab	...	...	...	Textiles.
Bombay	...	...	...	(1) Chemistry of bleaching, dyeing and printing. (2) Mechanical and electrical engineering.

Section II.—Private Scholarships.

Schemes in Madras, Bombay and Bihar.

Within the last three years there has been a movement in all the provinces to enable students to proceed abroad to receive practical training in various industries. The National Fund and Industrial Association of Madras sent students to Japan for training in soap-making, match-making and other industries. In Bombay in the present year an Association called the Indian Industrial Development Scheme has been registered under Act XXI of 1860, for the purpose amongst others of sending Indian youths of promise abroad to complete their industrial training. In Bihar an association for the educational and industrial advancement of the Biharis is in process of formation, one of the objects of which, it is understood, will be the provision of increased facilities to the youths of Bihar for receiving technical education in foreign countries, as well as in India; but nothing tangible has been done yet.

Scheme of the Scientific Association in Bengal.

The most ambitious scheme has, however, been launched in the province of Bengal. In 1904 the association entitled the Association for the Advancement of Scientific and Industrial Education of Indians was established. It receives pecuniary support from a large number of the leading men in Bengal, and is not without European subscribers. Under the articles of constitution one of the primary objects was to raise funds for the purpose of enabling properly qualified students to visit Europe, America, Japan and other countries for studying arts and industries. The association have sent abroad 16 students in 1905, and 40 in 1906. In 1907, 96 were selected and 79 in 1908. Scholarships were not given in all cases; in some cases the passage money and fees only. The following is an analysis of the subjects of study in the case of 82 who have proceeded abroad:—

Applied chemistry	5
Mechanical engineering	12
Pharmacy	2
Dyeing	4
Leather tanning	7
Agriculture	12
Ceramics	2
Cotton weaving	4
Hosiery	1
Sericulture	5

This variety of selection is interesting, as it shows the industries which Indian opinion thinks can be capable of local development.

Present employment of former stipend-holders.

It is also interesting to study the subsequent histories of the fifteen stipend-holders who have returned to India:—

Mr. K. C. Nandi, B.A., B.E., studied electrical engineering under Messrs. Telford, Grier and Mackay in England. It is unfortunate that he has not been able to put his special training to any account as he is now the District Engineer of Bogra.

Mr. G. C. Sen, M.A., B.L., F.C.S., returned after a training in dyeing in Leeds and in Germany. He proposed to work with a new joint-stock firm called the Bengal Dye Works, Limited, with a capital of one lakh. It was proposed to use up-to-date methods, employing indigenous materials. But the negotiations fell through, as some members of the syndicate wished to work the dye works as a branch of the Bengal Lakshmi Cotton Mills. This is unfortunate, as the commercial prospects of indigenous manufacture of dyed materials seem to be very hopeful. Mr. G. C. Sen is still without employment.

Mr. B. A. Taher, B.A., studied leather tanning and manufacturing in America. He has been appointed under the Boot and Equipment Company at Agra in the United Provinces. This took over the old Steuart Factory at Agra. Most of the Directors are connected with Bengal.

Mr. I. B. D. Mazumdar, B.A., M.SC., after studying agriculture at Cornell University has been appointed Agricultural Director of the Cooch Behar State.

Mr. M. C. Roy studied sericulture in Japan and is seeking for employment.

Mr. M. M. Chuckerbutty also studied sericulture in Japan and is seeking for employment.

Mr. A. P Ghose and Mr. P. C. Roy studied the manufacture of matches in Japan and are at present employed in the Bande Mataram Match Factory, of 38 Russa Road, Calcutta, which is financed chiefly by Dr. Rash Behari Ghosh Kumar Amindra Narayan studied pencil making in Japan, and is now employed at Bimlipatam near Vizagapatam in the Madras Presidency.

Mr. J. P. Bose studied the manufacture of printing ink in Japan, and is now employed in Calcutta.

Mr. N. Mazumdar studied candle manufacture in Japan, and is now managing a candle factory in Dinajpur.

Mr. M. C. Sen studied button manufacture in Japan, but is no yet employed.

Mr. A. Mitter studied pencil manufacture in Japan, and proposes to start for himself.

Mr. J. K. Das Gupta, B.SC., M. I. C. E., studied mechanical engineering in Scotland, but is not yet employed.

Mr. S. Deb studied ceramics at Tokyo in Japan, and is now working as Works Manager of the Calcutta Porcelain Works, 45 Tangra Road, Calcutta.

The Association has on the whole reason to congratulate itself on these results. The Pioneer in reference to it has said that when sradeshi, divorced from recrimination and violence, spells sympathy and cooperation, it is one of the fairest flowers of Indian growth. It is essential, however, that stipend-holders should obtain genuine industrial employment on their return, each in his own special subject. The criticism has been made to me by competent observers that, as most of the stipend-holders have no large private means of their own, the scholarships should be larger and the funds available distributed amongst a smaller number. It is to be noted that of the 79 candidates selected for the present year, no fewer than 44 come from the Eastern Province. I think that the Association would be well advised in demanding that those who proceed to specialise should have a sound general education and that their knowledge of English should be more than passable.

Advantages and dangers.

The Association may well hope that the experience of the great Indian chemist, Dr. P. C. Roy, during a visit to Europe may not be repeated. He has stated that out of 250 Indians whom he met in England not a single one was devoting himself to the sciences or the technical arts. There is one incidental advantage which students who study abroad derive, and that is that the self-reliance and business habits which they are likely to acquire by their sojourn will stand them in good stead when they have to enter commercial life on their return to India. On the other hand, there is disquieting information regarding the pernicious influences to which Indian students are subjected, both in England and in America.

Scheme of the Guruprasanna Ghose scholarships.

The other important private scholarships in Bengal are those to be maintained out of the Guruprasanna Ghose's legacy of two and-a-half lakhs which was announced at the Convocation of the Calcutta University in March 1908. The scheme that has been approved is that each scholarship should be tenable for three years, that one selection should be made annually, and that the annual value be two thousand rupees in Europe or America and one thousand rupees in Japan. Preference is to be given to Hindus. No particular industry has been prescribed, but each candidate is to set forth in detail the institution in which he proposes to study as also the particular branch of agriculture or the arts, science and industry of Europe, America or the East in which he desires to specialise.

District Board scholarships.

The total annual expenditure in the whole province by District Boards and Municipalities on scholarships in technical and industrial schools is less than Rs. 5,000—Rs. 177 from Municipalities and Rs. 4,794 from District Boards. The Nadia District Board assist some pupils of Hât Chapra School at the Kanchrapara workshops. The Jessore District Board gives scholarships tenable at the Apprentice Department, Sibpur, and at the Technical School, Khulna. The Burdwan Raj gives stipends tenable at the Burdwan Technical School. At the Bihar School of Engineering are scholarships granted by the Bihar District Boards—Patna, seven of Rs. 5; Gaya, two of Rs. 7; Shahabad, four of Rs. 5; Saran, eight of Rs. 7; Champaran and Muzaffarpur, two of Rs. 5; and Darbhanga, two of Rs. 10. Patna Municipality gives also two of Rs. 5. The District Board of Ranchi gives scholarships at the Ranchi Industrial School, at the Sibpur College and at the Kalimpong Lace School. The District Board of Cuttack gives a scholarship of Rs. 30 at Sibpur College, and one of Rs. 10 at the Calcutta School of Art.

CHAPTER VI.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

Progressive expenditure.

INDIVIDUAL institutions have been considered; it now remains to sum up for the province. The distinction between technical and industrial institutions though possibly considered one of convention, should be retained. I first show statistics of the annual expenditure at different periods from which it will appear that the outlay on specialised education has been greater than is generally supposed.

Changes in general education.

Now Government can, in the words of the Government of India resolution of the 28th June 1888, support technical education as an extension of general education it can also promote and countenance technical education of a special character. For the former object, the compulsory teaching of drawing was introduced in Bengal in 1891 and 1901; and besides the University of Calcutta will have from 1909 for science students an Intermediate Science Examination corresponding to the First Examination in Arts, which has been divided into an Intermediate Examination in Arts and an Intermediate Examination in Science. Chapter XXVII of the Regulations of the University and section 21 of the Indian Universities Act show what measures have been taken to promote the improvement of the opportunities for practical study in chemistry and physics. As for education of a special character, it has been shown that the policy from 1891 has chiefly been to maintain the efficiency of the central institutions; the Engineering College and the School of Art. Let us see first what are the requirements of the province.

The requirements of Bengal.

Men are required: (1) as managers, engineers, subordinates, draftsmen, surveyors, mechanics, estimators in the various forms of engineering—civil, mechanical, electrical and mining engineering—in Government and private employment. Men are also required: (2) as foreman overseers and managers in organized industries in Bengal, such as matches, soap, leather, etc, financed by the small capitalist. Now from the large literature—English, American and European—on the subject, I find that the leading principle is that each place must make arrangements to suit its own needs. The following are, I think, the requirements of Bengal:—

Engineering college.

(1) An engineering college proper, to teach civil, mechanical, electrical, mining and sanitary engineering. This should be Sibpur College in its present form, with the improvements which its enthusiastic Principal has suggested, though not on its present site. It has, I understand, been settled that the college will be removed to Ranchi.

Technological institute.

(2) A technological institute, the nucleus of which should be the industrial and chemistry classes, which it has been proposed will be started at Sibpur. This institute should be in Calcutta itself and should be affiliated with the classes in chemistry and physics at the Presidency College, and with the textile instruction at the new Serampur Weaving Institute. The syllabus should be the same as that provided at the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute at Bombay, or at the University of Leeds, in what is known as technical chemistry and should embrace the chemistry of leather and tanning, of the manufacture of commercial chemicals, and the chemistry of the processes required in the dyeing and printing of textiles, and in the manufacture of dyes, perfumes, soap, ceramics, varnishes and paints. The subject, however, has not yet been fully worked out in Bengal. The duplication of departments has to be avoided, and it has to be considered whether an institute for technology should be developed apart from, or in conjunction with, the Presidency College, where pure science as opposed to applied science is taught.

School of Art.

(3) So far for engineering and industrial chemistry; there is also required a central school of design. Mr. Collin proposed a school of drawing and design, for industrial purposes and the circulation of designs amongst native workmen. I do not propose a separate school of design, but recommend that the School of Art be brought more in touch with the industrial art of the province (its influence at present on indigenous art is imponderable), by the influence of the Principal, by the transfer of the Industrial Art Section of the Indian Museum to the School of Art, and by carrying out the proposals of the 1905 conference of the Principals of Schools of Art in preparing and circulating design books for workmen. On account of the fact that Calcutta must maintain an Imperial Museum for all India, the establishment of a separate Bengal provincial museum of industrial art, similar to those in Lahore, Lucknow and Madras, has been vetoed; but there is no reason why the Bengal School of Art should not fulfil the same function.

As for the technical institutions, including classes affiliated to Sibpur, I advocate the following:—

Affiliated technical institutions.

(1) The Cuttack Survey School should be made into a school of engineering up to the sub-overseer standard; the amin's certificate given after one year's training should be abolished and only a surveyor's certificate given after the final survey standard examination at the end of a two years' course. There is no reason why at Cuttack an inefficient type of Bengali sub-overseers should be turned out as is done at present.

(2) The Bihar School of Engineering which at present teaches to the overseer standard, should be allowed to give practical instruction, so that the certificate of the qualification of upper subordinate could be granted; moreover, the amin's certificate should be abolished, and only a surveyor's certificate should be given after a two years' course in surveying.

(3) The Technical Schools at Midnapore and Burdwan should leave artisans alone, and should train youths up to the sub-overseer standard of Sibpur, on the condition that the passing of the Entrance Examination be the minimum qualification in general education.

(4) My own feeling is that the system of bifurcation known as B classes should be dropped entirely. It is stated in Mr. Hornell's report (page 102) to be a failure in Bengal. The object of Government in giving a "taste for an industrial career" is frustrated by the parents or guardians. All that happens at present is that boys join them for the same object as others join the sub-overseer classes, hoping to obtain the same qualification ultimately with a smaller stock of brains. This affects the classes at Patna, Bhagalpur, Ranchi, Midnapore, Burdwan and Khulna.

(5) On the other hand, I propose that the B class of Bhagalpur, the arrangements for which are almost a farce in connection with the zillah school, be changed into a proper technical school, teaching to the sub-overseer standard, and be financed and managed by Government instead of by the District Board. It should be a model school.

(6) Among the unaffiliated technical schools are those managed by the railway companies, and the Calcutta Technical School. The latter has a niche of its own in the framework of technical education. As a night school for those who are apprentices in factories in or near Calcutta, it should be assisted. Among railways the theoretical training of apprentices, who are to be the future foremen and heads of departments, is recognized. The State Railway Workshop at Kanchrapara was specifically mentioned in 1890 by Mr. Collin; but no system similar to that at Kharagpur, Lillooah or Jamalpur is yet in existence there. The best scheme, in my opinion, is that at Lillooah: it recognizes that the theoretical training should not be given at night after recognized working hours, but should be given within the Railway Company's hours. Two hours, twice a week in the mornings, do not interfere much with workshop practice. The syllabus at these three railway centres is fairly uniform and gives what is wanted.

(7) The other important private technical institutions are the Bengal Technical Institute and the technical department of the Bengal National College. The former at present does not desire affiliation, and independence is part of the creed of the latter. There is quite enough room for the Bengal Technical Institute; it should be placed by its supporters on a sound financial foundation. It is at present a composite institution for instruction in engineering and chemistry, and does not furnish the same temptation to the Bengali youth to aspire to service as sub-overseers or overseers under Government or quasi-Government departments, as the Government college does, and therefore it opens out a direct avenue to industrial employment.

Industrial schools.

The future of industrial schools is a difficult problem. As has been indicated in the first chapter, an industrial school is one dealing with the improvement of the artisan. There is: (1) the school for centralized industries growing in importance, and (2) the school in large stations and municipal towns, where there is a demand, which will repay those who acquire in local industrial schools superior skill (Government of India Resolution of 1888); there is also, (3) the school proposed for local handicrafts, half-time primary and half-time industrial, with apprenticeship under approved artisans (Government of India Resolution of 1903). It has been shown in the Summary in Chapter I that the proceedings of the Bengal Government of 1904 ended in the scheme for the improvement of weaving in Bengal. The committee of 1904 resolved to take no action regarding large manufacturing centres and did not press the system of half-time schools. In only two divisions has any attempt been made to put that system into practice: in Chota Nagpur, principally in the Hazaribagh district by Mr. Radice, who was a member of the Industrial Education Committee and is now the Deputy Commissioner; and in Patna division, where the only outcome of a prolonged discussion was the subsidizing of an existing school attached to a railway workshop. It seems to me that there is room for each kind of school in different localities; and that it is inexpedient to dogmatise about the comparative merits of the "class" system or the "apprentice" system.

Misconceptions concerning Industrial Education.

Let me first clear away some misconceptions. One is that manual instruction is industrial education. I am afraid that many in Bengal, both pupils and teachers entertain this belief. Manual education is now-a-days held in Europe to be part of a liberal education; it is the training of the hand and eye. One of the objects of the free use of manual instruction through the curriculum of the Bengal National College is to overcome the traditional prejudice amongst certain classes against manual labour. Manual instruction is used in certain Missionary schools in the hope, not always realized, that the boys, who do not belong to the artisan castes, will earn a living afterwards in a handicraft. But in neither case is it really industrial education. Another misconception exists as to the principles and objects of the half-time system; notwithstanding the fact that the Government of India in 1901 said that they attached great value to the dissociation of technical from ordinary literary education. Another misconception is that it is assumed that the employers of subordinate Indian labour are satisfied with manual dexterity in their journeymen. It is a fact, I find, that many employers have not given special attention to the improvement of the intelligence of their journeymen, but many have stated to me that a journeyman who could work the first four rules of arithmetic in English figures and who could make and understand simple drawings would be a more useful workman than one who has not this knowledge. Paragraph 66 of Mr. Collin's report shows that in 1890 employers, while admitting the benefits of a course of theoretical training, did not appear to have felt the absence of it, that they looked for practical training only, and were satisfied if they obtained that. But since 1890 a change has come across the attitude of employers in Europe.

Schools for centralised industries.

(1) As for the school attached to a centralised industry, the best example in the province is the Beniadih School of the East Indian Railway Colliery Workshops which have been described in section II of Chapter III. Literary education is kept apart, as the upper primary standard is the qualification for admission. It realises what the Indian Government said in 1888:—"To the Government railway workshops and factories may undoubtedly with great advantage be attached schools of drawing and design and of practical instruction in the scientific principles of the handicrafts there carried on." Now at Beniadih mechanical drawing is taught, and also simple mechanics and mensuration. It has just received the unqualified approval of the newly-appointed Chief Inspector of Mines, Mr. J. Wilson.

The advantages are—

(i) a commercial atmosphere;

(ii) teaching and discipline under European control; and

(iii) an assured livelihood.

I have asked the superintendents of the large workshops of the Bengal Iron and Steel Works at Barakar, of the East Indian Railway Carriage and Wagon Works at Lillooah, and of the Canal Workshops of the Public Works Department at Dehri-on-Sone and at Midnapore to consider this. The young artisan gets a small money-wage in proportion to his skill. In the words of paragraph 10 of the Resolution of 1904, it is necessary to enlist the active co-operation of employers of labour: the principle applies to the training of journeymen, as well as to the training of apprentices of the foreman type. My proposal for this co-operation is that, if a large employer of labour will maintain a school attached to his workshop, on the lines of the Beniadih school, Government should assist by paying for the teacher up to Rs. 60 a month. The principle that under certain conditions Government would pay for a teacher was enunciated in Government Order No. 2584 of the 30th July 1904 in connection with the Khulna school. If we had a provincial inspector of industrial schools, he would, I am sure, have several such schools in working order. At present the Beniadih school suffers from unnecessary inspection by subordinate eductional officers, who do not understand its object. I think that no industrial school should be inspected by an officer under the status of an Inspector of Schools, and possibly in time such schools may cease altogether to be under the Education Department.

Schools in large towns.

(2) The next kind of school is an industrial school in large stations and municipal towns, where there is a demand which will repay those who acquire superior skill. In Bengal such schools have sprung up under no system. Apart from Missionary schools, for example, those at Hutchapra, Chaibassa and Ballygaunj, which supply a demand for good material, but unfortunately not a demand from the Indian community, there is no genuine school of this kind in the province, except that at Khulna. The Khulna school is miscalled a technical school. It gives an improved knowledge of carpentry to boys of the artisan castes, and its chief defect is that the boys leave to earn their livelihood before they have learnt enough, partly owing to proverty, partly owing to short-sighted policy on the part of their parents. Outside the metropolitan area and away from the vicinity of large workshops, it is not possible to have the commercial atmosphere. But the next best thing is that the work to be taught should be that kind for which there is a remunerative local demand, if it be done well. Some officers desire a graduated syllabus for this form of instruction. It is acknowledged that a training of three or four years is required, and something definite for each year is demanded by the non-expert inspecting officer. In my opinion a too elaborate syllabus defeats its own object. Mr. Ward, the Superintendent of the East Indian Collieries says that to ask a boy to attend to fires in a blacksmith shop for a whole year is to damp any spark of enthusiasm the boy may have, while Mr. Heaton, the Principal of Sibpur, says that the best training is to make the boys proceed from simple articles to more difficult articles, and that it is impracticable to ask a boy to spend a whole year on one operation such as planing. In this connection I note that it is impossible to give practical training of any value, unless articles are made which are meant to be sold, otherwise boys will leave with knowledge neither of the cost of materials nor of market rates. I have not yet come across any institution in which progressive and methodical training was sacrified to the necessity of showing a profit, as the Government Resolution of 1903 foretodel. In fact either from want of business methods, or from the fear of the above imputation, the work is all the other way; as commercial undertakings, the schools are carried on at a loss. The theory that industrial schools should be primarily educational and not commercial enterprises is accepted without cavil; and has no objectors; but it was never intended to mean that nothing must be produced for sale. In fact the Resolution of 1903 has recorded that it is wholesome that schools should be brought to the test of producing saleable articles.

In this class of school, the pupils cannot afford to pay fees: they have to be supported either by a Mission or some local body. I think the industrial section of the Khulna school under the Khulna District Board is a good example for imitation. The conditions should be: (a) the pupil should be of the artisan caste; (b) no literary education should be given: the pupils should have reached the lower primary standard, and in the more advanced districts the upper primary standard, but simple mensuration and drawing should be taught; (c) Government should provide the salary of a teacher-superintendant, or preferably a passed foreman mechanic, up to Rs. 60; (d) the pupil should be maintained by progressive stipends at Rs. 1, 2, 3, and 4, per month respectively in each of the four years; (e) to prevent pupils leaving too soon, they should receive at the end of the period, but not before, a certificate of competency, and in cash the total of the credits which should be placed opposite their names, month by month, in accordance with their work; and (f) in all cases the District Engineer should be a member of the board of management.

I think that if Government paid for the teacher, as proposed above, other District Boards would start similar schools for carpentry and blacksmithy work. The Government School at Ranchi should be worked on the conditions above mentioned. A similar Government school at Muzaffarpore should be started; and the District Boards of Cuttack, Gaya and Champaran should start similar schools for carpentry alone at Cuttack, Gaya and Bettiah, and the District Board of Birbhum at Suri for blacksmithy.

Half-time industrial primary schools.

(3) The half-time industrial primary school was suggested as a type for the whole of India, in the hope that a "practical beginning" might be made. Although I think that some little good has been done in the attempts made in the Chota Nagpur areas, yet it must be admitted that Bengal is one province, at least, in which the attempt to add literary to a practical education will fail. To add practical to a literary education is another matter; this is being done. The proposal is "that the boys should spend half the day at the primary school, and the other half on working as registered apprentices under approved artisans, who would receive a monetary reward for each apprentice on the conditions: (i) that they taught them the trade thoroughly, and not merely the elementary processes; (ii) that they accepted supervision from a Government expert", while at the same time "scholarships for all the pupils would be provided." The crux is to find the approved artisan The artisan selected in many places is no better than the bazar mistri, and officers complain that money is being uselessly spent in pretending to teach just as much as would be learnt without any Government or District Board scheme. If a good local artisan teacher can be obtained, if some of the ex-pupils of the Ranchi school can be tempted to be teachers in those local schools and make the teaching a reality, then some good may be effected; but I should like to see the money of the local District Boards granted for scholarships only in places where these conditions prevail. Elsewhere, as so many have said, the large workshops of Bengal are the real industrial schools, and in this province the dissociation of technical from literary training mentioned in Sir John Hewett's letter of 1901, should be recognised. The chief advance which should be made should be in making all reasonably possible use of such workshops and in obtaining the co-operation of the employers. And this can be effectively done rather by one officer, such as the proposed Superintendent of Industries, who can act personally, than by a department through correspondence.

Subsidies to private schools.

As will be seen in Appendix II, there are several private schools, either philanthropic or Missionary, which provide a training in a handicraft. My advice to them has been that the chief test of their efficiency is whether the ex-pupils keep up as a means of livelihood the crafts which they have learnt. Applications come from these schools for assistance; and the schools are treated as special schools under rule 17 of the Grant-in-aid Rules. The criterion of these schools is not a literary one; and in the past the Director has frequently had to apply to the Principal of Sibpur College for his expert opinion. There is also in the Department no separate grant for the aid of industrial schools; all grants are debited to the Grant-in-aid Fund, on which there are already heavy claims. It would be more satisfactory in order to avoid delay and circumlocution, if the new Inspector of Industrial Schools received a lump grant, similar to that given to the Inspector of European Schools, and distributed it in accordance with the results of his personal inspections. It is in accordance with the declared policy of Government to assist such institutions when they further or develop a local industry when it appears to be capable of expansion by the application of superior methods and implements.

It must be recollected that the advance movement in England dates from 1884, only twenty-four years ago; and that much of the expenditure in that country has not come from the public exchequer, but from local bodies (Report on Technical Education in Great Britain, Chapter VIII of Report of the United States Commissioner of Labour, 1902); that in America the advance was due, in a great measure, to private benefactions, with "a great variety of organization and practice and a marked impression of the personal element" (Address of Sir William Preece on Technical Education in America, Journal of the Society of Arts, 10th April 1908); and that in Germany the advance was due in some measure to the education and opportunities for research study provided by the Universities (Industrial Education, by Sir Philip Magnus, 1888, page 215). But in India generally, and in Bengal particularly, the circumstances are different. It is Government from whom the initiative is expected, and the Government purse from which funds are provided. That being so, it is sound that expenditure by Government should primarily be on the central institutions; and secondarily in co-operation with the large industrial concerns in the improvement of apprentices and journeymen. On the other hand, I doubt very much whether a complete system of village industrial schools is either practicable or desirable throughout all the divisions of Bengal, but any industrial schools which are under private management should be encouraged, if they pass the test of producing intelligent artisans, who will follow the trades which are taught to them.

REVIEW OF THE INDUSTRIAL POSITION AND PROSPECTS IN BENGAL IN 1908 WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO THE INDUSTRIAL SURVEY OF 1890.

(PART II OF SPECIAL REPORT.)

INTRODUCTORY.

Classification of industries.

THE subject of technical education is discussed in a separate review. It is difficult to arrange the industries of the province of Bengal in groups which will not overlap; but the following division, adopted by a distinguished expert in industrial training, is fairly logical:—(1) those involving the use of extensive machinery; (2) those mainly requiring the use of hand tools; (3) those dependent on artistic skill; and (4) agriculture in all its branches. To this list may be added the mining industries. Another expert in Indian manufactures makes the division of—(1) manufactures proper; (2) manipulation or preparation of agricultural, forest or animal produce; and (3) utilisation of minerals. We can have the following groups:—(1) factory industries, (2) mining industries, (3) handicrafts, (4) industrial arts, and (5) industries dealing with economic products. These will be considered in turn; and it is proposed to treat in detail the indigenous manufacturing industries and the indigenous industrial arts. Manufacturing industries cover both factory industries and cottage handicrafts. It is desired to indicate the nature of existing obstacles to development, the possibility of development, and the measures which Government may legitimately take to remove obstacles, or facilitate development. Special investigation has been made in the case of weaving, leather work, brass work and glass making. It is intended also in this review to bring up to date the report on the arts and industries of Bengal, prepared by Mr. E. W. Collin, I.C.S. in 1890, under the instructions of the Government of India issued for all the provinces in 1888.

Continuous development.

Twenty years have elapsed since 1888, and now in the newspapers, in magazine articles and in the addresses of Indian publicists it is stated that the country is on the eve of an extensive industrial development. Although fresh factors have been brought into operation within the last two years, yet it will be found that there has been a continuous development. The material condition of the people was reviewed in 1892 and again in 1902. In the former year it was found that, while silk manufactures and hand-loom weaving were decaying, there had been a "redistribution rather than destruction of wealth," and that the manufactures of Bengal were "more valuable than they were in days when her silks and muslins held every market in Europe." By 1902 it was stated that there had been an outburst of manufacturing and mining activity, which was converting the metropolitan districts into a vast industrial tract; and even at that time Mr. Shirres, who prepared the memorandum, was able to point to the growth of an industrial middle class. The following figures are sufficiently striking. Within twenty years jute mills have increased from 12 to 42: cotton mills from 6 to 13: the coal output from under two million tons to over ten million tons: the mica output from under 100 tons to over 1,000 tons. The greater part of this development has been due to European capital and enterprise, while the trend of the present movement is for the outlay of Indian capital and the exercise of Indian management. The outlay of capital implies the power of combination and the risking of reserve funds for industrial purposes, and management implies technical skill and business capacity. There is and has been for the last six years a desire amongst the educated classes to take to industrial enterprises—a desire not unconnected with the blocking by competition of the traditional avenues of livelihood on literary lines. The history of the Indian Industrial Association of Calcutta shows that its promoters were in advance of public opinion in 1893. Those therefore who now earnestly desire this industrial development must continue to call upon their countrymen to use their latent capital, either individually or collectively; and to acquire skill in technique and business management.

Present requirements.

One of the chief requisites in Bengal for the development of indigenous industrial enterprise—or "honest swadeshi"—is the appointment of a whole-time expert officer of Government, one possessing primarily engineering and scientific qualifications, and secondarily a knowledge of local conditions, sympathy and acquaintance with business methods. The Bengal Government have taken steps to obtain such an officer. He would be able to give disinterested advice to those who wish to take up industrial enterprises and to exert continuous personal pressure to put into effect the recommendations of Mr. Collin, almost all of which still hold good, and any other recommendations which Government may accept. The next requisite is patience. There is an impatience to achieve in a single year results for which decades would not be too short.

CHAPTER II.

FACTORY INDUSTRIES AND HANDICRAFTS.

SECTION (1)—GENERAL REVIEW OF FACTORY INDUSTRIES.

Government factories.

THE factories requiring extensive machinery, most of which are worked by European capital and under European supervision, are principally those in the vicinity of Calcutta on both sides of the Hooghly. Government is itself in Bengal a large employer of labour and a manufacturer on a large scale: of arms at Ichapore, of ammunition at Dum-Dum, of shells at Cossipore and Ichapore, of railway plant at Kanchrapara, Balliaghata, Sealdah and Chitpur, of steamers at Kidderpore, of clothing at Alipur, of telegraph stores at Bhawanipore, of opium and opium boxes at Patna, and of canal stores at Dehri-on-Sone, Midnapore, Cuttack and Calcutta.

Private factories.

It is not realised what an enormous variety of industrial activity exists at present in Bengal, with part of which Indian capital might be more associated than it is. The Department of Commercial Intelligence takes as a standard for statistical purposes any factory which employs 50 workmen or more. Even on this standard we find the totals for Bengal in 1905 as tabulated in the Financial and Commercial Statistics of British India for 1907, under many diverse heads.

Factories within the metropolitan area.

On the east of the Hooghly is the 24-Parganas district and Calcutta, on the west the Hooghly and Howrah districts. These constitute the metropolitan area. I give below the distribution of private factories within that area in 1906-1907, taking the same standard. There are, of course, many others which employ less than fifty work people.

In 24-Parganas such factories are :— Lac 2, paper 2, ice 3, soap 1, sugar 1, silk 1, saltpetre 1, stone 1, gas 1, rope 2, flour 1, dairy farm 1, coach-building 1, tannery 1, tramway workshops 3, dockyards 2, iron and brass foundries 13, oil mills 2, oil depôts 3, jute 33, cotton 6, jute presses 11, municipal workshop 1, electric supply 1, chemicals 1.

In Calcutta itself, there are :—Municipal workshops 2, Port Commissioners' workshops 2, ice 1, foundries 5, jute press 2, lac 1, printing presses 21, coach-building 2, electric supply 1, cabinetmaking 1, wood works 1.

In Howrah district there are the following :—Jute 9, rope 3, jute presses 7, engineering works and foundries 9, docks 4, flour 4, cotton 6, railway workshops 3, printing 1, salt 1, lime 1, bone 1, paint 1, oil 1.

And in Hooghly district there are :—Brick-making 11, jute 6, cotton 1, chemicals 1, bone 1, surki 31.

Factories beyond the metropolitan area.

Outside Calcutta and its neighbourhood we find comparatively little industrial enterprise which is not connected with agriculture. I give an analysis on the same standard of fifty work-people per factory.

Murshidabad District.—Silk 30.
Jessore District.—Sugar 1.
Nadia District.—Silk 1.

BURDWAN DIVISION.

Burdwan District.—Oil 1, brass 1, weaving 3, pottery 1, paper 1, iron 1, tanning extracts 1, railway workshop 1.
Birbhum District.—Railway workshops 2, silk 3.
Bankura District.—Brass 1.
Midnapur District.—Silk 2, railway workshop 1.

Cuttack District.—Tannery 1, printing presses 2.

CHOTA NAGPUR DIVISION.

Ranchi District.—Lac 7.
Manbhum District.—Lac 44.
Hazaribagh District.—Railway workshop 1, Lac 2.

BHAGALPUR DIVISION.

Monghyr District.—Railway workshop 1, brick-making 1.
Darjeeling District.—Railway workshop 1.

PATNA DIVISION.

Patna District.—Oil and flour 5, darris 1, hides 1.
Gaya District.—Railway workshop 1, lac 3.
Shahabad District.—Sugar mill 1, tiles and bobbins 1.
Saran District.—Saltpetre 1, sugar 2, railway workshop 1.
Champaran District.—Sugar 3.
Muzaffarpur District.—Engineering 2, sugar 2.
Darbhanga District.—Railway workshop 1, sugar 1.

This distribution gives, however, no idea of the extent of the lac industry, for instance. Only seven large factories are shown above in the whole of the Chota Nagpur Division, whereas there are no fewer than 82 small factories in Manbhum district alone. Nor does it give a fair idea of the brass industry in North Midnapore, where some capitalists employ 150 to 300 men. The tendency of the district staff, who prepare the returns of important industries, is, I find, to assume that an "important industry" must use mechanical power.

European enterprise.

Many of the factories in and around Calcutta are those described in Mr. Collin's report as European industries. It is not realised what an enormous amount of European capital is invested in industrial enterprises in Bengal. Take the case of jute; the capital invested in buildings and plant on the banks of the Hooghly is £12,000,000 sterling; and employment is given to 200,000 native operatives, whose wages amount to £3,000,000 or four and a half crores of rupees a year. In the districts too, European capital has within recent years started large factories such as the sugar factory of India Development Limited, at Otter in Muzaffarpur district, and the new factory of the Peninsular Tobacco Co., which is under erection at Monghyr. If, however, there is to be any really indigenous industrial development in the province, Indian capital must come forward, whether in joint-stock enterprise or through the small capitalist. A commendable beginning has been made, but an examination of the registration of joint-stock companies will show that Bengal is far behind Bombay in the inauguration of purely indigenous industrial concerns. Bombay provided 49 per cent. of the total nominal capital in 1906-07, and Bengal 24 per cent. In Bengal in 1907-08 there were 80 companies registered with a paid up capital of 13⅔ lakhs, but coal companies accounted for more than half of the number and 12½ lakhs of the capital. Indigenous joint-stock enterprise is still in its infancy in Bengal; and the transactions are characterised by an almost excessive, though prudent, amount of caution and shyness. For instance, the Bengal Laxmi Cotton Mills, Limited, took over a working mill, the Laxmi Tulsi Cotton Mills, at Serampore; and the Bengal Hosiery Company, Limited, are taking over the works of the old Kidderpore Hosiery Factory. There have been some interesting developments of joint-stock enterprise for banks and insurance companies, which are so far hopeful signs. But the capital for these new enterprises is not coming from the large capitalists, but from the savings of the middle class. It is the opinion of a leading native merchant that it is much easier to make money by an agency in imported goods, than by investment in industrial enterprise. The large capitalist has still to be persuaded that he can get a good return for his money in manufacture rather than in zamindari or agency, or money lending. There are two good examples in Calcutta of successful indigenous enterprise: the Calcutta Pottery Works, and the Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Works. These are financed by Indian capital, and managed by Indian brains, which have had a scientific training. These are only nominally companies; they are really private syndicates. These works are commended as good examples of what is required. The essentials are a sufficiently large capital, scientific management, sufficient supply of raw materials, and a remunerative market which is capable of expansion. It is, therefore, by the small capitalist or by small syndicates that progress may be made in the immediate future, either in new lines of business or by improved methods adapted to strictly indigenous work, as for example brass manufacture. The joint-stock company is essential, but its growth will be slow. The Hon'ble Mr. (now Sir Vithaldas Damodar) Thackersey in his presidential address at the Calcutta Industrial Conference of 1906, quoted with approval the words of Mr., (now Sir Thomas) Holland, the Director of the Geological Survey of India, who said that Indians will continue to pay an unnecessary and undesirable tax as long as those in the country who possess money will not risk their reserve fund for industrial purposes.

Essentials for promotion of Indian enterprise.

Apart from the investment of capital, another essential for industrial developments is that the young men who study engineering at Sibpur and elsewhere should acquire more than a superficial knowledge of mechanical engineering. This is dealt with in my other report. In all factories where machine plant is used some knowledge of mechanical engineering is essential; and there is a splendid opening for the middle class youth as foremen if they will only take advantage of it. It is a common complaint of large employers that the Sibpur youth quickly forgets all that he has learned in the workshop. One leading engineering firm says that there is no employee available between a native tindal and a European foreman mechanic. As I have recorded elsewhere, the firms which are financed by European capital and organised under European management prefer to employ European foremen, inasmuch as force of character in managing factory hands is considered an essential as much as technical skill, but still the training at Sibpur contributes not a little to strengthen the character of the students, and it is to be hoped that they may yet wear down the prejudice that the Sibpur youth is afraid of hard work and not suitable for a responsible position, even though his workshop experience and theoretical training may have been of the best. I am glad to find that the East Indian Railway at the Lillooah workshops and the Eastern Bengal State Railway at Kanchrapara are giving every reasonable opportunity for advancement to the literate Indian apprentice.

Section (2)—General Review of Handicrafts.

While agriculture occupies over 72 per cent. of the population, the whole of those engaged in the "preparation and supply of material substances," according to the census of 1901, comes up only to 10 per cent; and amongst these, handloom cotton weavers, though the most important workers in indigenous industries, make up only 1·2 per cent; workers in precious metals, 0·4 per cent; potters and iron workers each 0·3 per cent. Hence we see what a small proportion of the population is included under the head of artisans. In 1881, the proportion of those engaged inindustrial pursuits was only 8·7 per cent. Mr. Coilin stated in 1890 that except in wood work, brassware, mat work and common pottery, the Bengal manufactures had been almost entirely superseded by imports from Europe. In 1894 Mr. Trailokya Nath Mukharji stated in his monograph on brassware that this was perhaps the only important industry which had not suffered from competition. In the memorandum on the material condition of the people of Bengal, Mr. Shirres in 1902 confirmed this view. In Chapter XII on Occupations in the Census of 1901, Mr. Gait pointed out that detailed information as to the industrial organization of a country cannot be obtained by the machinery of the general census. In fact, the elaborate and costly occupation tables tended, he thought, to obscure the main facts which a less elaborate method would have brought out. At the same time it was remarked that there had been a decline in the number of workers in wool and cotton and that machine-made goods were gradually replacing those made by hand in the villages. The swadeshi movement of the past two years

Recent developments.

(1906 and 1907) is a new factor stimulating production and creating a demand. I find that this has led to the improvement of the weavers in parts of the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions: that is to say, many weavers who had given up their caste occupation have returned to it. The weavers, however, in the Orissa Division were on the one hand not so affected by the previous competition of imported cloth, and on the other hand not so affected by the revival in favour of country-made cloths. In Bhagalpur and Chota Nagpur Divisions, there is a strong element in the population which prefers the coarse country-made cloth, apart from, and previous to, any sradeshi movement. As for the brass industry, there are signs of a double movement—in the districts near Calcutta, the poor people buy the enamelled goods because they are cheap, while better class people are becoming a little ashamed of their previous election of the cheaper ware on the ground of cheapness, and there is a feeling that every Hindu who can afford it should purchase brass and bell-metal ware. The motive for the latter attitude is something more than a desire to encourage indigenous industrialism, and should be respected.

The comparative importance according to the census of 1901 in the leading handicrafts was as follows:—(1) weaving, (2) pottery, (3) carpentry, (4) mat-making, (5) leather manufacture, (6) iron manufacture. These same handicrafts were stated by Mr. Collin to be the principal indigenous industries in 1890. The report of the Industrial Committee, 1903 (Vol. I, p. 87) recommends that all the above should be encouraged in Bengal. The committee appointed by the Bengal Government in 1904 recommended in particular that weaving should be developed. This will be discussed in the next chapter.

Improvement in indigenous handicrafts.

After six months special investigation, during which I have examined industries in twenty-six districts, it appears to me that what is now required is not the teaching of the existing methods in cottage industries, but the teaching of improved methods, and also the assistance of the educated upper-middle classes in a more organized system of production and distribution. Mechanical power, or in some cases, an improved adaptation of human power is required. An acute observer, representing the United States Government, has recently reported to Washington that the sradeshi movement must recognize that this is the age of machinery all over the world. The artisan must not be left to himself to obtain his raw materials, to produce an article, and then sell the completed product. Also I hold that industrial schools outside of a commercial atmosphere and without highly qualified teachers are futile, and that enthusiasm without money and business-like methods is vain.

CHAPTER III.

MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES.

TEXTILE INDUSTRIES.

Cotton Spinning and Weaving.

Spinning mills.

The factory industry has increased considerably since 1890. There are now 14 mills, in nine of which spinning is done. More then half of these fourteen are backed by Indian capital. Mr. Collin said in 1890 that cotton spinning, except as a cottage industry, did not exist.

Bengal produces now only seven per cent. of the total production of spinning mills in India. The Bengal climate appears to favour spinning, and spinning mills appear to have a chance in Bengal, because they can obtain cotton at a nominal freight by steamer from Bombay. The great difficulty is the want of skilled labour. The most recent figures show a falling off in yarns spun in Bengal:—April 1905 to March 1906, 51·2 million pounds; 1906-1907, 46·5 million pounds; 1907-1908, 41·8 million pounds. During 1907, the average dividend in one hundred selected Lancashire companies was 15⅞ per cent., but for 1908 the outlook is not reassuring. In Bengal only two of the mills spin any yarn above 25s. As for factory weaving, it has received an impetus from the svadeshi movement. The Bengal Laxmi Cotton Mills started in 1906, and has a paid-up capital of 11⅔ lakhs. It declared a dividend for the last half of 1907 at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum; but it was admitted that the profit was comparatively less because the goods had to be sold at a much cheaper rate in order to encourage the industrial movement of the country. This is the only mill which weaves dhoties. It has passed through four sets of proprietors within ten years, and has over 26,000 ring spindles and 200 looms. There has been an increased local manufacture of T cloths, and there is a probability of further increased local manufacture. The woven goods produced in Bengal mills during the last three years have been as follows:—2·5 million yards in 1905-06, 5·8 million yards in 1906-07, and 7·9 million yards in 1907-08. The first figure is for greys alone, the latter two are for all woven goods. On the other hand, the imports of all cotton piece-goods into Calcutta were 1,171 million yards as the average of 1900-1905, 1,336 million yards in 1905-1906, and 1,160 million yards in 1906-1907. The decrease in 1906-1907 was greatest in greys. The imports of all cotton piece-goods have mounted up again in 1907-08 to 1,330 million yards, with a record value of 21⅔ crores of rupees. The position in Bengal shows that there is an opening for the extension of the textile industry more in the Indian market and less in the China and foreign markets, and for the weaving of fine goods.

Hand weaving.

The hand-loom weaving industry has existed, as Mr. Collin said in 1890, more or less in every district. The yearly accounts from 1892 were rather dispiriting. In the monograph for 1898, it was stated "that large numbers of weavers have abandoned their looms and have taken to other pursuits," or that the cotton weaving industry was in a decaying condition. In 1899 the industry was stated to be on the decline, but there was no change in the fine muslin of Golnagar and in the coarse cotton cloth in Orissa. By 1901 it was stated that the competition of European piece-goods was lowering the indigenous industry in the Burdwan, Presidency and Patna Divisions, but that the fly-shuttle loom was coming into use in the two former areas. In 1905 it was stated that the coarse country-made cloths were preferred in the Orissa and Chota Nagpur Divisions and in the Sonthal-Parganas. By 1906-1907, the industry had recovered. In Burdwan district there was an increase in outturn of one-half over that of the previous year. From Bankura there was an export trade. At Bolpur in Birbhum there was considerable manufacture. In Hooghly district the manufactures in Arambagh subdivision rose from 11 lakhs to 14 lakhs. In Howrah the mill outturn decreased; and the hand outturn increased. In Midnapore, Ghatal was the centre of weaving. In the 24-Parganas, the mill market was dull; the hand outturn smartened in Basirhat subdivion. In Jessore there was a considerable manufacture in both coarse and fine cloth; so also in Khulna. In Nadia coarse cloths, bed-sheets and towels were made at Kushtia, Meherpur and Shikarpur. Fine cloths with silk borders were made at Santipur for export. In Patna, both cotton and mixed fabrics were manufactured in Bihar. In Saran district, the jolahas wove a coarse cloth for winter use. There was some spinning in the Gopalganj subdivision. In Gaya, there was coarse cloth manufactured. In Darbhanga district there was the special kokti cloth woven near Madhubani, and kanti cloth at Bharwara and Pandaul. In Shahabad coarse cloth was woven all over the district. In Bhagalpur, coarse cloth was made, but an improvement in texture was made, so also in Monghyr. In the Sonthal Parganas, both jolahas, tantis and aboriginals did coarse weaving. At Kishanganj in Purnea district, lungis and patanis were made. Throughout Orissa and Chota Nagpur Divisions coarse cloths were woven, principally for local consumption. A comparison between this account and the earlier accounts shows what a revolution for the time being has been made in the industry by the new factor of an increased local demand. How far this factor will be permanent, it is impossible to say. The contrast is shortly as follows:—Country cloth will last over a year, and imported cloth seven or eight months. The cost of the latter is Re. 0-11 to Re. 1-3, of the former Rs. 1-12 to Rs. 3-0.

Extensions of the Serampore pattern hand loom.

The subject of hand-loom weaving has given rise to much discussion since 1890. There is quite a literature on the subject; some of the leading pamphlets are quoted in the Appendix. In Bengal, as has been seen, from 1892 to 1902 there was nothing but decadence to record. From 1902 to 1905, the steps taken towards the improvement of the handloom weaving were made in the direction of introducing the Serampore pattern throughout Bengal. Mr. Collin had said in 1890 that the Serampore weavers used an improved hand-loom, and owed the vitality of their trade to that fact. Mr. Banerjei in his monograph of 1898 again called attention to this pattern, saying that it was a distinct improvement on the ordinary loom, in so far that it led to a great deal of economy of labour. This was the old English fly-shuttle loom invented by John Kay and introduced more than fifty years in Serampore from Farasdanga (Chandernagore). No attempt had been previously made to introduce this loom outside Serampore.

Mr. Havell, the Principal of the School of Art, Calcutta, took up the matter in 1901. From that time, by lectures, letters and advertisements, Mr. Havell did a great public service in his efforts to extend the use of the Serampore fly-shuttle loom. Government circulated instructions and sketches; District Boards were importuned to send weavers for training at Serampore; a factory for the manufacture of Serampore looms was started at Chinsura, first under Ghosh, Chauduri & Co., then Ghosh, Palit & Co., then under Mr. P. N. De. The progress from year to year was summarised in the District Board reports, and Mr. Havell at one time was persuaded that 10,000 new looms were working; and in February 1908 was of the same opinion. An examination of the correspondence in many of the District Board offices discloses that there was too much amateur work; and recent enquiries show that the new form of loom, notwithstanding the impetus of the swadeshi movement, has not been sufficiently attractive to the working weaver. The reasons for the failure are many. The present attitude in the districts is not to worry any further about the fly-shuttle loom, on the ground that the attempts to popularize it have failed. Some who have been corresponding about the loom for years do not even know what a fly-shuttle is. The National Weaving School, which worked at No. 209, Cornwallis Street, Calcutta, is now closed. I was sorry to see lying idle in many places a number of frame looms of the Serampore pattern, which had been introduced by well-to-do people in several districts. I think a fresh start must be made in Bengal Objections to the Serampore loom.

The fly-shuttle loom contains a string and lever mechanism for pushing the shuttle backwards and forwards across alternate sheddings of the warp threads, along the shuttle run; in the country loom the shuttle is passed by the hands of the weaver between the threads of the warp. I checked the picking in many places and found that it averaged 65 against 22 per minute in the country loom. The complaints were in different places (1) that the whole new frame loom was too expensive; (2) that the weaver had to sit on a bench instead of on the ground; (3) that the threads snapped; (4) that the wheels of the shuttle could not be repaired locally; (5) that the shuttle jumped out off the shuttle run; and (6) that sufficient work could not be prepared to keep up with the rate of weaving. I have given to this matter much personal enquiry and studied all the literature on the subject, and I think that some of the difficulties are due to avoidable causes, principally want of mechanical knowledge. What is wanted for the improvement of the individual weaver in Bengal is a cheap adaptation of the flying-shuttle mechanism to the country loom. The improved sley with the string-picking apparatus is the only essential part of the improved loom. The wooden frame-work and the raised seat are only copies of the original English loom. It is not necessary to give the ordinary weaver a stout wooden frame for his loom, or to ask him not to sit on the floor. The line of least resistence is required for dealing with the most conservative of Indian artisans. Mr. Havell did, it is true, propose the adaptation of the fly-shuttle sley to the country loom at a cost of Rs. 7; but I do not think that the people in the districts realised its advantages or that the suggested contrivance was mechanically perfect. A good adaptation is that proposed by Mr. Greenway, Supervisor of the Darbhanga District Board, at a cost of Rs. 6-11 (Government Circular No. 15T.M. of the 20th September 1906). The best adaptation which has come to my notice so far, is not the Bengal pattern, but the pit loom pattern of Mr. P. Theagaraya Chettiar in Madras, which costs complete Rs. 10. The Bengal pattern with some little devices could be made to swing more evenly, and could be made less costly. The shuttle box of the Bengal pattern is likely to jam the picker when it is first used. In fact the extension of such a pattern in Bengal was as much a mechanical problem as anything else. Moreover the Serampore men were accustomed to their English frame loom; they could teach "picking" on a duplicate loom, but they had no experience to teach the use of the adapted form of loom. Within recent years many patterns of hand looms have been publicly tried at Calcutta in 1906, and at Madras in 1908. The last word on the subject is Mr. Chatterton's memorandum on the Madras weaving competition of 1908, in which he shows the advantages of Mr. D. C. Churchill's model of a pedal loom, th Sayaji Baroda loom, and of Mr. Maxwell's "Triumph" Salvation Army loom. It is necessary to indicate precisely what the problems are. First, the problem of assisting the weaver in his old individualistic ways is one thing; for that, the cheapest form of mechanism which will give an increased outturn is required. This will give an increased power of production. Secondly, the problem of applying generally human labour to work looms is another This depends upon whether there is a market for the hand product, and whether it can compete successfully with the machine product. But even if these conditions are satisfied, this is not enough. Organised capital is required. The capitalist can either finance the weavers in their own homes in an existing weaver colony, and distribute their goods for them; or he can in a similar colony economise by bringing the weavers and their wives and children to work under one roof, in the manner in which the new Madras handloom factories are working. A factory does not necessarily connote mechanical power, or unhygienic surroundings. The Madras handloom factories were a revelation to me. Hence in Bengal, the capitalist can either go in for power factories or for simple financing, or for organized hand-power factories. For the last two, he should work at known weaving centres, like Serampur, Bishnupur, Santipur, Bhagalpur, Bihar, Madhubani, and so on. The capitalist should get the most efficient form of human-power loom possible even though it be expensive. Care should be taken to avoid one error: it is of no avail to teach weaving to those outside the weaver castes in a place where there is no demand for the goods.

Problems in handloom weaving.

What has happened in Bengal is that in parts of Jessore district and most of Howrah district, in the Sadar and Serampur subdivisions, but not in the Arambagh subdivision of the Hooghly district, and in the Raniganj side of the Burdwan district, the Serampur pattern of hand loom has extended. But I believe that it was due more to intercommunication among the people themselves than to official efforts to popularize the Serampur fly-shuttle loom. On the other hand, the ordinary weaver throughout the Burdwan and Presidency Divisions has, whether a fly-shuttle worker or not, received a special demand for his wares on account of the movement in favour of local manufactures. And yet I found Serampur weavers themselves wearing by preference and for the sake of cheapness imported cloths, although they are the most prosperous among the weaving population, earning up to Rs. 25 and 30 a month. Improvements are also required in the preliminary warping and sizing. The Serampur weavers have adopted, in the formation of the warp, a simple labour-saving appliance by which 100 threads can be laid simultaneously instead of one or two. An Arrah zamindar has a machine for the same object, though unnecessarily complicated. I do not think that the efficiency of the Bengal method of sizing could be improved upon; but it is time-consuming. The proceedings of the All-India Weaving Conference of Madras showed that there is much to learn under these heads, and the improved methods adopted at the Madras hand-weaving factories could be followed in Bengal. There is room for a complete division of labour between warpers and weavers. The Patent List of 1907 show five applications or specifications filed by Bengali inventors for improvements in hand looms or hand spinning wheels.

Development of hand loom weaving.

Proposed Government weaving institute.

The proposals for the Government Central Weaving Institute at Serampur have been detailed in page 8 of my other report. At present we await the arrival of the two experts whose appointments have been sanctioned. I think that their course of action should be, first to study the literature on the subject, then to study the actual indigenous looms in the districts, and then to consider the problem of how to improve the mechanical efficiency of the native looms in Bengal by small improvements, or the desirability of adopting any of the patterns used in other parts, and also the possibility of saving the labour in the preliminary processes. In other words the objects to be kept in view should be the same as those announced by Mr. Chatterton for the Government factory at Salem in the Madras Presidency—experiment as well as instruction. For the present I am arranging to test the Madras pit loom pattern in three districts, Sambulpur, Bankura, and Darbhanga, and the Inspector-General of Prisons has kindly agreed to replace some of his old looms by the Salvation Army loom and the Churchill loom, and to test their suitability in Bengal. The efficiency of the Serampur looms is greatly increased by the addition of an automatic take-up motion which conduces to evenness of weaving. This has been successfully done by Suresh Chandra Sarkar of Raipur in Birbhum district. The proposed weaving institute and capitalist organization would in time achieve the reforms proposed in the Bengal Monograph on Cotton. Dr. Forbes Watson, the great textile expert, once said that the weaver had no regular system or method of doing business. Mr. Banerjei suggested in his monograph that weavers in the backward district should visit the large weaving centres, and learn to improve the quality and design of their fabrics. He advocated also exhibitions; and the introduction of cheap hand machinery, especially the introduction of the improved hand looms of Serampore.

Requirements in Bengal.

The memorandum issued by the Government of India on hand loom weaving in India in 1907, was circulated throughout Bengal. Opinions were collected from all districts, and they confirm my views that:—(1) a central experimental station is required; (2) the assistance of capitalists is wanted; (3) improvements on preliminary processes are necessary; (4) subdivision of labour must come; (5) exhibition are helpful; and (6) a simple really inexpensive adaptation of the fly-shuttle to the existing looms would be acceptable to the ordinary weaver, if he were convinced that it were remunerative. I do not propose co-operative credit societies for weavers, or industrial advances. Either the weaver should be tempted to improve his outturn by a simple device, or the work should be done on a big scale by capitalists, whereby weavers would be paid at piece-work rate for their outturn. Two separate solutions were proposed at the Madras conference; there is room I hold for each in Bengal. One was to make a good loom even though it be expensive and put it in the market where its own merits would tell; the other was to overcome the first objection of weavers to expense and intricacy and introduce a cheap and simple article.

Reeling and Weaving of Mulberry Silk.

Healthy cocoons.

This is the subject of an elaborate monograph by the well-known expert, the late Mr. N. G. Mukerji, who studied the subject for twenty years in the course of which he visited France and Italy. The industry covers the culture of the worm and the reeling of the silk; and also silk weaving. The former subject has been taken up by the Agricultural Department. The report of the committee appointed by Government in 1906 to enquire into the condition of the silk industry in Bengal should be read along with the monograph published in 1903. These papers are of such a recent date that direct reference to them should be made by those interested in the subject. I give here only the conclusions. It is accepted that the present unsatisfactory conditions are due primarily to disease amongst the worms, and not to defects in reeling or manufacture, or to competition. Definite recomendations for the establishment of nurseries and for other remedial measures have been made, and the Bengal Silk Committee have already taken steps for the propagation and distribution of good seed. The filatures are principally in the Murshidabad, Midnapore and Birbhum districts, and in the district of Malda and Rajshahi of the Eastern province, and are owned chiefly by the Bengal Silk Company, Ld., the Berhampore Silk Concern, the Rose Silk Filatures, and Messrs. Louis Payen and Co. The exports of raw silk were 47·4 lakhs average from 1901 to 1906, 55·1 lakhs in 1906-1907, and 46·9 lakhs in 1907-1908. The upward tendency has been noticeable since 1889. I was informed in Berhampore that what was required was an improved spinning machine in place of the native ghāi.

Vicissitudes of silk weaving.

As regards silk weaving, I deal with mulberry silk weaving separately from tussar weaving and mixed silk weaving. Silk weaving still continues, as Mr. Collin noted, in Murshidabad, Birbhum and Midnapore districts. Mr. Mukerji pointed out in his monograph that while there has been a decline in the foreign export of woven silk, the manufacture of silk fabrics for country use continues as vigorously as ever; for, he said, "the whole rank and file of the Hindu population of Bengal have to use indigenous silks on certain occasions." This is a great advantage. Silk weavers, he also said, are "as a class far more prosperous than cotton weavers." I noticed also myself that the silk weavers seem to have more influential headmen; in fact Mr. Mukerji points out that the leading silk weavers have had the enterprise and influence to introduce improvements to their fellow craftsmen and to supervise colonies of weavers. On the other hand, the financiers of the cotton weavers are as a rule not master weavers; and have not improved the craft in the slightest.

Up till 1901 silk weaving had been declining in Murshidabad; from that date it improved. In Bankura district, there is export from Birsinghpur, Bankura and Bishnupur. At Bishnupur there is a weaver of great merit—Babu Lal Kit—whose weaving took one day for a cubit, and whose 12-foot sari sold at Rs. 32. There is a great demand from East Bengal for vel silk from Bishnupur. In Birbhum district there is silk weaving at Boswa and Palsa. In the Arambagh subdivision in Hooghly district, there are several centres of silk weaving. At Ballydewanganj in this subdivision, special cloths called "urna" and "pagris" have been made and exported to the United Provinces and the Panjab since the days of the Moghuls. There is little manufacture in Howrah and the 24-Parganas. In North Midnapore as much as 20,000 lbs. of silk is yearly manufactured. In Murshidabad district there are several well-known names, but they are rather silk merchants than manufacturers. They advertise extensively, and have a business-like connection with Calcutta firms, who put their goods in the market. In other districts principally tussar is woven.

The Bengal Silk Mills Company, Limited, at 11, Dhur's Bagan Lane, in Ultadanga, Calcutta is owned and managed by a Bombay Muhammadan gentleman, Mr. Ariff. He has a European works manager from Macclesfield. This firm is able to manufacture very fine silks for export all over India and Burma and is successful in producing an almost black dye. It is an object lesson to Bengali capitalists of what can be done by skill and capital. Mr. Ariff informs me that he worked himself in his youth as a journeyman at every part of the processes. As Mr. Mukerji has said in the hand-book on sericulture: "skilled Indian labour guided by English enterprise can produce silks of European excellence and finish." I may mention that the Ecole Superieur de Commerce de Lyons receives pupils from foreign countries and teaches the entire silk business from the raising of the worm to designing, weaving and commercial methods.

As regards the hand loom weaving industry, the districts give pessimistic reports, but Mr. Mukerji gives reasons at page 63 of his monograph for thinking that the indigenous weaving industry is flourishing at present. My observation confirms this view. In Ghatal the cost of manufacture has increased on account of the increased price of the silk thread; it used to be Rs. 12 a seer; it had risen in 1908 to Rs. 22 a seer.

Present position of silk weaving industry.

The present position is that there is a full demand for local manufacture of the silk thread which is not exported and the silk producers have an increasing demand for export of the raw silk. I do not think that Government help is required in mulberry silk weaving. At Berhampore an intelligent observer told me that the demand of silk was from people who could pay, and that the swadeshi movement did not therefore affect the weaving industry. At the same time the inroads of the Japanese imports should be watched. At a time when so much is said and written about the support of local industries, Bengali ladies of the better class are purchasing saris of Chinese silk manufactured in Japan and sold in Calcutta in preference to the Calcutta or the Benarés product. The imports of Japanese silk into Calcutta was as follows in thousands of rupees:—

Tussar Silk Weaving.

Changes in the industry.

In Mr. Collin's account, this is described as prosperous. The details of distribution and of the methods of this industry is given in pages 103-138 of Mr. Mukerji's monograph. In 1898 it was recorded that the manufacture was decaying in the Burdwan Division; in 1900 that it was affected by the increased popularity of machine made goods; in 1903 that there was a decrease owing to the introduction of cheaper and finer cloths from Bombay, Japan and Assam; in 1905 there was a slight improvement in Burdwan, Manbhum and Bhagalpur districts, owing to the swadeshi movement. Tussar is worked also in the Hooghly, Midnapore, Birbhum, Bankura and the Sonthal Parganas districts; on the other hand, tussar cocoons are reared in the Singhbhum, Ranchi, Hazaribagh and Palamau districts; and in these no weaving is done, except perhaps a little in Singbhum district. For instance at Singbazar near Purulia I found that the weavers had to travel by rail and road to Chaibassa to get their cocoons.

Position of workers.

Like practically all the cotton weavers, the tussar silk weavers are in the hands of their mahajans; but they are probably a little better off, midway between cotton weavers and silk weavers. Mr. Mukerji after his special enquiry of 1904 said that the tussar silk industry was declining everywhere owing to grasserie, although the demand of tussar cloths was on the increase. The district officers did not agree with this conclusion. Mr. Mukerji states that the industry must under any circumstances be a precarious one and urges proposals for the improvement of the seed. This is for the Agricultural Department.

Requirement of the industry.

What the tussar weaving industry requires is a fly-shuttle mechanism for working tussar. I have tried several dodges myself, but have not been successful. Infructuous efforts to introduce fly-shuttle loom were made at Bhagalpur. One weaver of the Mourbhanj State, Bamdeb Uriya, is asserted to have succeeded; but I could not get this verified. The weavers of Kalipur Kodiya in Birbhum district succeeded only with a cotton warp and tussar weft. The complaint is that the reeds of the sley fray the threads of the warp. The remedy may be in a device in the loom, or in improved spinning. This is a problem for the new Government weaving institute to solve.

Mixed cotton and silk.

Under the head of tussar, can be considered bafta or mixed cloths. This is associated with Bhagalpur. A cotton chadar costs Re. 0-10 to Rs. 5 and lasts for two years; a bafta chadar costs Rs. 3-8 to Rs. 15, and lasts five to six years. In Champanagar I found that the mahajans were sweating the local craftsman; about eight annas was the labour return for four days work. In Bhagalpur itself the Bihar Trading Company under Kabir Ahmad Khan of Mujahidpur is doing good work in advertising and circulating samples, issuing new designs to the weavers, and in financing them without extortion. This is a method which the middle class capitalist might follow with advantage where there is any colony of weavers who are at present following individualistic methods of purchase of yarn and sale of material The Bihar Trading Company have customers in Bombay and Burma, in Bengal and the Deccan; and they have received orders from Europe. I sent several large samples to a leading, wholesale piece-goods merchant in London; but there was no demand there. From enquiries I believe that there may be a demand in Spain for this class of goods.

Woollen Goods and Blanket Making.

Origin of blanket weavers.

The position is the same as in 1890. The blanket weavers are principally to be found in the Bihar districts. The gareri colonies in Bengal have migrated from Bihar and the United Provinces. For instance those near Bankura came from Gaya district, those in Midnapore came from the Upper Provinces, those in Jessore came from Arrah. The centres from which most of the good exports are sent to Calcutta are Aurangabad in Gaya districts, and Jangipur sub-division of the Murshidabad district, where the blankets cost from seven to eight rupees each. In the Aurangabad sub-division of the Gaya district the industry is in a flourishing condition. The country-made blanket loses about one-third of its size during the wetting and rubbing process. The best blankets are those made from pure Punjab wool by up-to-date machinery under European supervision in Bhagalpur jail. The bullock transport during the South African war obtained some of these warm coverings from Bhagalpur jail. In Bankura I found that a single worker could turn out a blanket costing one rupee eight annas in a day and-a-half. His labour would be represented by five annas. The weavers usually own their own herds of sheep and do the shearing, scutching, rolling, spinning and weaving themselves. In the monograph of woollen fabrics in Bengal prepared by Mr. N. N. Banerjei (1899), detailed information is given regarding the processes of manufacture and in an appendix the distribution is given, thana by thana, of the industry throughout the province. The first suggestion for improvement is obviously that there should be improved breeding of the sheep which produce the wool, but the Bihar districts still wait any improvement in this direction. As regards the improvement in weaving itself, Mr. Banerjei stated that the country blanket was cheap, warm and durable and produced at a minimum expense and that, as the trade had no prospect of suffering from outside competition, it might well be allowed to remain untouched. I think, however, that in the production of the superior qualities, such as the 6′×7′ blanket costing from ten or twelve rupees and prepared in the Jangipur and Aurangabad sub-divisions, there is room for the small capitalists who might extend the market for finer qualities and introduce further variety of designs. I learnt that at Nabinagar in Gaya district the gareri can only dye red, yellow and brown, and for black they have to depend upon the naturally dark wool of the black sheep. Then again they have to depend for soft wool on the phagun cutting. They say that they would like to learn how to make soft blankets. If there were a superintendent of industries, he could arrange to have some men sent to Cawnpur for training. The ordinary gareri colonies, whom I found settled in Bengal, were happy, self-reliant and self-contained.

Possible improvements.

Carpet Weaving.

Industry in the Bihar districts.

In Mr. Collin's report it was stated (paragraph 40) that carpets were made in Patna City, in Obra and Daudnagar in Gaya district, at Sasaram in Shahabad district and in Muzaffarpur district. No recommendations were made under this head. This industry was the subject of the monograph for 1905-06, to which, as it is a recent production, reference should be made by those interested in the subject. The industry does not flourish in Bengal proper, as the climate is not suitable for sheep rearing. The work is still carried on in the Patna Division in Patna, Gaya, Shahabad, Muzaffarpur and Champaran districts.

Mr. N. G. Mukerji, the compiler of the monograph, has pointed out that it is very doubtful whether the industry would have lived at all in its higher branches, but for the encouragement given in jails. I find that in the following jails there is some work:—Arrah, Chapra, Motihari, Chaibassa, Purulia, Hazaribagh, Patna, Bhagalpur. The jails employ new thread, well-made forks, English shears and upright looms in nearly all cases.

The kalins and galichas are made by knotting in the warp, tuft by tuft, the material of the pattern: in durris and shatrangis, the pattern is woven in the loom. At Obra, in Gaya district, I found that the good workers were 20 men in four families. The weavers make, as pot-boilers, cheap and nasty durris, called asans, which they sell at from one anna upwards. In these they earn as profit about 3½ annas per rupee. But they can make beautiful carpets, with delicate design, heavy pile, and indigenous colouring, at Rs. 8 or Rs. 8-8 per square yard. Very few except Europeans in South Bihar give them orders or pay them at this high rate. In their second-rate work they use aniline dyes because such dyes are cheap. What they require is publicity, both in Bihar and in Calcutta. In Calcutta they are judged by the fifth rate articles which they export. As they have no capital, they work on advances and are dilatory. Their daily earnings are two to four annas. If private speculators were to run the whole business, and placed their good workmanship in the market, there would be room for a good profit. In Sasaram, in Shahabad district, the durri weaver can earn Rs. 7 and the kalin weaver Rs. 12 a month. They are not very prosperous. In Champaran the cotton work is partly done from locally grown cotton. In Muzaffarpur the workers earn about Rs. 3 to Rs. 4 a month. At Sultanganj in Patna City, one Sain Mia, about twenty years ago, conceived the idea of using the ordinary country loom for the manufacture of durris. The karga durri, as it is called is now manufactured in large quantities. This is a rare instance of improvement in an industry owing to the ingenuity or enterprise of a worker. The weavers in Patna earn from Rs. 7 to Rs. 12 a month; but they have not been able to raise the selling price of their goods with the general rise of prices. The large shatrangi is dying out at that place.

Publicity required.

The invention of the karga durri.

Mr. Mukerji has several suggestions; but to my mind nothing much can be done, unless a capitalist works, for example, the whole of the Obra industry. At present the Gaya District Board and the local exhibitions give some assistance: much is due to the patronage of Europeans. The suggestions are as follows:—

(1) There should be show rooms at central places; (2) only the best materials should be used; (3) scholarships at the expense of wealthy zamindars should be given for the study of the superior methods at Bikanir, Mirzapur, Bhawalpur and Warangol; (4) only indigenous dyes should be used; (5) local enterprise should start factories, utilising men trained in jails; (6) the best jail methods should be employed; (7) advertisements and encouragement should be given at the local fairs. Mr. Jvala Pershad, who wrote the monograph for the United Provinces in 1907, pointed out the importance of fairs and exhibitions to take the place of the art of advertisement.

Mr. Mukerji's recommendation.

Pottery and Earthenware.

The potter is proverbially not particularly intelligent: he is parsimonious and self-centred. Hence much improvement cannot be expected from his class. The village manufacture of earthen utensils is much the same as it was in 1890. The works of Messrs. Burn & Co, at Raniganj, in Burdwan district, though employing over 1,100 workmen, have not had any appreciable affect on the work of the potter outside: the boys who are trained in modelling there work on as journeymen. The chief work of the firm is still the manufacture of bricks, tiles and drain-pipe of the annual value of about seven lakhs. Brick burning up to 800 million bricks, in the year, is a leading industry in the Serampore subdivision of Hooghly district. The pottery works at Kaliganj in Khulna, continue to enjoy popularity. A superior quality of water pots is made at Kanthalia, in Murshidabad district. There is a large export of pottery from the Ghatal subdivision in Midnapore district. In the Bihar districts, pottery is of importance in Sewan, Samastipur and Sasaram subdivisions. The pottery of Sasaram is flourishing; that of Sewan requires a more extensive market. In the south of Sasaram subdivision at Banjari is an up-to-date manufactory, run by electric power, where Messrs. Octavius, Steel & Co. manufacture earthen tiles and wooden bobbins. The industry is prosperous and capable of development. The manufacture of earthen vessels as ordinary household articles, is, of course, carried on everywhere. There is a special development in the manufacture of flower pots in the south of Calcutta. I have never seen finer firing than that of B. C. Pal & Sons, at 20, Diamond Harbour Road.

No change in country pottery.

Manufacture of articles from china clay.

The chief development since Mr. Collin's report, is the manufacture of white porcelain from kaolin. Mr. Collin said the difficulty was to find the proper clay. Deposits of decomposed felspar or kaolin have been found at Mangalhat, between the Taljhari and Rajmahal railway stations in the Sonthal Parganas. This was worked privately in 1902-03, but not successfully. It has been taken up again with much success by the Calcutta Pottery Works, 45, Tangra Road, Calcutta, which are the result of the enterprise of Maharaja Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar, and Babu Baikantha Nath Sen of Berhampore. This firm is a good example of what is required in Bengal for indigenous development. It has sufficient working capital; it has its own coal and its own raw material; it has a ceramic expert in Mr. S. Deb, who studied at the Higher Institute of Technology in Tokyó, Japan; it has up-to-date German and English machinery, and up-to-date furnaces with the best of Stourbridge fireclay bricks; it has found a local market, as well as an export market, in ink-pots, gallipots, insulators, cups, saucers and plates, and even dolls. It is a curious development to find in Calcutta, as the product of Indian labour, such a western product as a chinaware doll dressed in European clothes. I have shown the firm what are the white porcelain articles which are required by the Medical Store Department at Calcutta and the Pasteur Institute at Kasauli, and have placed the firm in touch with these departments. The firm might be able to manufacture according to these specifications. The Government departments named are willing to purchase locally if the quality and price do not compare unfavourably with the imported articles.

Others have taken up the manufacture of kaolin. The works of the Bengal Pottery Works, Limited, are at Baranagar and the show-room is at 20, Cornwallis Street. This company has only Rs. 5,000 paid up out of Rs. 20,000 advanced capital, and suffers accordingly. A factory which has only six workman cannot be expected to do very much. Cups, saucers and small china ornaments are made, but I regret to have to say that the workmanship is extremely bad. This firm gets its supply of clay material from the Calcutta Pottery Works and its glazing material from abroad. The work was started by Babu Satya Charan Bose, who is now the managing agent. Another small attempt is the Eureka Porcelain Works, started at Giridih by Mr. M. N. Dutt, under the patronage of Mr. Justice Sharfuddin. Mr. Dutt had first-hand knowledge of such work in South-East China. The material is obtained from Garanji, 36 miles from Giridih, discovered in 1903. Both these enterprises, however require further outlay of capital, and a defined market for their goods.

Glazing now possible in Bengal.

Kaolin has also been found in the Orissa Garjats, and in Belaur in Gaya district. It is also called china clay. Sir Thomas Holland, F.R.S., the Director of the Geological Survey, was good enough at my request to depute Mr. Murray Stuart of the Geological Survey to examine locally these kaolin deposits. The experience of the Calcutta Pottery Works is very hopeful for the future of this real swadeshi industry. The chief thing is that Mr. Deb has succeeded in producing a glaze. Bengal has previously not had the skill or the appliances for the special form of vitrification required. Sir William O'Shaughnessy as long ago as 1839 investigated the question of the production in India of glazed pottery, sufficient for use in Indian hospitals. He used lime-borate. It would be useful and probably economical if the felspar glazing in the up-to-date kilns of the Calcutta Pottery Works could produce locally an article, which at present has to be imported by scientific departments Mr. Collin in 1890 wrote that the potters of Bengal did not understand the art of glazing. The difficulty in Bengal is to find clay which will be sufficiently free from iron. Mr. T. N. Mukharji in his Monograph on Pottery in Bengal in 1895 wrote that glazing was all but unknown. In fact, in Bengal, pottery is almost entirely terra cotta, that is, plain unglazed ware.

The kind of articles manufactured and the methods of manufacture are described at pages 5 to 9 of the above monograph. The best potters are those on the banks of the Bhagirathi in the Burdwan district, where the clay is specially suited. The only suggestion I have for indigenous manufacture is the extension in the Bihar districts of the form of potter's wheel used in parts of Bengal. The Bihar wheel, the ancient "rota," is solid; the improved Bengali wheel has a heavy periphery attached by spokes to the central hub. The latter is mechanically more efficient.

The import trade.

The imports of earthenware and porcelain have risen in the last five years from 9½ lakhs to 14½ lakhs, and the feature of the trade is the increase from Germany and Austro-Hungary and the decrease from Belgium. The United Kingdom supplies over a third of the total.

CARPENTRY.

Decline of the Hindu carpenter in Bengal.

Carpenters are found scattered all over the province, and, except in the case of cabinet and furniture making, carpentry is not a centralized industry. There has not been much change in the disposition of the workmen throughout the province since 1890. There has, however, been a change in the character of the work and in the class of workmen. In Calcutta, Hindu carpenters formerly were in the ascendency; but, owing to the fact that youths of the younger generation are frequently not apprenticed to the trade, but encouraged to be clerks, the Hindu carpenters are giving place to Muhammadan and Chinese carpenters. I find the same complaint from a large private employer like Messrs. Lazarus and Company, as well as from a large Government workshop like the Kidderpore Dock-yard. Mr. John Wallace, the editor of Indian Textile Journal in a recent article in Cassier's Magazine on the industrial regeneration of India has mentioned that the chief faults of the Indian carpenter are his neglect of accurate measurement, his carelessness with regard to the efficiency of his tools, and his lack of perception of the value of time as a factor in the execution of work. This fault of unpunctuality, I may note, is attributed specially to the carpenter in the people's proverbs. The carpenter's saw, Mr. Wallace adds, is in such a bad order that he cuts tenons as a rule with a mallet and chisel, and his ignorance of gauges renders him unable to make even twenty articles exactly alike; also the carpenter rarely knows what size of nail or screw is required on a given job, whilst his screw is always too small. The carpenter has to be taught to measure accurately, to use sharp tools, and to cut to the mark. In Calcutta under European supervision the workmen of Messrs. Lazarus and Company conform to these axioms and the firm of the Chatterjee Furnishing Company, 52-7, Bowbazar, have an equally high standard, but much of the ordinary bazar work is scamped. There is apparently no inducement for the ordinary worker to follow a high standard. A good carpenter can earn in Calcutta from ten annas to one rupee a day, and on piece-work a good man might earn even as much as Rs. 40 a month. As regards the quality of the work, it is, of course, a question of cost; it depends upon how much people are willing to pay for good articles. At Dinapore the quality of the furniture mentioned by Mr. Collin is still good and the prices are reasonable, but not cheap. At Ghatal I found plain rough carpentry, which was just what was desired and what the people were willing to purchase. Mr. Collin pointed out that the supply of improved tools and the supply of designs were two essentials for improvement. I find that the workmen appreciate good tools when they can afford to pay for them. And the country-made rope bit is as efficient for ordinary work as the more expensive English bit turned by means of a bitstock. The native lathe with its double rope ends should, however, be supplanted by a rope pulley which would work continuously when driven by a large wooden wheel. This kind is to be found outside Bengal, in Cawnpore and in Madras. As for design, much improvement has been made by Europeans in the Bihar districts; they have retained carpenters whom they cause to copy designs and turn out articles with high finish. In Madhupur near the town of Monghyr I found a carpenter who worked from an old catalogue of Messrs. Lazarus and Company, and a catalogue of an English wholesale furniture manufacturer. His work was apparently appreciated by well-to-do Indians. He is bringing up his boy in his business. In a decentralised industry it is difficult to introduce the leaven which will leaven the whole lump. I have, however, suggested in my report on industrial education that there should be good schools of carpentry at Cuttack, Gaya and Bettiah, but the difficulty is to obtain instructors who will be superior to the bazar mistri. But I have found that there are carpenters with a high degree of skill in Cuttack and in the Bihar districts, and such could be recruited if the pay were sufficiently attractive. It must be remembered, however, that it is the work-shops under European control which are the real centres of technical instruction. But the men trained in such workshops remain as a rule with their employers, and consequently do not extend their training to their countrymen. Carpentry is the most common form of industrial employment taught by the Missionary agencies. The best results are those obtained by the Oxford Mission Industrial School at Ballyganj in Calcutta and the Hatchapra Church Missionary Society Industrial School at Hatchapra in the Nadia district. The youths trained at these schools are encouraged to earn their livelihood at the craft. Much good can be done by the insistence on the teaching of drawing to scale in all industrial schools. As Mr. Nathan has remarked in his review of the progress of education in India (1898-1902), it is a poor testimony to the efficiency of industrial schools in Bengal that, although carpentry is the principal object of instruction, the native carpenter of Calcutta does not hold his own against his Chinese rival. The Hon'ble Mr. F. A. Larmour in the Bengal Council on the 4th April 1908, stated that the Bengali carpenter gets small wages, but that he earns for his employer even less than he gets, that he takes little or no interest in his work, and if not carefully watched will scamp his job. So the Hon'ble Member emphasized the necessity for some system of training that will improve the status of the Indian mechanic.

Real centres instruction.

This trade furnishes a good opening for middle class capitalists outside Calcutta. They should have some machine plant driven by mechanical power, such as a band saw planing and morticing machines; they should make use of the services of existing carpenter mistris in places like Burdwan, Cuttack, Gaya, Monghyr, Bettiah, Muzaffarpur; they should insist on good quality and should advertise, as the successful shops in Bowbazar, Calcutta, have done. But a master-carpenter should also have skill and knowledge, which is best acquired by the unpalatable drudgery of a regular apprenticeship I have tried without success to get middle class youths apprenticed to the carpentry trade.

Suitable sites and methods for development.

Mat-making and Basket Ware.

The details given in paragraph 22 of Mr. Collin's report still hold good. If there has been any change, it is in the improved exports in the Kishanganj sub-division of the Purnea district, by the opening of the Barsoi Extension. Mats and palm-leaf braids are manufactured at Falta and Diamond Harbour in the 24-Parganas district and are exported to Calcutta for sale. There is some centralised mat-making in Jessore district, Nuddea district, Sitamarhi sub-division and throughout Orissa. The industry in the Sabang and Panskura thanas of Midnapore district gives employment to about a thousand workers; as much as one thousand to two thousand rupees is paid on each hát day at each of the four recognised local markets. There have been increased exports, but the profits have not correspondingly increased on account of the increase in the prices of jute string and of the mandari reeds. The industry is a flourishing one. The workers have a steady cash market close to their own homes. There are four leading dealers who export goods to Postabazar in Calcutta. The workers told me that they were quite ready to adopt new designs, but they asked what pecuniary benefit this would be to them. Mr. Collin suggested in paragraph 78 that this was one of the special home industries which might be assisted by the establishment of classes, and he specially suggested the above mentioned localities in South Midnapore. He said, however, that the subject was one perhaps for private enterprise. I agree with Mr. Collin that there is no reason why India should not export a large quantity of fancy and useful basket ware. But I do not think that we can do more than call the attention of private enterprise to the possibility in this direction.

An opening for private enterprise.

Curing, Tanning and Leather Work.

In 1890, Mr. Collin drew attention to the curing of leather in a few factories in Calcutta, and to the small manufacturing work done in Calcutta, Patna and Darbhanga.

Changes since 1890.

Since then, there have been phenomenal exports of hides and skins from Bengal. There was till 1907 an extraordinary world demand for leather, and so the Indian market was exploited to the full. Motor cars, change of taste in boot leather, and the boom in the cotton industry, all contributed as causes. In December 1906, an expert called attention to the scarcity of hides. In 1907 there has been a strong reaction.

Exports.

The exports from Calcutta are instructive:—

Raw skins	192	327	255	176
	503	775	809	556 lakhs.

The prohibitive rates against tanned goods on the Continent and America prevent any export. England is the only country to which there is an export of tanned goods.

Imports.

The imports of boots and shoes from abroad into Calcutta were as follows:—

1902-03.	1903-04.	1904-05.	1905-06.	1906-07.	1907-08.
9·01	9·56	12·86	10·93	6·41	9·40 lakhs.

The "boycott" movement contributed to the fall in 1906-07. The imports of leather other than boots and shoes consist of unwrought leather, saddlery and harness, and other sorts. There was a decrease in imported saddlery also:—

Imports (in lakhs) of—	1902-03.	1903-04.	1904-05.	1905-06.	1906-07.
Unwrought leather ...	2·66	2·08	2·29	2·21	2·42
Saddlery	2·13	2·35	2·19	1·94	1·67
Other Sorts	2·94	3·36	3·23	3·24	3·34

The present moment is propitious in Bengal for the increased local manufacture of leather goods for local consumption, not for export; and this consumption includes both country shoes and shoes of European pattern.

Special enquiry directed by Government in 1907.

The committee appointed by the Government of Bengal in 1904 to consider industrial education in Bengal, resolved that the fact that there was a large export of uncured hides should be brought to the notice of Government, so that enquiries might be instituted. In consequence of this Mr. E. R. Watson, M.A., F. C. S., Indian Educational Service, has recently prepared two valuable reports in connection with the leather industry, one concerning the curing, the other concerning the tanning of hides. These reports have been circulated to many associations and individuals who are likely to be interested in the industry. These reports are full and suggestive. I give below my own views.

Curing of hides.

As regards curing, Mr. Watson's proposals are two-fold, to give publicity to the artificial state of the Calcutta hide trade, in which the advantage to the seller is almost in favour of badly cured hides, and to set a good example by starting a demonstration curing department under Government auspices. For the first object the Calcutta hide merchants are to be asked through the Bengal Chamber of Commerce to form an association of hide buyers. This I think should be done; such an association would be analogous to the associations recognised by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce (see page 95, Report of 1906, Vol. I), such as the Jute Fabrics Shippers' Association and so on. Still the proposal has been mooted before without success, and all the hide buyers are not enthusiastic. And next, the principal associations of tanners in Europe and America, it is proposed, should be addressed in order that the requirements of the tanning trade might be more carefully attended to by the collecting and distributing trade. On this I would suggest that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce might be requested to make this reference, rather than that Government should do so itself.

As regards a demonstration department at Tangra on the east of Calcutta, which would be the means of the second object—to show the correct method of curing—I think that this is feasible; but I suggest that it would be better if the actual work of buying, curing and selling were done by a private firm with the help and under the advice of the expert appointed by Government. I have sounded the firm who have the lease of the bhagar under the Cossipore-Chitpur Municipality. Sheikh Nabi Buksh was a sorter for Messrs. Thomson, Lehzen & Co., and Munshi Ramzan Ali, his brother, was a buyer for Messrs. Cohn Brothers and Fuchs. These are practical men. I suggest, as Mr. Watson does, that Government should acquire a site, and erect sheds, and appoint and pay a supérintendent; but that an agreement should be made with this firm, that they should try and sell, but that the flaying and curing should be done under the advice of a Government superintendent. The methods proposed by Mr. Watson could be adopted; to flay without scoring, and to cure with Madras sea salt. The firm have told me that they would work under these conditions. Mr. Watson thinks no butcher or chamar would allow a Government instructor to interfere in the curing of hides, which were the butcher's or chamar's own property. Perhaps not in the case of small men; but these men are not small men. The advantage is, if the scheme could be worked, that the proof of commercial success is at once apparent, whereas if Government financed the buying and selling, it might be not so practical a demonstration. If Tangra be not considered a suitable site, it might be possible to start such a demonstration curing department at a local centre of the hide trade, such as Patna.

After further personal enquiries in Darbhanga district, I do not favour the proposal of Mr. Watson to start a hide collecting agency in the north of Darbhanga district directly under Government control. The improvement in curing, I consider, must be made by the insistence on a better cure by the large firms acting through their mufassal agencies. Messrs. Schröder, Smidt and Company have improved curing in this way, and Messrs. Ralli Brothers, who have recently taken up Muzaffarpur district, might do the same. It is a matter which concerns the self-interest of the exporters. The Collector of Customs has reported that during 1907-08 there were complaints on the part of German and Austro-Hungarian tanners regarding the systematic manner in which some Calcutta trade shippers have been lowering the standard of their assortments.

Tanning of hides.

Turning now to the tanning of hides, I find that Mr. Watson's recommendation completely tally with the results of my own enquiries. There has always been some tanning done in Calcutta and the suburbs—perhaps up to five lakhs a year. The oldest firm is Messrs. J. Teil and Co., of Kidderpore. There are four places outside of Calcutta where tanning has been taken up in recent years. Mr. Madhu Sudan Das, C.I.E., has the Utkal Tannery at Cuttack, which has a retail depôt in College Street, Calcutta. He gets the hides principally from the Orissa Tributary States, has a German tanning expert, and a English practical boot-maker from Messrs. Cooper, Allen & Co., Cawnpore, and lately was turning out about 400 or 500 pairs a month. Mr. Bipra Das Pal Chaudhuri, who has in other things shown enterprise in advance of his countrymen, has a small factory at Maheshgunj, Nadia district, with a local agency at 7, Mirzapur Street, Calcutta; has as manager, Babu Sisir Bose, who studied for a time under Mr. Chatterton in Madras; and makes a speciality of chrome-tanning. Dr. Nil Ratna Sircar has the National Tannery,—a small chrome-tanning business, near No. 4 Bridge, in Beliaghatta, with a retail shop at 66-2, Harrison Road. This place is to be used as a training ground for students of the Bengal Technical Institute. All these three gentlemen are directors of a new Boot and Equipment Factory Company, Limited, which has been started at Agra in the United Provinces by amalgamation with the Steuart Factory Company of Pandit Mohan Krishna

Dhar. It was at first proposed that the new company should acquire the factories at Cuttack and Maheshganj, but this idea has been since dropped. This company have engaged Mr. P. A. Taher, B.A., a young Muhammadan of Hooghly district, who has had a specialised training on tanning and leather work in America. It would therefore appear that the advice of Mr. Watson, namely, to make known the desirability of establishing tanneries in Bengal, would be taken if it were published. At Bankura, Ranchi and Muzaffarpur I have suggested to local people that there is a hopeful future for tanneries and factories if they be started where there are (1) a hide market, (2) a supply of the raw material for tanning, (3) good water, (4) a cheap supply of labour and (5) local colony of chamars or muchis. At the same time I fully recognise the prejudices which must necessarily exist amongst the Hindu community against this industry. And my efforts to bring capitalist and expert together, for instance, at Bankura, have not been so far successful. But I fully approve Mr. Watson's recommendations that the Government of India should be asked to establish a branch Army Supply Harness and Saddlery Factory in Bengal, that the establishment of local tanneries be encouraged, that the patronage of the Bengal Government, say for example, in foot-wear for constables and warders, should be given to local factories, and that scholarships be given by Government to youths desirous of studying at Madras or at Cawnpore, or, I would add, of going abroad under the auspices of the Association for the Advancement of Scientific and Industrial Education of Indians. For such scholarships I would suggest Rs. 50 a month, for two years at Cawnpore, or for one year at Madras; and Rs. 50 a month for two years in Europe or America.

Requisite for tanning in Bengal.

Tanning materials.

The difficulty about curing may right itself with the help of a little practical instruction from Government. But the chief difficulty about tanning is in the supply of a cheap and plentiful tanning material. The chief material used in Bengal and Upper India is the babul bark (acacia arabica). The Cawnpore manufacturers complain that they have to go further afield for their bark: the President of the Upper India Chamber of Commerce has suggested that the bark used in Madras known as the tanner's cassia (cassia auriculata) should be cultivated in Upper India. The myrobalan plant (terminalia chebula) is found in Chota Nagpur districts. An extract from the fruits is prepared by the Bengal Tanners and Dyers Extract Co. of Raniganj and exported. The Nadia Tannery at Maheshganj uses myrobalan fruits and Madras bark, as well as chrome salts. The Cuttack tannery uses vegetable bark, and so do all the Calcutta tanners. Mr. Hooper, F.I.C., F.C.S., of the Indian Museum, suggests that in Bengal the Australian wattle bark (acacia decurrens) should be cultivated. Babul bark gives only 16 per cent. of tannin, while the cassia auriculata gives 23 per cent., terminalia chebula 28 per cent. and acacia decurrens 33 per cent. The present problem is, however, not the cultivation of tannin for export; the English and Continental tanners will not change their tanning agents readily. The problem is the tanning of some of the hides for local leather manufacture, and the simplest course is to increase the quantity of the tanning materials which are locally procurable. The babul tree unfortunately is destroyed after use, whereas the South Indian agent, the cassia auriculata, gives a perennial crop. Doctor McCann's Monograph on the Dyes and Tans of Bengal was prepared as long ago as 1883; neither that work nor Mr. Hooper's monograph of 1902 on tanning materials, nor the Bengal Monograph of 1904, Chapter VI on tanning materials, furnish the information which a practical tanner in Bengal wants, namely, a full and accurate account of the habitat of the babul and other local tanning agents. It is desirable that the Bengal Agricultural Department should make this enquiry, and should experiment in growing the trees which have been suggested. The Agricultural Ledger No. 9 of 1896 tells us that the babul is not a forest tree in Bengal, but a roadside and village tree.

Chrome-tanning.

As regards chrome-tanning, it is more independent of local conditions. The potassium chrome alum can be prepared by chemical manufactories in Bengal by the addition of sulphuric acid to a solution of potassium dechromate and by passing sulphur dioxide through the liquid. I visited the Government chrome-tannery in Madras. It has quite recently been enlarged, and those who wish to take up the industry, should study there. Chrome-tanning is successful at the new Agra factory. Some good chrome-tanning was recently done in Musaffarpur, and exhibited at the Bankipore Exhibition in January 1908. From all I can gather, there appears to be a good future for chrome-tanning in Bengal.

At Bankura I came across a colony of leather workers, who supplied work to A. C. Roy, of Faujdari Balakhana, Tiretta Bazar, Calcutta, under the name of the Bankura Boot and Shoe Factory. The leather they received from the Bengal Tannery, Chowson Tannery and other firms in Calcutta. This business might be better organised, and they could do better work if they possessed wooden or metal lasts on which to work. I suggested to them an inexpensive expedient to take the place of a metal last. There is also a good opening for a leather factory at Dumka, where the craftsmen have some enterprise.

Mr. Rowland Chandra, who wrote the Bengal Monograph in 1904 has several recommendations. His remarks at page 24-26 should be studied by capitalists and others interested in the subject. I am sorry to find that the existence of this monograph was not even known to one who was in charge of a Bengal tannery. Mr. Chandra suggested amongst other things that young men should study abroad. Six have been sent by the Scientific Association in Calcutta, and the industry was the second selection of the Bengal Government for the State technical scholarship in 1908.

Iron and Steel Work.

Insignificance of indigenous work.

Iron and steel work is a subject of the Provincial Monograph prescribed for 1907. It was prepared by Mr. E. R Watson, M.A., F.C.S., of the Indian Educational Service, and is still under issue. Mr. Watson has stated that the art of working in iron and steel in Bengal has from very remote times been indebted to the outside world for assistance, not only by ideas but by actual supervision and control of the workers by foreign experts, so that it becomes almost a question whether any part of the industry can be called indigenous. Machinery and engineering workshops are concentrated in Howrah and Calcutta. Iron foundries are in the same neighbourhood and in the Burdwan district. Practically all indigenous workers are Hindus, while the Mussalman workers in iron and steel are almost all confined to factories conducted on European lines. Mr. Watson's report is very full and interesting; and as it is quite up-to-date, those who desire detailed information, especially regarding statistics, should refer to it. As regards the outturn of indigenous work the country blacksmith is not capable of much improvement. He supplies cheap plain articles for which there is a local demand. A small beginning in improvement has been made by the extension of village schools in the Chota Nagpur districts, specially in Hazaribagh. At Jhalda in Manbhum district I found that the workers were capable of doing much better work than they were doing. They require an extended market for their manufactures. A small capitalist might do a good business there. I tried to interest a local capitalist in this work. They should be induced to take up the manufacture of knives and scissors, instead of sword-sticks, the export of which has been stopped.

Cutlery.

There has been, I think, an extension of the manufacture of cutlery since 1890. I found Prem Chand Mistri whom Mr. Collin visited, still working at Kanchannagar near Burdwan. He has shown his enterprise by obtaining a small size oil engine for working his lathes. He is bringing up his son to follow him, and some of his workmen have been able to start for themselves. There is also good cutlery made at Shaspur, thirty miles from Bishnupur in Bankura district. One Makhan Kamar has taken to the use of an iron pedal lathe on the model of the sewing machine. A good workman can earn up to one rupee a day. I found that the best cutlery was made from old cast-off English files. Babu N. M. Bose, an educated young man in Muzaffarpur, has taken up the manufacture of surgical cutlery. Bechu Mistri and his son of Jagadispur in Shahabad district turn out work of the highest quality. I find cutlery taken up specially in Birbhum, Bankura, 24-Parganas, Khulna and Nadia. Superior nut-crackers (jantis) are made in Jangipur subdivision in Murshidabad, and in Satkhira subdivision in Khulna. Messrs. Khan and Co., of Sookea's Street, Calcutta, have a high reputation.

This cutlery trade furnishes an opening for the small capitalist. Improved mechanical appliances for filing and polishing are required, and a system of distribution of the completed product at a central place is essential.

Rice bowls.

The figures regarding the import of rice bowls from the United Kingdom into Calcutta should afford reflection.

1902-03	1903-04	1904-05	1905-06	1906-07
7	7·9	8·6	8	8 lakhs.

These cast-iron rice bowls are universally used, yet not one is made in Bengal. The people prefer them to the old wrought iron karahis, which are also more expensive. Only one private attempt has to my knowledge been made in Bengal to manufacture these thin globular castings. The Principal of the Sibpur College, Mr. B. Heaton, suggests that the problem of making these thin castings in this country should be attempted to be solved by experiment in the workshop of the Sibpur College.

Steel trunks.

The manufacture of steel trunks has become very popular within the last three or four years. It owed its birth in Patna six years ago to Muhammadans from Allahabad. Mansudan Brothers started the Bihar Trunk Works in 1904 at Bhagalpur; and a man who learnt the art in a Calcutta shop has started in Khagra, at Berhampore. Murshidabad district has four factories altogether. These small factories are doing well and the prices are cheaper than those of English-made goods. The Berhampore man has agencies both in Rampur Boalia and in Calcutta. Although the sheet metal has to be imported, yet this is an industry which might be taken up by small capitalists in the same way as has been done by the Berhampore man. He has good material, good workmanship and good distribution. The Arya Factory of 107, Machua Bazar Road, Calcutta, turns out good articles. Importers such as Messrs. Alexander Young and Company are now putting in the market ready-made corner pieces. This is a convenience as the machinery for stamping dies locally would be rather expensive. Manufacturers can obtain the plant for ridging the steel sheets from Messrs. T. Rhodes and Son of Wakefield, England. I found that neither the Patna nor the Bhagalpur manufacturers were reaching the market which exists at their own doors. A dealer at Madhubani in Darbhanga district was obtaining his goods from Allahabad. The reason was that the Patna goods were not sufficiently well finished. I advised the Bhagalpur firm to make their hinges and locks stronger. Another word of warning is that these manufacturers should resist the temptation to produce inferior articles. Since the industry started, some manufacturers have been using sheets of a 102-lbs to the bundle instead of 112.

Iron-safes.

Another form of iron industry is open to the small capitalist, viz., the manufacture of iron-safes. There is one enterprising blacksmith in village Lohani, thana Kushtia, who since 1905 has been manufacturing iron-safes at a cost of fifty rupees to one hundred rupees. Messrs. Das and Company, Chitpur, have had for some time a reputation in this class of work.

Guns.

Mr. Collin gave a full account of the manufacture of guns at Monghyr. The industry still thrives in Cossimbazar, Monghyr, so called after the Nawab who brought a carpenter from Delhi for making gun stocks, from which small beginning this gun industry arose. There used to be 22 shops, but there are now only 13. The annual outturn of guns and pistols rose from two thousand in 1890 to three thousand in 1897. At present the number manufactured annually is about eight hundred. It is really wonderful what fine results can be obtained by means of the crudest of methods and the simplest of appliances. The gunsmiths complained of loss of custom; but they appear to be sweated by the wholesale Indian firms in Calcutta, about six in number, who buy their guns at eight to ten rupees for a single-barrel and fifteen to twenty rupees for a double-barrel gun. The guns made to order fetch higher values according to their quality. A single-barrel breech-loader costs locally thirty rupees, a double-barrel breech-loader fifty rupees. A good workman can earn as much as thirty rupees a month. Sudarsan Mistry has sometimes as many as 20 workmen. Mr. Collin suggested that the gun barrels should be tested before they were sold and pointed out that there could have been no difficulty in testing them in the same way as the water tubes of boilers are tested. This suggestion, however, was not accepted by the then Commissioner of Bhagalpur on the ground that it would be a needless interference with the industry. But I may be permitted to point out that the workmen themselves asked that an inspector be appointed. However, it has not been brought into notice in recent years that the bursting of Monghyr barrels has been so marked as to necessitate Government interference. Similar guns, but inferior in quality, are made at Jhalda in Manbhum district. The Government rifle factory at Ichapur is silently effecting a revolution in the teaching of Indian workmen. The most callow of labour material is being induced under skilled supervision and guidance to turn out the highest class of work in which accuracy is required.

Future progress in the manufacture of steel.

But the real future of the iron industry in Bengal depends upon the local manufacture of steel, and in Mr. Watson's words "the only pleasing side of the industry in this province is what we may call the 'modern industry,' namely, iron and steel work carried on in large works according to European methods" Mr. Watson proceeds to state:—"This industry is, of course, quite small, but it has developed very greatly within recent years, and its condition and future prospects appear very hopeful. And although there are only a few such, this province can boast of engineering works which in size and equipment compare very favourably with all but the largest works in England; and the Bengal Iron and Steel Works produce pig-iron in blast furnaces of the most up-to-date pattern." In fact it is the only province in which pig-iron is produced. As regards the manufacture of steel it is a melancholy sight to see plant to the value of a hundred thousand pounds sterling lying idle at Barakar. In the case of the Bengal Iron and Steel Works a subsidy to the extent of Rs. 45,000 a year, was granted by the Secretary of State in 1903, coupled with the provision that the material sold to Government should be three per cent. under normal prices. But no definite standing order for material was given. Government, however, is prepared to subsidise the Tata Iron and Steel Co., which has arranged to start operations in Bengal at Kalimati on the Bengal Nagpur Railway, to the extent of a standing order of twenty thousand tons of steel per year for ten years. The latter firm selected its site in Bengal after making the most detailed scientific preliminary enquiries. The Bengal Iron and Steel Co. in 1903-1904 laid down plant for the outturn of twenty thousand tons of steel per year; but in two years the total amount of orders from Government was only for six hundred tons altogether, requiring no fewer than seventy rolling sections and representing less than three tons per order. It is a matter for regret that in the case of the local firm the good will of Goverment was not converted into a tangible standing order. As Mr. Watson has stated, the production of steel from country pig appears to be the advance which above all others is now required in the local industry. In the manufacture of pig-iron there is surely something wrong when Indian requirements are met by orders from England, while the Bengal Iron and Steel Company have to seek a market outside of India in Australia. In 1906-07, 1,996 tons were sent abroad from Bengal, principally to Australia. The total production of pig at the works in that year was 39,246 tons. The proposed new works of the Tata Iron and Steel Company, at Kalimati are not noticed by Mr. Watson in his monograph. The works will have far reaching influences in Bengal. Coal in the Jherria field, iron in Gurumaishini in Mourbhanj, manganese and lime stone quarries in the Central Provinces have all been acquired. It is anticipated that at Kalimati will be prepared not only iron but steel joists and structural shapes, and all sizes and shapes of steel bars; and that within five years work will be available for 20,000 people. The meaning of this is apparent when it is stated that all the existing iron and steel and engineering works in Bengal are estimated to give employment at present to only 40,000 men.

Work in Brass, Bell Metal and Other Alloys.

Stability of the industry.

This industry I have examined in considerable detail, and am able to say that there has been no decline; in fact it has, if anything, improved within the last ten years. Yet, although the industry is flourishing, I think much could be done in cheapening the cost of production. The monograph on brass was written by Mr. T. N. Mukharji in 1894. He gives an exhaustive list of places, showing the distribution of the industry throughout the province, and its concentration in the Burdwan Division. Mr. Mukharji, who has retired for several years, and who was the main spring of the Indian Industrial Association, tells me that he had not time for much local enquiry, and compiled most of his monograph from district reports. He has, however, kept in touch with industrial matters, and his present views are therefore, of interest. These are:—(1) The industry is not on the decline. (2) The enamelled ware has not been an altogether successful competitor, owing to the defects of the ware, the swadesh movement, and the views of orthodox Hindus about the use of iron as well as to the fact that old brass ware has always a market value. (3) But the industry might have been developed further; the high price of copper was one of the obstacles. The following figures are instructive:—

I find that the district reports of 1894 reported a decline owing to the import and use of enamelled ware and other ware made of zinc and tin. In 1898, the rise in the cost of living had affected the outturn. There was a strong fillip to the manufacture in 1905, but early in 1907 the price of the raw materials, especially copper, led either to dull trade or to an increase in the prices of the local products.

The industry is of importance in the following places:—

Wages and organization in Bengal.

A perusal of the Provincial Monographs in brassware (written by Mr. Dampier for the United Provinces, Mr. Johnstone for the Panjab, and by Mr. Mahon for the Central Provinces) reveals a similarity to the conditions in Bengal, and specially the fact that the industry is not confined to kansaris or thatheras. All castes appear to work at it. I found a kayestha fashioning a copper dish in North Calcutta; a teli manufacturing the well known Chandrakona horn; and in Berhampur I found baydis and kaivarttas handling bell-metal. The workmen are paid in most places at piece-rates per seer and per maund, and can earn from Rs. 15 to Rs. 19 a month in Bengal, and Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 in Bihar; and one hard worker in Bhawanipur, Calcutta, was getting up to Rs. 30. Labour rates vary from 1½ to 5 annas for beaten brass per seer, and 7 to 9 annas for cast metal. From some old figures of 1876, I find the master's return on his outlay for material and labour was 15 per cent. The figures given to me in 1907 in respect of plain beaten brass work showed a return of 20 per cent, but rent had to be paid out of that. This industry is better organized than any other in the province; and it is most highly organized at Ghatal and Kharar in Midnapore district. The masters there are enterprising and wealthy; they obtain the material in economically large quantities, tin from Straits Settlements and copper from Japan and so on; they distribute the labour; they pay by piece-work, and they have a steady demand from Bara Bazar in Calcutta. Krishnamani Paramanik and some others have more than 100 men in their factories. They told me that 4,000 at Kharar out of a population of 9,000 were metal-workers; the whole village resounds with the beat of the hammer on the bell metal. In Mr. Collin's report, paragraph 13, are mentioned the specialities of various places. To that list may be added Kharar for bell metal thalis; Ghatal for garhus; and Kansaripara, Calcutta, for large brass vessels.

Mr. Collin in the Industrial Survey, 1890, recommended: (1) the use of dies for stamping out the metal, (2) better hand lathes, and (3) plate moulding. His view then was, and it is mine:—"Existing processes are costly, and a great saving of hand labour might be effected by machinery." Mr. Bipra Das Pal Chaudhuri of Moheshganj and Calcutta, who studied mechanical engineering at Middlesborough, England, and has had practical experience of brass manufacture, has assured me that there is an opening in brass manufacture for the educated capitalist; for, on the one hand, the cost of raw material is falling, and on the other hand, there is an increased demand for good ware from those who can afford to pay for it. It should be remembered however, that the copper trade is subject to fluctuations; at present, the American mines have outstripped the demand, and Europe has became "gorged" with copper.

Moulding.

It seems to me that there is room for improvement in the (1) moulding, (2) hammering and (3) lathe work In moulding, there are three methods for the manufacture of the ordinary lota. In Balasore, a layer of wax is placed over an inner core, and an earthen mould over the wax. The wax is melted out and leaves a hollow space. In Bengal proper and at Mirzapur, United Provinces, the outer mould is made first in earth upon any old metal vessel; this mould is divided vertically in two halves, and the imprisoned pattern is then released and the parts joined again. Then the inner core is made by ramming earth inside the earthen outer mould. This core is taken out, scraped and dried, so that there is a space left for the casting. (Compare page 24, Brass Founder's Manual, Weale's Scientific Series.) In Bihar, a reverse method is followed: first, the inner core is laboriously made by additions of earth, and the core turned on an improvised lathe so as to take the shape required: next, the outer mould is made by plastering earth round the core, and the core is thinned again. The Bihar method has the merit that the artificer can make any shape he likes; but that is unnecessary, if articles of standard form are being turned out commercially. When I visited Madras, I found that method which is at present followed in Bihar was formerly followed there, but that it is now considered antiquated. The Orissa method is scientific, but expensive. The wax method is used also in making little models in Sambalpur and Gaya. In Bihar district the inner and outer mould are kept apart by little nail heads, except at Jamui and Gaya. There is also the method of making models, by making two matrices from a solid pattern, and placing the two together again. This is done at Gaya and Sambalpur.

Now I found only one man in the whole province who was making moulds from a special pattern, and even his next door neighbour was unaware of its merits. This man in Midnapore town had a very thin copper pattern made up of four pieces which fitted into one another. This he had been using for twenty years, making both the core and the outer mould from the same pattern. This ensured accuracy and saved much time. In Madras I found that aluminium vessels were being cast from a pattern vessel, made in two vertical pieces. From this suggestion I had a pattern lota experimentally made for me at Alipur Central Jail. It consists of an ordinary lota cut into two vertical halves, the pieces being kept together by four small friction clutches. The Patna braziers admitted to me that this method would be better for them, and I am endeavouring to circulate this pattern.

Stamping from dies.

The next improvement is in the stamping from dies instead of hammering. A hydraulic press worked by hand power, costing about Rs. 300, can give a pressure of 10 tons per square inches and press plates, thalis or rekabis, up to 9 inches in breadth. I have asked an agent of a firm importing these articles, to show them to the leading manufacturers in Kharar and North Midnapore. The bottom portion of the large gagras in Kansaripara, Calcutta, could also perhaps be stamped out by this method. Mr. Bipra Das Pal Chaudhuri and Babu Tarakali Chatterjee started the use of dies many years ago, but gave them up. Dies should be tried again. There will not now be the same prejudice against them.

In lathe work, it is not necessary that an improvement should necessarily mean steam power. In fact what can be tried first is an improvement on the hand lathe. At present one coolie, pulling a double-ended rope, gives a reciprocating movement to the axle, and there is thus waste of power at every reverse pull. What is used in Madras, might be copied in Bengal as a beginning. A large wooden wheel about the size of a cart wheel is propelled by a coolie holding a crank handle, and by means of a rope passing round the shaft of the lathe, communicates a continuous rotary motion. There is not only saving of time from the omission of the reverse pull, but by this device one coolie can work two lathes. This might be adopted at once in all the places where polishing is done on a factory system such as Khagra, Ghatal and Bankura. There is a further development, on which I am experimenting, in the use of a Romayne punkah machine for working this wheel.

If I had had more opportunity, I would have introduced these myself; I have circulated the ideas amongst many who are actually at work. The officer who may become Superintendent of Industries might very well push these methods by practical example. This will be more satisfactory than any system of teaching. I recommend that the big factories in Kharar, Kamarpara, Dainhat, and at Khagra should adopt power machinery, and that the smaller works should adopt improved hand methods.

Alloys.

In the making of alloys, we have nothing to teach the people, and they are themselves capable of adopting new ideas. For instance, about eight years ago at Bankura, they started making a nickel ware (1 part nickel, ½- or ⅓- zinc) which has a very fine polish; it is circulated in the neighbouring districts. But there is a want of enterprise in pushing wares in Bengal. Inferior Benares ware was being hawked about on the platform of Asansol station, in a district in which first class ware is produced. Where the work is organised, as at Kharar, the master workers should be induced to take up mechanical power; and at Sewan, at Patna and at Gaya, where the work is not organized, there is an opportunity for educated capitalists to organize the industry. It is not creditable to Bihar districts that there should be so large imports of Mirzapur ware.

Brass locks and telescopes.

Under the head of brass, I should like to notice the exceedingly good workmanship on brass locks turned out by the few families still left at Nataghar, near Sodepur, 24-Parganas, and in the manufacture of Newtonian telescopes carried out by Messrs. S. K. Dhar and Brothers, Hooghly. The present manager is Babu Gokul Nath Dhar. The first are artisans of the blacksmith class, who have once learnt in a European shop accuracy and neat finish and have never forgotten their training, and the other is a member of the educated middle class, who combines scientific knowledge with mechanical skill.

Glass Making.

No real progress in glass manufacture.

The constituents of glass are silica and alkali; both of these are obtainable in India, and the fire-clays for the furnaces and fuel are obtainable in this province, yet in spite of these advantages the manufacture of glass has not advanced beyond the rudest stages. The imports from the United Kingdom have remained almost stationary, whereas the imports from foreign countries, especially from Austria-Hungary, have steadily been increasing, until in 1906-07 the imports of glassware from that country into Calcutta were valued at Rs. 11·8 lakhs out of total glass imports of Rs. 38·2 lakhs.

In 1890 it was recorded that glass ware was made in Patna, Bhagalpur and in Calcutta. Simple vessels were made in the former place, and glass bangles at Bhagalpur and Patna. The material was river sand and impure carbonate of soda. In 1908 there is practically no manufacture of glass in the province. A few Muhammadans in Harrison Road, Calcutta, and in Lodikatra in Patna City, fashion simple articles by melting down broken glass. In Calcutta coarse pressed ware in the shape of ink bottles, medicine phials and small lamps are turned out by the thousand. The methods and patterns are of the simplest character.

Attempts in Upper India.

In Upper India, the manufacture of glass on a commercial scale has been attempted with some success at Rajpur, near Dehra Dun; at Ambala City; at Sekendra, Aligarh district; at Ahmedabad; and at Firozabad in Agra district. The Upper India Glass Works of Ambala City have a sample room in Harrison Road, Calcutta, and the factories of Rajpur, Sekendra and Ambala, as well as the Patna workmen sent exhibits to the Calcutta Exhibition of 1906. Now in Bengal proper there have been the Pioneer Glass Manufacturing Company, Limited, of Titagarh which worked from 1890 to 1899, and the works of the Indian Glass Company and later of the Bengal Glass Company at Sodepur from 1898 to 1902, both in the 24-Parganas district. I have visited the buildings of these two factories, now shut down, and have enquired regarding the cause of their failures, whereby several lakhs of rupees have apparently been spent to no purpose. The installation at Sodepur was found to have been most elaborate, while that at Titagarh was plainer but extensive. There were many minor causes; but the difficulty common to both was the supply of skilled labour for glass blowing in the climate of Bengal in the vicinity of Calcutta. For instance, it seems unfortunate that it should have been at the beginning of the hot weather in the valley of the Hooghly that the freshly imported European craftsmen should have started in a tropical country the trying occupation of glass blowing. It will be seen later that the Bombay expert, Mr. Wagle, has given his views regarding the difficulties and failures in Bengal and Upper India, and has held that many of the failures were preventable. The same has been said in Mr. Dobb's Monograph for the United Provinces (1895) as regards the experiments made at Jhelum (1877), Alipur (1879) and Bhagalpur (1882), all in Upper India.

Attempts in Bengal.

Mr. Wagle's enquiries in Bengal in 1904.

In 1900 the Bengal Government sent round samples of sand from the south of France and enquired whether similar sand for glass manufacture was available in Bengal. The Rajmahal sand mixed with potter's clay was found similar. Then in 1901 Sir Cecil Stevens suggested that the question of glass-making in Bengal might be investigated. Mr. N. B. Wagle, B.A. of Bombay, who had spent four years in Europe in practical glass-making, having worked as a journeyman in Blackfriars Glass Works in London and having studied at the University College, and at Newcastle, was appointed to prepare a report and to submit proposals for starting glass manufacture in Bengal. He had asked for Government assistance to tide over the interval of experience and research. His deputation extended from January to May 1904; but he did not submit his report until Government took strong measures. It was received two years afterwards, in February 1906. In the meantime Mr. Wagle had taken to other industries in the Gwalior State. I made an attempt to communicate with Mr. Wagle, but was informed from Gwalior that he had left India; and so his proposals for floating a joint-stock company could not be discussed with him. Nothing definite has yet been done on the basis of Mr. Wagle's report, but the subject came before a conference which was held in March 1906 to consider a proposal for a technical college in Bengal. Raja Pyari Mohan Mukharji thought that there should be a class for glass-making, preferably at Barakar. The conference recommended that the industry should be encouraged and that Government grants be offered to persons already engaged in it to enable them to proceed to Europe or America to improve their knowledge and skill and that assistance be given to them for finding a market for the sale of their manufactures. [Mr. Oldham's letter dated 2nd April 1906, paragraphs 10 and 16 (iii).] These are my own independent recommendations, as will appear below.

Mr. Wagle's report.

Mr. Wagle's report is full and interesting; but, as far as Bengal is concerned, the prospects of glass manufacture do not seem hopeful. The report should be read by itself, but for the present purpose it may be summarised as follows:—raw material,—available in Bengal; labour,—difficult to procure; previous attempts,—unsuccessful, but failures due to preventable causes; market,—local productions should be only plain and simple, as they would have to compete with the cost-price dumpings of the Belgium and Austrian manufactures. My own enquiries confirm these conclusions.

Raw materials.

Quartz sand is available at Rajmahal with over 90 per cent of silicic acid, and at Barakar, at Giridih and at Titagarh with over 80 per cent of silicic acid. The Titagarh factory used Hooghly river sand, but it has over 3 per cent of oxide of iron. The Sodepur factory imported Belgium sand with 98 per cent of silicic acid and obtained quartz from near Sini with 97 per cent of silicic acid The perfect sand must be fine, uniform, angular and white. Alkalis have to be purchased in Bengal proper. In the United Provinces the existence of reh in the soil is more convenient, but the enquiry made by the Government of India about 1880 disclosed the fact that reh could not give pure glass, yet that in a good furnace it could give superior bottle glass. (See Agricultural Ledger No. 5 of 1902 regarding Alkali Compounds).

Labour.

The supply of labour is really the most important item; a sufficient number of skilled hands and foremen from the old factories could be collected for a new factory; but experience has shown that the climate of the plains of Bengal handicaps the workmen. The up-country men are stronger than Bengali workmen, but not so good.

Items of manufacture.

As for manufacture, the Sodepur firm selected soda-water bottles: the Titagarh firm undertook tumblers and bottles, at one time making in a day 10,000 bottles of all sorts. As Mr. Wagle has explained, the pressed ware is the kind which requires least skilled labour and this should be taken up by any new factory, though it has to meet the competition of the articles of third quality which are exported at nearly cost price from Austria and Belgium. This is the real difficulty to which Mr. Wagle alludes in pages 23-24 of his report. Government in the Medical Store Department import a considerable quantity of plain glass ware, which could be made in India, and, if the Indian article be, quality for quality, the more favourable in price, the Director would prefer to buy, and has authority to buy, the locally made articles. New American machines can, however, turn out twelve bottles a minute; and can press glass with great economy in portable hinged moulds.

Proposals in Bengal.

Babu Bihari Lal Pain of 71, Phear Lane Calcutta, who was one of the Directors of the Pioneer Glass Company at Titagarh, says he would be prepared to start again if Government would assist him to obtain an expert, and if Government give him patronage in the demand of Government stores. Messrs. F. W. Heilgers & Co., Calcutta, have no present intention of making a fresh start with the Sodepur factory. Mr. Saligram Singh, of Ghaighat, Benares City, who has studied glassware in Tokyo, Japan, is trying to float a company to start a glass manufactory near Barakar to prepare block glass for bangle-making and to prepare bottles and phials. This Barakar was the site which Mr. Wagle had proposed when considering the opening of a glass factory in Bengal. From the monographs on the subject we can glean some items of information for comparison's sake. Mr. T. N. Mukharji (1895) said that glass ware in Bengal was made only from English imported glass. In the Panjab, Mr. C. J. Hallifax (1892) wrote that only churis and bottles and chimneys were made from glass which was locally manufactured, but that only broken glass was used; and that it was an unimportant industry which could only be effectively and economically improved by manufacture on a large and permanent scale, but that it would continue as long as there was a demand for native-made churis. The story is the same in the Central Provinces (1905): only churis are made, and made from material obtained from the United Provinces. Mr. Dobb's monograph for the United Provinces (1895) suggested that what is wanted is that two practical glass blowers should proceed to a glass factory in England and in Wurtemberg, should return with a complete set of tools and appliances, and should be set up by Government as instructors. These views may be considered along with the recommendations of Mr. Wagle, which were: (1) imposition of a protective duty on glass imports; and (2) the buying over of one of the old concerns and its management under State guidance until it could be handed over to a private company. He also proposed: (a) certain concessions in railway freight; (b) Government patronage of products; and (c) free use of Government land.

Recommendations.

In India people are accustomed to get much done for them by Government; there is a fair cleavage of opinion as to whether Government should pioneer at all. But if Government is to pioneer at all, on full consideration I do not think that Government is justified in selecting this subject of glass. Compared with leather, for instance, it is less important. India cannot hope to make plate glass: and the market for articles for domestic ware is not so wide as in Europe, as brass and earthen vessels are the vessels for which the people generally have an affection. Mr. Wagle's expectation that glass ware will supplant metal ware (page 25) is, I am afraid, not likely to be realized. But though Government should not pioneer, and admittedly the previous failures in private enterprise are discouraging, yet the private capitalist even in Bengal has an opening. It is possible to make glass in Bengal, and there is a market for a certain quality; but the real difficulty is in the acquisition of skilled labour. If an arrangement could be made with the syndicate who control the use of the Owen's bottle-blowing machine, this difficulty could be overcome to some extent. I have consulted both those who started the original Pioneer Glass Factory and those who use glass commercially; they assure me that a glass factory should pay, that a little skilled labour from the Continent is necessary for a short time, and that bottles and pressed goods could be turned out at a profit. Hence this industry is recommended to capitalists. Mr. Alakh Dhari, the Secretary of the Ambala Works, in his paper before the Industrial Conference of 1906, emphasized the study of the business and commercial aspects of the industry. In the first place, the neighbourhood of Barakar, which Mr. S. N. Singh has selected, is probably as good as could be selected in Bengal. The climate is not as trying as in the neighbourhood of Calcutta, and Sini quartz, Damodar sand, and coal are obtainable. At the same time, Titagarh has its advantages, as it is close to the great distributing centre. As for the alkalis, both carbonate of soda and carbonate of potash are found in India, and the suggestion of utilising waste products from gas works and from the increasing number of soap factories deserves separate research. In the second place, Mr. S. N. Singh has had an expert's training, and his services should be utilized by some of his countrymen. It is not likely that amongst the new subjects to be selected for the Government of India technical scholarships, the art of glass-making may be included; but the Association for the Advancement of Scientific and Industrial Education of Indians might very well select glass-making as a subject. The record of the work of the Association is such (Special Report, Part I, Chapter V) that the Bengal Government might make a grant to the Association for this purpose, in furtherance of the proposals of the conference of March 1906; e.g., Rs. 50 per month for two years. Out of the first 48 names in their list from 1905 to 1907 there is only one, Mr. W. N. Chaudhuri, who has taken up glass as a special subject, and that at the Cothen Polytechnic in Germany. He will probably return to India in 1909. Amongst the next list of 80 names for 1908 is one Upendra Nath Roy, of Chittagong, who has taken up the subject of glass manufacture. In the third place, the requirements of Government in the Medical Store and Telegraph Departments, and possibly in other departments, such as State Railways, could be met from locally-made articles. The management of the factory should ascertain the precise specification required by these departments, and thus give quotations for each class of article landed in Calcutta. For example, I have learnt from the Director of Medical Stores that he would gladly give orders locally; and that he has an allotment for local purchases. There seems to be in India a market for 4, 6, and 8 oz. medicine bottles round and octagonal and for larger bottles 20 and 26 oz. If the local factory would supply the requirements of the Director of Medical Stores at rates which were no greater than the rates for imported goods, Government should be prepared to insist that the local goods were purchased. Government patronage cannot, however, very well go beyond this. A business-like local factory, which made articles within its capacity, should however, expect in addition the patronage of wholesale chemists and should be able to find a market for the ware amongst the Muhammadan population. Finally, I think that it is a pity that greater publicity is not given to information such as Mr. Wagle's report: it is even now not directly available to the private capitalist. It has been suggested to me that further experiments should be made; but I do not think this necessary. Such experiments would not cost less than Rs. 15,000: the result would be intelligible only to chemical experts. On the other hand, there seems to be no doubt that, given good material and suitable furnaces and annealing chambers, glass can be made in Bengal. As to whether it can be made at a commercial profit has not yet been properly tested, for neither the methods used nor the product selected have been appropriate.

I do not recommend a protective duty or pioneering in the case of the glass industry; but I suggest that encouragement in the way of Government patronage be fully given to any manufactory in Bengal which can make up to specification. I have endeavoured to explain to those concerned what material can be made in Bengal, and what are the requirements of Government departments, and to bring together expert and capitalist.

Chemical Industries.

Local manufacturing firms.

I have long thought that in analytical chemistry there is an opening for educated Bengal, provided accuracy could be obtained; and also in the manufacture of chemicals, if business enterprise accompany knowledge. There are no local manufacturers of chemicals beyond Messrs. D. Waldie & Co., of Konnagar, the Indian Pharmaceutical Works, 13, Upper Circular Road, and the Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Works, Limited, 91, Upper Circular Road, Calcutta. The first well-known firm is mentioned by Mr. Collin as a manufacturer of acids, which it still is. The sulphur for the sulphuric acid has however to come all the way from Sicily. The firm also manufactures various salts, sulphates, manures, disinfectants and general chemicals. The factory was formerly in Chitpur: for 13 years it has been at Konnagar; although it is what might be called a sradeshi factory, yet it suffers from the lack of many items. Wooden barrels cannot be made out here and iron drums are indifferently made: bottles have to be imported: the only acid-proof jars are those that come from Doulton & Co., of Lambeth. Local enterprise might practice on these items: the firm would gladly take local glass bottles and local acid-proof jars if they could be made. The Indian Pharmaceutical Works make drugs from indigenous articles by means of hand machines.

The Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Works, Limited, is one of the most go-ahead young enterprises in Bengal. Dr. Prafulla Chandra Ray, D.Sc., F.C.S., started it as a small private concern in Lower Circular Road about 15 years ago and made drugs from indigenous materials. About six years ago it was made into a limited liability company, with a capital of two lakhs. Many of the leading chemists in Calcutta are share-holders. It has now a well-thought-out and well-managed factory with about 70 workmen, at 82, Maniktola Main Road. Babu Rajshekhar Bose, the manager, is an M. A. in chemistry. The variety of manufactures is considerable. Besides the manufacture of drugs and acids, the manufacture of laboratory apparatus, which requires skilled craftsmen in wood and metal, has been taken up. The latest development is in perfumes. The enterprise shows sign of resourcefulness and business capacity, which should be an object lesson to capitalists of this province.

Industrial alcohol.

The great difficulty with which the chemical industry has to contend is in connection with industrial alcohol. It is occasionally mentioned in the press that the manufacture of crude alcohol for industrial purposes under proper Government regulations would be a fine swadeshi industry. Alcohol is required: (a) for chemical transformation, as in the manufacture of iodoform; (b) as a solvent or precipitant, as in the case of papain; (c) for burning; and (d) for the finished product, as in the case of liquid extracts, tinctures, essences and liniments. Section V of the Board's Rules in the Excise Manual is prepared on the assumption that spirit prepared after the English fashion is for direct human consumption. Section IX deals with the making of spirit unfit for human consumption by the admixture either of caoutchine or of naptha Messrs. D. Waldie and Company have a private distillery at Konnagar. The Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Company at Maniktola purchase imported spirits 68° over proof at Rs. 1-10 per gallon, which becomes Rs. 13-4 after duty has been paid: so the duty is nearly eight times the prime cost. This spirit is used in preparing tinctures, extracts and ether. At present the Government is willing to allow the spirit to be manufactured or stored in a bonded warehouse: full duty to be paid when it is removed to the factory, and refund to be granted of the duty of the amount lost in course of manufacture, after keeping only 5 per cent. ad valorem duty. The Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Company ask that they be allowed to manufacture in a bonded factory under supervision of excise officers, and to pay after manufacture the full duty on the spirit contained in the preparation, and 5 per cent. ad valorem on the amount of spirit lost. If it is the fact, as is asserted, that this concession is allowed to manufacturers in Europe, it is for consideration whether it may be allowed here. Government does not gain interest on the excess temporarily handled, whereas the private company feels the loss of the capital locked up in duty. From my enquiries in the Excise Department, I learn, however, that the request of the firm goes beyond what is allowed in Europe.

I think that special concessions are required for the use of industrial alcohol in the lac trade. This will be mentioned later.

Analytical chemistry.

I find that Indian analysts are employed in the Konnagar works and in analytical laboratories. There is the patient drudge who cannot get more than a clerk's pay. There are also highly skilled experts, who can command high salaries. Still in the best laboratories in Calcutta, the Bengali analyst is not yet more than second rate. The graduates in chemistry should take up this work instead of becoming, as so many do, teachers in chemistry.

Classes in industrial chemistry.

Mr. Puran Chand in the paper at the Benares Industrial Conference in 1905 urged the necessity of experiments in industrial chemistry. I trust that the objections to the industrial chemistry classes which the Bengal Government are desirous of opening at Sibpur College, may be overcome and that these classes furnish the nucleus of a technological institute in Calcutta. I have dealt with this subject in pages 10 and 31 of Part I of this Special Report.

Dyeing and Printing.

Monographs on dyeing.

In 1883 Dr. McCann published an account of the dyes and tans of Bengal, the history of which goes back to 1875, when the Secretary of State at the instance of Mr. Thomas Wardle ordered an enquiry into dye stuffs of Indian growth and production. The memorandum prepared in accordance with those orders by Mr. Liotard in 1880 excluded Bengal. The report for Bengal was not issued till 1883, but unfortunately recited only information collected in 1875-77. There is, however, a wealth of practical information about dyeing as well as about dyes in Dr. McCann's memoir. There is a tendency to depreciate these old compilations simply because they are old. The Provincial Monograph on dyes was written in 1896, by Mr. N. N. Banerjei, whose instructions were to deal with indigenous processes, rather than with products and materials. Mr. Collin in 1890 had stated that the use of vegetable dyes was becoming uncommon. In 1896 it was stated that the importation of cheap European goods and European aniline dyes was proving fatal to the indigenous industry. At the same time Mr. Banerjei pointed out the want of ingenuity in the production of colours and the want of assistance from capitalists. In 1908 the only place where I found the industry flourishing was in the Serampore subdivision; and to a lesser extent in Patna, in Saran, and in Bhagalpur. Mr. Banerjei said that the industry had became extinct in northern and eastern Bengal and in Orissa. The imports of aniline dyes from Belgium ports to Calcutta have increased steadily as follows:—

On the other side of the picture is the following interesting record of Calcutta's export of indigenous dyes—the figures are in lakhs of rupees:—

In Bihar districts I have found a desire on the part of the country dyer to take up natural indigo; the indigo now produced is finding a local market at about Rs. 120 a maund for its inferior qualities. The decrease in the number of factories has diminished the amount which filtered to the bazar through petty pilfering. The country dyer is content with a quality which the Calcutta broker would despise.

Prospects for future enterprise.

Even in the dyeing of foreign materials there is room for the capitalist in Bengal. Bengal imported in 1906-07, 204 lakhs of coloured piece goods. The Bengal Laxmi Cotton Mills consume Rs. 3,000 of dyed yarns monthly. It is calculated that there is a profit of two annas a pound in the dyeing of yarn. Bengal has, moreover, many dyeing materials; Dr. McCann's book names 18 giving red dyes., 21 giving yellow dyes, 2 giving blue dyes, 20 giving brown and 4 giving green dyes. Mr. Banerjei's monograph mentions 53 indigenous dye-producing plants. There is a prospect of the capitalist succeeding in dyeing piece-goods by means of indigenous materials, if up-to-date methods are used. It is unfortunate that the Bengal Dye Works, Limited, was not floated. It was to have engaged the services of Mr. G. C. Sen, an expert in dyeing and colour chemistry, who returned in 1907 after study in Leeds and in Germany.

Fastness of dyes.

Regarding the fastness of indigenous and imported dyes, Mr. E. R. Watson, F.C.S., has made scientific experiments from which it will appear that bakam (caesalpinia sappan) manjista (rubia cordifolia) and catechu (acacia catechu) compare very favourably with the great majority of the synthetic products; but that, contrary to accepted opinions, the majority of indigenous dyes give fugitive dyeings. Other information about catechu is to be found in the Agriculture Ledgers No. 1 of 1895, and No. 35 of 1896. It is well known that any after-treatment of copper sulphate will increase fastness in certain cases; and there is a new German patent for adding the copper to the printing colour itself in the form of an alkaline solution. These facts are worthy of attention. I found that even in the mixing of the European chemical powders, the indigenous dyer is careless and wasteful, because he uses more than he need do if he carefully followed the instruction on the tin boxes. In Bihar districts I found that the tins bore the name of Bombay importing firms. The use of the lac dye had become unprofitable even in 1890.

Colour printing.

The colour printer is even more elusive than the dyer. He is fairly prosperous at Serampur, where he prepares handkerchiefs which are exported, as Mr. Collin said, to Rangoon, Madras, and Mauritius. At Madhubani on the other hand there was only one printer in the whole bazar. The calico printing is also done in North Calcutta and at Hajipur. As a rule dyers and printers simply colour the articles given to them: the Serampur printers are an exception. The wooden blocks for printing are made at Nawabganj near Barrackpore, at Patna, Benares, and at Samagaddi in the Nepal Terai.

There is an opening here for the Indian capitalist who would organise the business in Serampur or in the Bihar districts.

Pencil and Button Manufacture.

A new industry.

This is to be taken up by the Small Industries Development Company, under two of the students who were sent abroad by the Scientific and Industrial Advancement Association (see Industrial India, Volume III, February 1906). The Bengal Button Factory has been started at 130, Bagmari Road, Calcutta, under one who has studied the industry in Osaka, Japan.

Ink Manufacture.

Development since 1890.

Since 1890 considerable improvement has been made and there are several manufacturies of writing ink in Calcutta. It is an industry which requires little capital. Mr. J. P. Bose studied the manufacture of printing ink in Japan, and has now a manufactory in Ultadanga financed by a Mymensingh capitalist.

Babu Srish Chandra Dutta, joint-secretary of the Indian Industrial Association lectured in 1894 on printing ink manufacture from lamp black and linseed oil varnish. He was perhaps the first Indian manufacturing chemist (see proceedings of Indian Industrial Association for the year 1896).

Paper Making.

The indigenous industry.

There has been a further decadence since 1890 in the indigenous manufacture. Hand-made paper is still produced at Hooghly district, principally at Mahanad Gosainmalpara, Neala and Ballidewanganj by a class of Muhammadans known as kaqjis. They are fast dying out. Their paper has a market at Rs. 10 per 100 sheets amongst Calcutta traders for account books. The same class is found at Mainan in Howrah district and at Krishtopore and Srirampore in the Jangipur subdivision of the Murshidabad district. The manufacture ceased five years ago at Nasriganj in Shahabad, and in Cuttack it has practically ceased. (See the notes on champat paper in Banerjei's Report on the District of Cuttack, page 171, Calcutta, 1893, and O'Malley's Gazetteer of Cuttack District, page 134; also on basota paper, O'Malley's Gazetteer of Shahabad, page 93).

The factory industry.

A practical manufacturer writing in May 1907, said that Indian mills could make profitably a large proportion of imported paper, if new up-to-date mills were furnished with the most modern plant for effecting economy in manufacture. The Maharaja of Mourbhanj is anxious to lay down such a mill. The prospectus for the Mourbhanj Paper Mills Company with a capital of 16 lakhs has been issued, of which the Maharaja will subscribe one-third. The works are to be at Baripada on the river Boorabolang. The material is to be sabai grass, which can be obtained locally. In Bengal the only paper mills are the Titaghar Paper Mills Company, Limited, which has acquired the Imperial Paper Mills and the Bally Paper Mills, and the Bengal Paper Mills Co, Limited, of Raniganj. The former gave a dividend of 2½ per cent. on the second half year of 1907. I am informed that a leading Indian publisher complains of the quality of the Indian paper for publishing purposes. In 1906-07, the Government of Bengal purchased 5¼ lakhs of paper in India. This may be compared with the local purchases in lakhs for each of the previous ten years since 1896-97:—4·55, 5·11, 5·41, 4·42, 4·97, 5·59, 6·08, 4·51, 4·54 and 4·52 lakhs. The imports by sea into Calcutta were in 1906-07:—printing paper, 8 lakhs; writing paper, $5\frac{1}{10}$ lakhs; other kinds, 4⅛ lakhs. The Bengal Paper Mills of Raniganj employed over one thousand work people, and turned out 11½ lakhs in 1905-06, and over 17 lakhs in 1906-07. The two mills at Titagarh and Kankinara under the Titagarh Paper Mills Company, turned out $28\frac{6}{10}$ lakhs in 1905-06 and 30 lakhs in 1906-07. These mills manufacture white printing, badami, coloured printing, cartridge, blotting paper and foolscap out of rags, grass, straw, jute, old gunnies, hemp baggings, ropes and waste paper. The wood pulp used abroad gives a better finish than these materials. Sabai grass for the mills comes principally from Sahebganj in Rajmahal subdivision at an average rate of Re. 1-4 a maund.

Match Manufacture.

New factories.

About eight years ago there was an attempt made to start the local manufacture of matches in Bengal. Factories have been started at Ahmedabad, Kotah, and in the Punjab. There is now one manufactory working in Bengal since January 1907, the Bande Mataram Factory at 38, Russa Road, Tollyganj, belonging to Dr. Rash Behari Ghosh and Babu Sailendra Kumar Mitra. The assistants are Messrs. P. C. Roy and A. P. Ghose, who have returned from Japan. The wood used is the Sundarbans "genwa" (Excœcoria Agallocha), a soft wood used for cheap house furniture in Calcutta. They tell me that they had previously experimented with many others. After examining their machinery, I think that the unevenness of the match splints is due to the wood and not to the machinery. The dipping machines are made by Babu Charu Chandra Mullick of Bankipur. Rai Sahib Upendranath Kanjilal, F.L.S., read a paper on the Indian woods suitable for match-making at the Calcutta Industrial Conference of 1906; and an account of the manufacture of matches compiled by Babu Hari Das Chatterjee is given in Industrial India, Vol. III, April 1906. Another factory has not yet started: the Oriental Match Manufacturing Company, of 124, Canning Street, Calcutta with a nominal capital of one lakh. A match factory is being started at Tarikere in Mysore by Mr. V. G Joshi of Poona. The Berar Match Manufacturing Company of Ellichpur, Central Provinces, with a capital of one lakh, is using salai and maharuk woods (see Mr. C. E. Low's Note on the Match Industry).

Soap Manufacture.

An attractive industry.

The manufacture of soap has recently advanced and is attractive to Indian capitalists. The example of the North-West Soap Company of Meerut, who started at Garden Reach, Calcutta, under European supervision was helpful. At the Calcutta exhibition of 1906 there were exhibits from four Bengal companies; there are now only three besides the English company, namely, the Bengal Soap Company, 54-1 Mechuabazar Street; the Oriental Soap Factory, Goabagan, and Dr. Nil Ratan Sircar's National Soap Factory, 92, Upper Circular Road, Calcutta. They have all taken to highly scented, highly coloured toilet soaps, for which I find there is a large and expanding demand. The Bihar Pioneer Soap Manufacturing Company, of Dinapore exhibited at the Bankipore exhibition of 1908. Babu Kamlanand Singh of Srinagar started a factory at Purnea, but it was closed in 1906. Mr. E. R. Watson, F.C.S., has made an analysis of the svadeshi soaps (Statesman, February 5th, 1907.) European soap of the highest quality has 93 per cent. of pure soap. Six samples of svadeshi soap showed proportions varying from 66 per cent. to 91 per cent. Three were classed very good, but one was found to be grossly adulterated with 20 per cent. of starchy matter.

There would appear to be an opening for the commercial manufacture of the common dhobi's soap, but one of the ingredients is dear, because it is used as an adulterant of ghi. Indigenous soap manufacture is nowhere done on a factory scale.

Patna soap was formerly used all over Bengal. The ingredients are given in Dr. Buchanan Hamilton's Account of Patna District (Martin's Eastern India, Vol. I, page 329).

Brush Making.

Mr. Collin said that this was a new trade, and that the demand was increasing. Brushes continue to be manufactured at Khurdah, Panihati and Sukchar.

Perfumery.

Much has been written lately about the prospects of perfume manufacture in India. The local manufacture of an expressed oil impregnated with the odour of the chambeli flower has been carried on at Fatwah in the Barh subdivision of Patna district for over a century. There are now only twelve families, and the industry is decaying. Mr. D. Hooper, F.C.S., of the Indian Museum, gave a paper on Indian essential oils at the Calcutta Industrial Conference, 1906, which gives information for those desirous of starting in Bengal. Mr. J. N. Banerjee stated at the same conference that in Bengal there are grasses from which the essence of lemon and peppermint are extracted. This subject deserves more attention and enquiry in Bengal; for other provinces seem to be more fortunate in possessing the raw materials. I find it on record, however, that there is a good opening for a perfume factory equipped with up-to-date machinery, (see The Indian Age, March 1908, page 18). Moreover, if there is to be any export (at present only $\frac{2}{3}$ lakh is exported), the scents for export must be made less heavy, by the use of some other than gingelli oil.

Further development possible.

Other Industries.

No special remarks beyond those of Mr. Collin are required on the following:—Boat-building, book-binding, electro-plating, fishing-hooks, gilding, masonry work, musical instruments, tape-making, tin foil, watch-repairing.

CHAPTER IV.

MINING INDUSTRIES.

Mining Industries are principally in the Burdwan and Chota Nagpur Divisions.

Coal.

The industry of coal mining has advanced with enormous strides since 1890. In that year Mr. Collin described the industry as still in its infancy and as growing. The output of coal in Bengal has risen from $1\frac{1}{4}$ million tons in 1887 to $8\frac{3}{4}$ million tons in 1906 and over 10 million tons in 1907. At the end of the year 1907 there were 81 companies, with a nominal capital of 411 lakhs; of these companies, 38 were floated in 1907; none pay less than 10 per cent. and some very much more. The average number of workpeople employed in the Giridih, Jherriah, Asansol and Ranigunge fields was nearly 120,000 in 1907. Another field is being opened in the Palamau district, and the industry has got great possibilities in Birbhum district. There has been an increased expenditure of native capital in the development of mining. It is a matter of common knowledge that the supply has not been able to cope with the demand both for local consumption and for export, notwithstanding the great extension of the industry. It is the view of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce that the position of the coal industry is so strong and the prospects are so good, that it seems to be likely to be by far the best and most lucrative opening for young Indian students. The Superintendent of the Bengal Coal Company, Limited, Mr. H. H. Macleod, has stated that it is the finest of all the svadeshi industries, and that it has a magnificent future before it. The attention, therefore, of the middle class youth is directed to the opportunities which exist at Sibpur and in the mining districts, as detailed on page 14 of the report on technical education, for obtaining skilled knowledge in practical and theoretical mining and to the probability of obtaining employment in the mining industry. The actual labourers earn four annas to ten annas a day. They are in the fortunate position that the demand is in excess of the supply. It is not improbable that this may lead to the introduction of mechanical plant for coal cutting. A system of mechanical sifting has already been introduced at one of the East Indian Railway Company pits in the Giridih field.

Mica.

A monopoly of Bengal.

Mica is worked principally in the districts of Gaya, Hazaribagh and Monghyr. The output has increased from 87 tons in 1887 to 1,018 tons in 1908. The export has reached to 23 lakhs, more than half of which is sent to England. Bengal is reaping the advantage from the fact that mica is the best non-conductor of electricity known. There was a recent fall through the American collapse, but still there is a firm demand owing to increased requirements. In the Hazaribagh district, in the vicinity of Kodarma, mica gives employment to more than 6,000 people. In mica mining there used to be a great deal of wastage, but an invention for compressing broken mica into block form, called micanite, has been of great service. In this industry also there is an opening for Indian youths who will combine scientific training with practical experience. One producer informed me that the industry suffered from the want of accurate knowledge of the requirements of the European and American manufacturers. There is evidently some doubt on the subject as will appear from the interesting correspondence published in the Agricultural Ledger No. 24 of 1900.

Other Minerals.

In parts of Manbhum, Singhbhum and Ranchi districts, plates, bowls and the like are manufactured on a small scale from soap stone. The quarries give employment to about 200 labourers in Manbhum and to a similar number in the Singhbhum district. Iron stone is worked in Dhalbhum within the Singhbhum district by the Bengal Iron and Steel Company. The outturn was over 7,000 tons in 1906. In Hazaribagh the industry is insignificant. Sambalpur district turns out varying amounts of iron ore; in 1907 the amount was 800 tons. The smelting of iron for local use is carried on to a small extent in few places in the Santhal Parganas. The Tata Iron and Steel Company, have secured the rights to iron ore within Mourbhanj, one of the Orissa Tributary States. Messrs. Ambler & Company turned out in 1906-07 as much as 200 tons from their slate concerns in Monghyr district. Manganese has been worked in the Singhbhum District.

Requisites for any improvement.

The first requisite for the indigenous development of the mineral industries is patient and scientific prospecting. This requires the bold outlay of capital, of which there may be no prospect of immediate return. The next is that there must be as greater bias on the part of under-graduates to the study of the sciences concerned, such as geology and metallurgy. In March 1908, 1,200 students appeared for the examination of the Calcutta University for the B. A. degree, and only 38 for the B. Sc. degree.

CHAPTER V.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS.

Position and possibilities of industrial arts in Bengal.

The artistic industries of Bengal province are not supported as they ought to be. Much of the patronage whereby some of the arts have been kept alive is from the European residents. As Mr. Collin said, Indian noblemen appear to be more inclined to patronise foreign productions than the arts of the country. Although the fact may be deplored, yet it is only natural that each community should be attracted by the arts of the other. Indigenous artistic industries at present suffer from want of patronage and want of publicity; and any real encouragement must consist in providing publicity and a ready sale for the articles of the best type. The Indian Museum in Calcutta is imperial; Bengal has no provincial museum similar to those in Lahore, Lucknow and Madras. At the museum of the School of Art there should be an art depôt, where should be exhibited samples of the best work of Bengal craftsmen, with the names and addresses of the makers and the market price. If Government are not prepared to subsidize a private art-ware depôt in Calcutta, I recommend that Government itself should maintain at the School of Art a model art-ware depôt. This is done with success in Lahore and Lucknow. Moreover, if similar depôts were started at divisional head-quarters under the auspices of local enthusiasts, some good might be done. At my request, grants have been given to local bodies at Bankura and Bankipore. The subject has also been discussed in pages 19 and 31 of my report on technical education.

Gold and Silver Work.

Degradation of indigenous design.

The monograph on gold and silver work in the Bengal Presidency by Mr. D. N. Mookerji (1905) describes the articles made in Cuttack, Dacca, Murshidabad, Patna and Monghyr districts. Mr. Collin said that native jewellery, so long as it was kept to country designs, was of great merit, but there was a tendency to imitate English designs. This tendency has not diminished, but indigenous ornamentation is being placed on articles meant for European use. Such for example is the work turned out by Girish Chandra Dutt & Sons, of Bhawanipur, Calcutta. This firm is enterprising in that it uses Canning's polishing calico mops attached to the boss of an electrically driven motor lathe. The Cuttack silver ware is known outside Bengal principally for the delicate filigree work, which however is only carried on in the Cuttack town itself. This form of the art received considerable development from the Orissa Art Union Factory started by Mr. Madhusudan Das, C.I.E., who has organized on a factory basis with subdivision of labour the hereditary skill of the native craftsman. Mr. Das told me that he was anxious to give up his factory as it was not a commercial success. The number of his employees has diminished and he has given up the Calcutta agencies. Mr. Das lamented the deterioration in quality of the work in precious metals, and the difficulty of obtaining a market for the produce. But some central sale emporium in Calcutta and the issue of catalogues are necessary for maintaining and increasing the market for such wares. Articles of personal adornment of traditional design, as well as articles of European pattern, like picture frames and card cases, are prepared at Cuttack.

In the matter of designs Mr. Das has recruited a man from the School of Art in Madras, but as some of the latter's designs include in one piece of work a cherub with wings, a peacock and a Greek god, his skill as a teacher of oriental designs may be open to question. If Mr. Das had a show room in Calcutta in addition to the one in Cuttack, his goods would obtain the patronage which they deserve. As regards the other places, the Kharagpur fish made of overlapping thinly beaten-out ovals is, of course, well known; but the number of workers in Monghyr district is decreasing. In Murshidabad the Nawab Bahadur informed me that malaria was playing sad havoc with such industries as still do exist. The centres of the craft are at Khagra, Kandi, Pulinda and Bhagirathpore.

Gold and silver smiths are extensively found in the Patna district. Generally we find that the traditional types of Indian jewellery are giving way to the jewellery of European patterns amongst the better classes. Mr. Mookerji had no suggestions to make for the improvement of this art.

A dying art.

This art was practised at Barabari in Rangpur district and in Kendrapara in Cuttack district, as well as in Murshidabad, according to Mr. Collin's report.

Mr. G. C. Dutt in his monograph of 1901 stated that the industry had disappeared at the former place in Rangpur district, and from enquiry I learn that it no longer exists in Cuttack district. The Chiefs of the Orissa Tributary States appear to have retained carvers who reached a high standard of proficiency: beautiful examples, fifty years old, were sent by the Chief of the Nayagarh State to the Delhi Exhibition of 1903. There is a little unpretentious work in ivory done in Harkata Lane, off Bowbazar, in Calcutta. The ivory is obtained from the Orissa Tributary States. Thirty-five years ago there were no fewer than fifty families of carvers at Mathra, one of the several centres, in the Murshidabad district, but now there are not more than twenty carvers in the whole district, the best of whom are working at Khagra. The Bhaskars of Murshidabad are professional image makers, who during the declining days of the Nawab took to ivory carving. In 1888 the Murshidabad workers were declared to be perhaps the best in India, "fully displaying the finish, minuteness and ingenuity characteristic of all true Indian art." According to Sir George Watt they met a local demand for certain representations of the gods, but for some years past they have produced an assortment of table ornaments mainly for the European market. Murshidabad ivory work is remarkable for the absence of joins. In Royle's Lecture on the Arts and Manufactures of India, 1852, it is stated, concerning the ivory carvers of Berhampore, that their representations of the elephant and other animals, which were sent to the London Exhibition of 1851, were so true to nature that they might be considered the works of real artists. Mr. Dutt is not without hope of effecting an improvement in the industry, notwithstanding the absence of the support of the wealthy noblemen which the carvers formerly had. The establishment of the Murshidabad Art Agency is a step in the right direction for advertising and exhibiting specimens of the art. But it suffers from the fact that it has no outlet for sale in Calcutta. The workmanship of the existing craftsmen could be much more exploited than it is, if firms or individual capitalists would, as Mr. Dutt suggests, supply the Bhaskars with good ivory, purchase from them their products, suggest new designs, exhibit their specimens and advertise for them.

Metal-inlaying (Bidri Ware).

The art of inlaying pewter with silver, called after Bidar in the Deccan, whence the industry was introduced, prevails only in Purnea and Murshidabad. It has further degenerated since 1890. The Murshidabad Art Agency attempts by exhibiting specimens and by advertising in Calcutta newspapers to keep the industry alive. The art is explained at pages 46 and 47 of Watt's Indian Art at Delhi, at page 164 of Birdwood's Industrial Arts of India and in Mr. R. J. Hirst's article in the Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal for July 1907. In Purnea district Bidri ware is a dying craft and only one man, Mohan Sonar, is left with a fertile invention in designs. It is curious that in such a small art the engravers should be wholly dependent upon others who prepare the amalgum. These are Satua Kanseri and Manju Kanseri of Belauri and Udhu Sau Kanseri of Katihar. Unless their art is studied and communicated, the industry will cease. Some students of the School of Art, Calcutta, which it is proposed, will in future have more direct connection with industrial art, should therefore be sent to study the processes, which should be repeated in the Calcutta school.

An art now moribund.

Clay Modelling.

The clay models of Krishnagar have obtained considerable celebrity. In 1888 it was stated that the figures were instinct with life and expression, and that their pose and action were excellent. Mr. Collin expressed a regret that so much skill in modelling should be wasted on ephemeral works of art, as the material used was unbaked clay. As is natural to assume, the industry started from the making of idols for worship, from which grew the manufacture of toys and miniature figures. Sir George Birdwood said in 1880 that Indians had failed to develop the art of figure sculpture, and it was only because their ivory and clay and stone figures of men and animals were on so minute a scale that they excite admiration.

A characteristic Indian art.

By 1903 Sir George Watt remarked that the Krishnagar modellers had failed to advance above the preparation of toys dressed in real clothes and had steadily raised their prices to a prohibitive extent. On visiting the centre of the industry, Ghurni near Krishnagar, I was prepared to be disappointed and I was sadly disappointed. There are five families left amongst whom the principal workers are, Rakhal Das Pal, C. C. Pal, Nibaran Chandra Pal, Bakeshwar Pal and Jadu Nath Pal. The first two have price lists printed in English, but they have no agency in Calcutta and not even one in Krishnagar. They are content to live on orders which they obtain indirectly. They have given up almost entirely the preparation of minute models in which they gained their reputation and have taken to relief work and to statues and busts on European models. The workers have strongly developed artistic talents, and it is a pity that they should use their talents on such unsuitable objects. They are, however, so very self-willed that it is hopeless to do anything with them. Mr. C. A. Radice, I.C.S., when Collector of Krishnagar, did his best to get them to prepare glazed figures which would stand exposure.

Abandonment of minute modelling.

Ornamental Glass Ware.

In 1888 it was stated that the glass ware of Patna had acquired a reputation for graceful shapes and beautiful colours, and The Journal of Indian Art stated that Patna glass ware had curiously coloured specimens of considerable excellence. But when specimens were sent to the Indian Art Exhibition in Delhi in 1903 some of them were declared to be artistic and in good taste, but a large percentage was declared to be a miserable imitation of English ware, in bad taste and worse execution. The amber colour which frequently occurs in this ware is obtained from a mixture of the Sone river sand. The Patna ware is made from broken glass melted down. Ahmad Hussain and Zakir Mia are the only two workmen now left. The development of the glass industry must be sought for, as has been shown in Chapter III, on its industrial, and not on its artistic side.

A mimetic art.

Stone Carving.

Stone carving was the subject of the monograph for 1904-05, and the Bengal Monograph was written by Mr. Havell, the Principal of the School of Art in Calcutta. A schedule attached to the monograph gives full details of the distribution of the art in the province. Stone carving is usually associated with Gaya, but Mr. Havell states that the carvers of Orissa acquired the most extraordinary technical skill in architectural decoration which Hindu art has known. As late as 1902-03, the Director-General of Archæology declared that the work of a modern stone-mason of Bhubaneswar did not fall much behind the old work. I found in Gaya that the stone work for the new dharamsala, which is being erected by Rai Surja Mull Bahadur, was being carved by stone workers imported from Mirzapore and Hathras. It is unfortunate that the skill of the carvers, who were originally imported from Jaypur in Rajputana to build the great Bishnupada temple, should be allowed to become atrophied from want of practice. There is now in Gaya only one man who does regular figure carving. The best bowls carved from Pathalkatti black stone are sold at one rupee eight annas, the bowls made from a medium kind of gray stone at ten annas; and there is an adulterated form of blackstone made from the slate stone of Dharhara in Monghyr district which is polished and blackened. There are also some stone carving done in parts of the Ranchi district. Mr. Havell states that about seventy or eighty families prepare cheap stone utensils, which are used by colliery coolies at Raniganj. The earnings of carvers are from four annas to eight annas a day. Mr. Havell also states that the almost total extinction of the art is due to—(1) the exclusive use of European styles in public building; (2) the neglect of the study of Indian architecture in Indian colleges of engineering, and (3) the want of discrimination in public taste. The definite suggestion which he made in the monograph was that two of the inside doorways in the new Art Gallery, which is being erected on the Chowringhee Road in Calcutta, should be carved by the best men obtainable from Orissa. I regret, however, to find that nothing has been done on this suggestion.

Indigenous in Orissa.

Suggestion for encouragement of the art.

Wood Carving.

Decline of the art.

A monograph was written in 1903 by Chevalier O. Ghilardi, who was then officiating Principal of the School of Art, Calcutta. The art is found in Monghyr, Bhagalpur, Patna, Gaya and Cuttack. Mention of wood carving in the Bishnupur subdivision of Bankura district is made in the Annual Administration Report of 1903-04. Patna has instances of pure Hindu work; Gaya has the characteristics of Burmese work. The Patna carvers have to content themselves now with making blocks for cotton printing. The wood inlaying in Monghyr was an industry brought in with the gun manufacturer. The Chevalier tried to persuade the worker to produce better work. The man's reply was that the people did not care to pay for it. I found at Monghyr that this worker obtains ebony from Jamui subdivision, and uses deer horns for inlaying. He took periodically a consignment to Calcutta and hawked his goods about the curio shops in Chowringhee. The conclusion of the writer of the monograph is that what is required is more the restoration to Indian art of all that was admirable in its earlier forms rather than a change in the classic traditions of artistic industries. The Calcutta School of Art must take its share in this work. The carpenters of North Bihar, as Mr. Collin pointed out, are still able to do any kind of ornamental wood work.

Shell Ornaments.

Shell bracelets are made at Dacca; but in Bengal proper only in Bankura and Birbhum districts, especially at Bishnupur in the former districts and at Karidha in the latter. The Sankaris of Karidha, it is said, have attained perfection in the art.

Embroidery.

An art capable of expansion.

The gold and silver embroidery of Patna is still well-known. Murshidabad and Patna have still skilled embroiderers. The embroidered caps of Patna and Bihar town are frequently seen worn in the Bihar districts. There are two kinds—kámdani and zardoshi for caps and the trappings of horses and elephants. The work, however, has not the reputation of the Lucknow or Benares work. Chikan work is still thriving. This is carried on in Calcutta, and in the Barasat subdivision. Mr. Collin indicated the business-like method of export. In Madras I found that it paid Belfast linen merchants to send their goods to Madras to be embroidered, principally by female labour. There is drawn-thread work done by the girls of the Bankura Wesleyan Mission; it is all exported.

Soap Stone Carving.

Plates, bowls, tumblers, images and the like are manufactured in thanas Chandil and Manbazar in Manbhum district, in pargana Dhalbhum in Singhbhum district and in the south-west of Ranchi district.

Horn Carving.

Horn carving is carried on commercially at Tirhetta Bazar, off Bow Bazar, Calcutta. A Mr. Lucy proposes to start a factory at Cuttack.

Lac Work.

As Mr. Collin said, lac bangles are made all over the country. There are still 40 families working at Ilambazar in Bolpur thana in Birbhum district. Only three families are working at toys, the women of the other families dye cotton with shellac dye. The other centres for lac turnery are Patna and Murshidabad.

Lace Making.

A craft with great possibilities.

This is an exotic industry in India, introduced by the missionaries, but Sir George Watt has stated that it has become at Quilon and other places in Southern India a popular industry. Fifteen years ago lace making by hand was an extinct handicraft in England; but to-day it is a recognized industry. Mr. Collin in 1890 recommended that it be taught to native ladies, as was done in the Nazareth Convent in Madras. Dr. J. A. Graham of Kalimpong started in 1905 a lace school at Kalimpong, where the hill girls, already adepts at knitting, have taken kindly to the industry under the teaching of an English lady expert. There are 124 girls working either at their homes or at the school in connection with it. Government has assisted by Rs. 600 down, and Rs. 89-8 a month for three years. Dr. Graham's proposals for the development of a scheme for making at Kalimpong a central school, where teachers might be trained for all parts of Bengal, is at present under the consideration of Government. Up to the present, pupils from Kalimpong have become teachers for the German Lutheran Mission at Ranchi and for the Mahila Shilpasram in Calcutta. Four other missionary agencies at Chaibassa, Jessore, Ballyganj and Calcutta have asked that students be trained at Kalimpong. I have seen the lace factories at Ranchi, Chaibassa and Krishnagar. That of the German Evangelical Lutheran Mission started in August 1907 as an offshoot of Kalimpong, has 32 pupils, who can earn from Rs. 2 to Rs. 6 a month. The patterns and thread are sent from Kalimpong. The Government grant is Rs. 77 a month. The Roman Catholic Mission at Ranchi is independent of Kalimpong. The Ursuline Convent have started lace making since August 1906. There are 60 girls making torchon lace under a European lady expert. The girls, who are aboriginal Kols, can earn as much as Rs. 8 a month. The Government grant is Rs. 50 a month. The work is done in a lofty and roomy building, and the conditions of hours of labour and of discipline have been carefully considered. At the Krishnagar convent there are 57 girls under training. The school deserves encouragement. The defect at present is that the market in all cases is a catch market. It is a good thing to introduce such pleasant, remunerative employment among native women. But a fixed market is wanted, similar to that furnished by the Irish Lace Depôt established in Dublin by the late Mr. Ben Lindsey for the cottage lace industry in Ireland; or the commercial methods of the Nagercoil School in Madras should be followed.

But a commercial outlet required.

Toy Making.

Rude articles are still made in Patna and Kalighat; lacquered toys at Ilambazar.

Wood-engraving and Lithography.

There is an increased demand for engravers in Calcutta: the art is taught in the Government School of Art and in private schools.

CHAPTER VI.

INDUSTRIES DEALING WITH ECONOMIC PRODUCTS.

This head covers many industries which are under the special observation of the Agricultural Department, such as indigo and sugar. I propose to deal only with the lac, tobacco, oil and the alkali industries.

Lac.

A helpful and progressive industry.

The culture of the lac insect and the manufacture of shellac were not treated in detail by Mr. Collin. I have examined some of the factories in Chota Nagpur, and the literature on the subject, and venture to think that, as Mr. Puran Improvements suggested.

Chand said at the Benares Industrial Conference in December 1905, the methods of working are crude. I suggest therefore more mechanical power. The new factories starting at Purulia are better fitted than the old factories. In the second place, the twisted cloth bags from which the heated exudation is scraped, contain some resinous matter, and under present methods the bags are boiled in alkali to remove the residuary matter. This residue would be removed more effectively by a spirit and hence there is the necessity of obtaining industrial alcohol to which reference has been made under "Chemical Manufactures." In the Chota Nagpur tract the spirit which could be obtained would be that of the mahuwa flower, from which country spirit is distilled at present. In the third place, it should be realised that the lac is not now gathered for the dye, but that it is gathered for its resinous properties. This has been pointed out in Mr. Stebbing's recently published note on the lac insect. But the old process of manufacture continues, and at present there is much time and trouble taken in removing the dye from stick lac. Hence it is a matter for further enquiry as to the exact state in which the lac should be collected; for the lac from which the insects have swarmed contains less colouring matter. In the fourth place, I found that the District Officers were taking active steps to remove the nuisance which the washings create round lac factories. Now Mr. D. Hooper, F.I.C., F.C.S., at page 305 of the Monograph on Lac (Agricultural Ledger No. 9 of 1901) states that dye liquor is a rich source of nitrogen, and would constitute a valuable manure. At Ranchi I found that it had been so employed with considerable success: and I have advised elsewhere that the dye liquor be spread out on neighbouring cultivated fields; whereby the nuisance might be removed and at the same time the fields benefited. There is an example in the similar use of indigo washings. I am informed that it would not pay to consolidate the dye washings into poudrette cakes. There is a sufficient number of cheap manures in the market already.

One manufacturer told me that, comprehensive as Sir George Watt's monograph is, there is still much more that a practical maker of shellac ought to know. The industry is a good one in that it affords remunerative employment at many scattered centres to the working population, and is a complete antidote to the failure of agricultural crops. Certain Marwaris have within the last two years started manufacture in the Pakaur subdivision in the Sonthal Parganas: people flock in for labour, and earn four annas to twelve annas a day. At Jhalda in the Manbhum district I found that the factories had increased in ten years from 10 to over 30, employing about 1,500 people. In the whole district in 1907 there were 5,056 people employed in 122 factories, small and large.

The market is a sensitive one. It was affected by the American crisis of 1907 and by a strike in the hat manufacturing districts in England. (Reynolds and Sellers' Review of the Shellac Trade in 1907).

The trade both in stick-lac and in shellac and button lac is an enormous one, as the following figures show:—

Exports from Calcutta in lakhs.	1902-03.	1903-04.	1904-05.	1905-06.	1906-07.
Stick-lac ...	1·19	1·07	3·14	4·54	8·86
Shellac ...	157·15	217·49	258·37	264·52	289·60
Button lac ...	23·38	49·25	38·64	44·38	44·43

The industry has had one curious result. It has increased disputes about trees in Chota Nagpur and the Sonthal Parganas.

Tobacco.

Many years ago endeavours were made by Messrs. Begg, Dunlop & Co. to establish at Pusa in Darbhanga district tobacco growing and manufacture for the European market. The increased local demand for cigarettes has altered the situation. The Peninsular Tobacco Company, financed by an Anglo-American syndicate, who already have a factory at Karachi, have been building a large manufactory in the vicinity of Monghyr to make cigarettes for the million. Since May 1908 it is in working order. The Collector (Mr. Hugh McPherson) wrote in 1907:—"The new industry will increase the importance of Monghyr as a manufacturing and trading centre, there will be a considerable addition to the demand for labour, and the cultivators of the plant will get better prices for their crops and be stimulated to improve its quality. Tobacco is at present grown over 12,000 acres of land, mainly in Begusarai, and the area may be expected to increase considerably in the near future."

The development of cigarette manufacture.

In Jessore district, tobacco curing was started by Mr. McLeod of Kotchandpore but was given up in 1907.

In the Rangpur district in the Eastern Province, the Rangpur Tobacco Company with a capital of one lakh is being floated.

The habit of cigarette smoking is spreading amongst all classes, and in Calcutta the manufacture of cigarettes is being undertaken with vigour. There are the Globe Cigarette Company at 20, Tangra Road, the East India Cigarette Company at 17, Baliaghatta Road, and the Bengal Cigarette Manufacturing Company, at 42, Shampukur Street. These firms have been importing cigarette making machinery, and have a well organized system of distribution. Ten cigarettes of the cheapest quality are being sold for a pice. It would have been better if indigenous manufacturing activities had been diverted into a more productive channel.

Oil Manufacture.

Outside the metropolitan area, within which are large mills like those of the Howrah Oil Mills Company, Ltd, of Ramkristopore, and the Gouripore Company, Ltd., of Naihati, there are very few oil mills in the province. I found one worked under European supervision at Berhampore, one in Nadia district, two under Marwaris and Bengalis in Patna district, two in Bhagalpur district, and nine in Burdwan district, the best of which is worked by Marwaris. The mills in Burdwan and Berhampore were working with imported seed: in one case the seed came all the way from Hathras. Hence the industry might be more developed in the Bihar districts, where seed is locally procurable. The total quantity of linseed which came into Calcutta from Bengal districts in 1906-07 was 12·7 lakhs. It is not necessary that there should be antagonism with the local teli. I found the following plant in different places:—a 20 horse-power engine working 54 mills; a 20 horse-power engine working 42 mills; a 16 horse-power engine working 32 mills; another 16 horse power engine working 26 mills, and 12 mills worked by an oil engine. The Victoria Mills Company of Bhagalpur was started by Babu Kirtti Chandra Chatterjea, a retired pleader; and after some vicissitudes it is now expanding to 50 mills. Some are worked in conjunction with other industries, such as flour grinding, rice husking, timber cutting and sarki making. Babu Baij Nath Goenka of Monghyr has shown considerable enterprise in erecting a combined mill—a Stamford's corn grinding mill, a timber-cutting machine, a Carter's disintegrator, and an Empire oil mill. I think that at all the district and subdivisional headquarters, in the rabi producing areas of the Bihar districts, there is room for combined flour and oil mills. There is a constant demand for good oil. The jails produce pure mustard oil, and can sell it above the local market rate. In some parts sarguja (Guizotica abyssynica, niger seed) is used with mustard seed in the proportion of 1 to 20, partly to assist the expression of the oil on account of its gritty nature, partly as an adulterant. In Calcutta besides the oil of the niger seed,

More power-mills required in the Bihar districts.

the oil of the poppy, sesamum, and cotton seeds are mixed with mustard oil; these, however, are considered by the Health Officer as not injurious to health.

It is desirable that the oil-cake should not leave the country. In Dr. Voelcher's words (Report on Indian Agriculture, paragraph 127) "the oil having itself no manurial properties, and being derived from the atmostphere and not from the soil, is a fitting object for export, but to send away the entire seed, or the refuse after the removal of the oil, is to send away the valuable manurial constituents contained in the seed; in brief, to export them is to export the soil's fertility." The following figures are relevant to these remarks:—

Suitable for export ...	Vegetable oils ..	25·6	28·5
Unsuitable for export ..	Oil-seeds ..	228·4	220·7
	Oil-cake manure ..	6·3	13·6
	Total ..	234·7	234·3

In the matter of castor oil I found at the hand-mill in Sewan considerable waste of power and material. There is room for the introduction of more economical devices, and capitalists have an opening here. I find that oil mills with mechanical power will pay in the Bihar districts, if the cost of supervision be not too high. The recently invented American Continuous Extracting Press requires an engine of 40 horse-power and can crush 25 maunds of vegetable oil-seed per hour. The remarks of Mr. K. N. Ramanujachari in The Indian Review for March 1908, on the Oil Trade of India indicate the number of subsidiary advantages arising from the increase in the local expression of oils; the increase in lubricants for increased machinery, and the application of oils for medicine, paints, varnishes and soap manufacture.

Alkalis.

The imports of caustic soda.

It has been laid down by Sir George Watt that the industrial progress of a country can be judged of by the extent to which it produces the alkalis required by its own industries. Such industries as India possesses are, he continues, a century behind the times. Among alkalis there are ammonia and its salts, potassium and its salts, sodium and its compounds. One of the last, caustic soda, is required in many of the nascent manufacturing industries, and it is at present imported. It was hoped that it would be possible to obtain it by decomposition from common salt, sodium chloride, which India has in abundance. Sir George Watt, however, pointed out (Indian Alkalis, 1902) that the possibility of under-selling the product of the chemical works of Europe was doubtful.

CHAPTER VII.

Mr. Collin's proposals and the future development of arts and industries in Bengal.

The text of Part I of this Special Report dealing with industrial instruction was, that it should be kept in view that the instruction which is given should enable pupils to earn a livelihood, and that the central institutions should be kept in the highest possible state of efficiency. In this Part II, dealing with industries and industrial arts, the text is that under present conditions it is for the small capitalist to take up in a business-like way the manufacture of articles for which there is a demand and the raw material of which exists in the country; and, in the case of industrial arts that what is required is greater publicity and an extended market.

Mr. Collin's chief proposals relating to industries were six in number. They were—

(1) the stimulation of native industries by the preparation or purchase of materials of public works in India, and not in England;

(2) the establishment of a school for drawing and design for industrial purposes and the circulation of designs amongst native workers;

(3) the circulation of practical instructions among leading braziers regarding moulding and working in dies;

(4) the introduction of schools for mat and basket work in localities where the business is carried on;

(5) the improvement of ornamental pottery; and

(6) the establishment of a weaving school at Berhampore in connection with silk and cotton weaving.

The principles of these proposals I repeat and support. The first will be considered below amongst my general recommendations. The second has been discussed under the subject of the Government School of Art in Part I and under the head of "Industrial Arts" in Part II. The third has been considered under the head of "Brassware" in Chapter III of Part II. So also the fourth proposal under the head of "Mat ware" in the same chapter. The fifth proposal is included in the general remarks under Chapter V of Part II, and the sixth proposal in connection with the improvement of the weaving of textiles has crystallised in the scheme for a central weaving institute at Serampore, which has been considered in Chapter III of this part and also in the summary in Chapter I of Part I.

There are certain general recommendations which I desire to make as to the manner in which Government may foster industrial development in this province.

1. One means of stimulating native industries lies in the preparation or purchase as far as possible, of materials for public works in India, and not in England. This is accepted in principle by Government; the desirability of translating good will into tangible orders for material is shown under the head of "Ironwork". The public still await the report of the Stores Committee. The value of Government stores imported into Calcutta for each of the last five years to 1907 has been:—3·22, 3·73, 2·67, 3·61, and 3·00 crores respectively.

2. It is advisable, if not absolutely essential, to have an expert Superintendent of Industries, or Director of Industrial Enquiries, as the appointment is called in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies. On the one hand there is required the sympathetic enthusiasm of one man rather than any elaborate scheme, if anything practicable is to be done. On the other hand it is not the fault of many would-be industrialists, but of their traditions and environment, that they lack initiative, co-operation of capital, business capacity and organization. The feature of the present position is that it is not the Indian commercial classes who wish to engage in industrial enterprise,—commerce pays them better; but it is principally classes in whom the commercial instinct is not fully developed and who are finding that the pressure for existence in literary lines is too great. There are other reasons—some of which, but not all, are praise-worthy,—for the movement towards industrial development; but the fact remains that it is not the business heads in the Indian community who are being attracted to manufacture, but the professional and landholding classes. The real difficulty is to find an expert officer who would combine suitable scientific qualifications in engineering and chemistry with sympathetic knowledge of the country and of local conditions. The Bengal Government have made some proposals for such an appointment, and the subject is still under discussion. There were many causes of the comparative failure of the extension of the improved hand-loom in Bengal, but in my opinion the chief reason was that most of the agents employed were admittedly amateurs. An officer of Government is required not only to give the impetus, but to give advice and encouragement. In a sentence, a second Mr. Chatterton is wanted for Bengal.

3. Next, it is advisable for Government to improve technical instruction by the concentration of thought and expenditure on the central institutions. These are in Bengal the Sibpore Engineering College, the scope of which is much wider than its limited title would denote, and the Government School of Art. My proposals under this head have been given in detail in Chapter II of Part I. They are simply the development of the policy laid down by the Bengal Government in 1891. Concentration is also required in the industries which Government has selected as subjects for technical instruction. These are weaving and leather work, the proposals for which are to be found in Chapter III of this Part II.

4. The imperial technical scholarships have since 1904 been given in Bengal for the subject of mining engineering; and the advice of the mercantile community is to continue this subject for state scholarships. But only one state scholar can, as a rule, be selected in each year for each province. In the year 1908, however, two scholarships were given to Bengal in mining engineering and in leatherwork. I recommend that the Bengal Government should be prepared to subsidise, under certain conditions, the local association which has already sent abroad many youths of this province for technical education, and also that the Bengal Government should independently give scholarships to youths who wish to study the industry of leather-tanning in Madras or Cawnpore.

5. Encouragement should continue to be given to district exhibitions of industries and industrial arts. Hitherto assistance has been given only by the Agricultural Department and on account of agricultural products. The conference which the Industrial Education Committee held with Bengal officers on the 14th December, 1901, decided that such exhibitions were of great value, specially at melas. Sir George Watt suggested that money awards be given and that the best articles be purchased as samples. It is perhaps too much to say that a spirit of emulation has been excited. Some of the exhibitions would lapse entirely in the absence of official support. But still it is in this way that the local artisan can be encouraged, and that the local notables can be induced to take an interest in encouraging him. Some exhibitions have been started in connection with melas, as those at Dumka and Behta; some as an industrial show, as that of Bankipur; and some in conjunction with agricultural exhibitions, such as those at Bankura and Hooghly. There was also the comprehensive industrial exhibition in Calcutta in December 1906. There are now 20 districts out of 33 in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa in which annual exhibitions are held. Melas, indeed, must in Bengal for some time take the place of the other forms of advertisements, such as catalogues, circulars and newspapers, amongst the uneducated public. At the following places the exhibitions specially include industrial products:—Banjetia, Barasat, Basirhat, Kushtia, Jhenidah, Bankura, Chinsura, Midnapore, Suri, Kendrapara, Angul, Balasore, Sambalpore, Ranchi, Bankipore and Monghyr. A perusal of the reports of these exhibitions reveals an unexpected amount of inventive ingenuity principally in connection with weaving. This is likely to be lost, unless examined by an expert and made the subject of experiment at a Government weaving institute.

6. The local industrial arts can be effectively encouraged by a ready sale of the best articles, which arises principally from advertisement and publicity. Hence grants should be made for the inauguration of sample art ware depôts at district head-quarters, provided the local public take up the matter themselves, and in connection with the School of Art in Calcutta. In most districts will be found men of public spirit and culture. Samples of the work of those artists and artificers, who are ready to execute orders, should be obtained, and each sample should bear a note as to the maker's name and address and the price of the article. As Mr. Collin and others have said, native workmen are frequently unenterprising and usually dilatory; but still there is even now a difficulty in obtaining orders from want of publicity. There is an art agency at Murshidabad and another in Cuttack, which effect a little good; and I have recently obtained Government assistance for sample depôts which are being started at Bankura and Bankipore. I am simply repeating what Mr. Coldstream, a zealous Panjab officer, urged before the Art Conference of 1894 held at Lahore.

The subject is discussed at page 19 of Part I of this Special Report as well as in Chapter V of this Part II.

7. It is advisable that Government should disseminate more freely among the public the information which is obtained so laboriously by its officers. Let me point out that Mr. Collin's report of 1890 on arts and industries, full of excellent suggestions as it was, was never formally published. It was criticised by a few heads of departments, and in 1895, three years after its preparation when I asked for a copy, I was informed that it was confidential. A monograph on a selected subject has year by year been prepared; a copy has been forwarded to the Government of India; but few outside official circles have known that it has been published. The recent reports by Mr. Watson on leather-curing and tanning deserve the widest publicity. I found that the manager of a new tannery in Bengal had never heard of Mr. Rowland Chandra's exhaustive monograph on tanning published in 1904. Professor T. K. Gajjar in his address before the Industrial Conference at Surat in 1907 has drawn attention to the imperfect circulation of such literature. A Director of Industries would circulate much information through the press; he would know to whom particular information might be useful; and would doubtless copy the methods of the Agricultural Department in issuing leaflets. In the Appendix to the present report a small bibliography of books and papers dealing with industries has been prepared. The following is a list of Bengal industrial monographs, as prescribed by Government. Eleven out of the fourteen monographs have been written by Indian officers.

Year.	Subject prescribed by the Government of India.
1893-94	... Brass and Copperware.
1894-95	... Pottery and Glassware.
1895-96	... Dyes and Dying.
1896-97	... Cotton Fabrics.
1897-98	... Woollen Fabrics.
1898-99	... Silk Fabrics.
1899-00	... Ivory Carving.
1900-01	... nil
1901-02	... Wood Carving.
1902-03	... Tanning and Leather Work.
1903-04	Gold and Silverware.
1904-05	... Stone Carving.
1905-06	... Carpet Making.
1906-07	... Iron Work.
1907-08	... Paper Making.

8. Government should, I think, in addition to the provision of technical education, hold tests and give certificates of competency. There are two models to follow: the Madras system of technical examination (Calendar of the Commission for Government Examinations, Madras, 1907-08, page 64), or the Bombay system (Calendar of the Victoria Jubilee Technical Institute, 1908, page 60). In the former, the Government itself gives a certificate, a group certificate or a diploma for an immense variety of subjects ranging from practical telegraphy to horticulture and from carpentry to lace making. In the latter, the Technical Institute holds the examinations on behalf of the City and Guilds of London Institute, which has a list of no fewer than 74 subjects, ranging from soap manufacture to motor car machinery. As Bengal already gives, or is about to give, recognized diplomas in mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, mining, agriculture, and veterinary science, I suggest that the new joint technical examination board for Sibpur College and its affiliated schools in both provinces might arrange to hold examinations in several of the subjects named in the City and Guilds of London list and grant certificates therein. I am sure from what I have heard that many employers as well as employees would welcome some such impartial proof of qualification. The argument that examinations would be held in some subjects in which no instruction is formally given is not conclusive. The system has prevailed in Madras for many years, and under its old name of "Higher Examinations in various branches of Technical Science and Art and in Industries" was one of the few things which met with commendation in the MacDonnell Memorandum of 1886.

9. It is finally submitted for consideration that in the distribution of honours for public service recognition might be given to those who have proved themselves public spirited captains of industry and who have piloted new industries successfully; and that rewards be offered by Government for certain inventions which might improve the quality and outturn of indigenous manufacture, such as for example, the adaptation of the fly-shuttle hand-loom for the weaving of tussar silk.

In the body of this report it will be found that it has been suggested that Government may appropriately assist in the following industries:—Weaving, leather manufacture, iron work, brass ware, and chemical manufacture. It has also been pointed out that there are openings for Indian capitalists in the following industries:—weaving, carpet weaving, pottery, carpentry, matware, leather tanning, cutlery, brassware, glass manufacture, chemical manufacture, dyeing, match making, soap making, perfume manufacture, lac manufacture and in the manufacture of vegetable oils.

Mr. Trailokya Nath Mukharji, whose opinion is of value as he was the founder of the Indian Industrial Association, informs me that in his opinion there are openings for the manufacture of umbrellas, paints, hosiery, braziery, soaps, candles, leather articles, lamps, and in the preservation of fruits. These are also recommended to the notice of capitalists. Mr. E. R. Watson, F.C.S., of the Indian Educational Service, whose researches in leather manufacture and in iron work are of great value, suggests that there is an opening in the following subjects:—Dyeing and cotton printing, soap making, lac refining, glass manufacture, varnish and paints, scents, cement, matches, tanning extracts, oil, enamelled ware, pencils, tobacco, silk weaving, rice bowls, and in sugar. Indigenous enterprise has already taken up the manufacture of soap, matches, pencils, tobacco and silk weaving. Mr. Henry T. Tozer, the industrial expert of the India Office, commends the indigenous manufacture of leather goods, silk goods, paper, iron and steel, and soap. Mr. S. J. Tellery, a recognized expert in Indian art industries, commends the revivification of fancy silk weaving, metal work, wood and stone carving, and states that the manufacture of the following might be worked with commercial success: woollen pile carpets, embroidery, enamelling on metal, and hand printing on cotton and silk.

Though Government assistance is expected and on certain lines has been granted to a considerable extent, yet both Indian and European official and non-official observers coincide in the view that it is by the addition of indigenous capital and brains to the indigenous inherited skill, both manual and artistic, of the Indian artificer that any improvement in indigenous manufactures, whether purely industrial or artistic, will ensue.

A few quotations are given. In the Viceregal Council, the Hon'ble Mr. Harvey, the Member for Commerce and Industry, said at the Budget Debate in March 1908:—

"Government have already done a good deal and are anxious to do more, but it is only with the co-operation of the people themselves and active assistance from capitalists of the country that great results can be obtained."

At the Industrial Conference for the United Provinces in August 1907, the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir John Hewett, said:—

"But if Government does its part, if it trains up skilled workmen and foremen capable of managing industrial businesses, the people must do their part, they must make up their minds to invest their capital in the development of the country."

In his address at the opening of the Chittagong Cotton Mill, Sir Lancelot Hare, Lieutenant-Governor of Eastern Bengal and Assam, said:—

"You have risked your own money—not I truly hope running an immensely great risk—and have not, as some have, called upon other people whom it is their fashion to represent as on the verge of pauperism to pay the cost of protecting an industry against its own inefficiency due to a conservatism which refuses to take advantage of improved methods."

Mr. Pramatha Nath Bose in his "Essays on Industrial Development" has written:—

"Besides the comparative scarcity of capital, the inadequacy of technical training and the lack of the amount of co-operation requisite for large undertakings, there is another and probably more patent cause which stands in the way of industrial development—the hereditary aversion of the higher castes for trades and industries which have hitherto been relegated to the lower, and in some cases, to the very lowest classes of the Indian society."

The Hon'ble Babu Bhupendra Nath Bose has stated in The Indian World for January 1908:—

"It is becoming more and more apparent that the realisation of our political ideals is to a great extent, if not wholly, dependent upon our progress as a nation in the paths of useful knowledge, industry and commerce, and upon our powers of co-operation, combination and organization."

Mr. R. C. Dutt, C.I.E., presiding at the Benares Industrial Conference of 1905, said:—

"We must change our old habit of universal cottage industries, and learn to form companies, erect mills, and adopt the methods of combined action, if we desire to foster or revive our industries."

We find also the same opinions expressed in organs of the press which ordinarily have different points of view. The Statesman confirms the findings of the Industrial Conference of 1907 that the obstacles to development are lack of adequate technical knowledge and lack of capital. The Pioneer says that the most hopeful sign for the future is the recent development of some interest in the subject of industrial enterprise, academical and intermittent as that interest is, and that when the leading politicians back their sentiments with capital and send some of their sons into industry the battle will be more than half won. To the would-be industrialist in Bengal, I can only say:—

"Ingeniis patuit campus, certusque merenti Stat favor: ornatur propriis industria donis."

Enquiry as to the possibility or desirability of improving the cure of hides (and skins) exported from Bengal.

Information which led to this enquiry being taken up.

At a meeting of a Committee called together by the Bengal Government to discuss the starting of a weaving school at Serampore, it was mentioned by Mr. Nimmo, representing the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, that the export of hides and skins from Calcutta was a very important trade, and that it might be worth consideration by Government whether any instruction could be given to improve the cure of these hides (and skins), and consequently obtain a better price for them.

Mr. Earle made enquiries in England on this subject and understood from Dr. Gordon Parker, Director of the London Leather Industries Research Laboratories, Herold's Institute, Bermondsey, that the hides (and skins) exported from Calcutta were not properly cured, and that in consequence they fetched a much lower price than they would if cured properly.

Outline of the present enquiry.

I was in consequence placed on special duty by the Government of Bengal to make further enquiries to decide if it were desirable for this Government to start any form of instruction, in order to bring about a better cure of the hides (and skins) exported from this province. For this purpose I consulted the Secretary of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, and from him obtained a list of the more important merchants exporting hides from Calcutta (viz., Messrs. Ralli Brothers, Messrs. Ernsthausen, Limited, Messrs. Cohn Brothers and Fuchs, Messrs. Thomson Lehzen & Co., Messrs. Schröder Smidt & Co., and Messrs Maurice Feilmann & Co.). I had interviews with representatives of these firms and also with a representative of the firm of Messrs. Wutow Guttman & Co., also hide merchants of Calcutta. I was able to inspect many different preparations and classes of hides in the godowns of these firms, and in company with Mr Frerichs, of Messrs. Schröder Smidt & Co., I visited the hide market in Calcutta and saw the system of buying in vogue there. I visited the Calcutta Municipal Slaughter-house situated at Tangra to see there the method of flaying and the selling of hides. This is the only place within the municipal limits where cattle may be slaughtered. I also interviewed Messrs. Moll Schutte & Co., a firm who have formed an agreement with the Calcutta Municipality and take all cattle which die within municipal limits, flay them and work up the carcases for manure, fallow, etc. I visited the few tanners around Calcutta, viz., Messrs. J. Teil & Co., Messrs. Monteith & Co., the Bengal Tannery and the Calcutta Tannery, and obtained their opinions as to the efficacy of the Indian method of curing hides.

Having obtained an idea, from my enquiries in Calcutta, as to the most suitable districts in the mufassal to visit, I made somewhat detailed enquiries in the Darbhanga district, obtaining the assistance of the Civil officers of the district, and also of the managers of estates in that district. I also visited the Jessore district; and made enquiries from Mr. Cumming, the Collector of the 24-Parganas

I visited Mr. Chatterton, the Director of Technical and Industrial Enquiries in Madras, who, in connection with the Madras School of Arts Chrome Tannery, has practical experience of hides and leather; at the same time I was able to compare the treatment given to hides and skins exported from Madras with the cure of Bengal hides and skins. I also visited Major Forestier-Walker, Superintendent of the Government Harness and Saddlery Factory at Cawnpore; and during my visit to Cawnpore, I also met the managers of the various large private tanneries of that city, and Mr. Noronha, a hide merchant, who supplies all the hides to the Government Harness and Saddlery Factory and a large number to the other tanners of Cawnpore. I thus obtained the opinion of the largest tanners in India on the efficacy of Indian methods of cure.

In addition to these enquiries I have also corresponded with Dr. J. Gordon Parker of Bermondsey and Mr. A. Seymour Jones of Messrs. J. Meredith Jones and Sons, Limited, Leather Manufacturers, Wrexham. I availed myself of all the statistical information I could find concerning the hide and skin trade and had also occasion to call on Mr. Noel-Paton, the Director-General of Commercial Intelligence, to ask his opinion as to how far I was safe in drawing a certain deduction from trade statistics as published by his office.

Description of the present trade in hides and skins in Bengal, methods of curing, methods of collecting, etc.

The word 'hide' is technically used for the skin of a bullock or cow; the word 'skin' is used only for the skins of goats and sheep. The skins of buffaloes are always known as 'buffaloes.' A 'cured' hide or skin is one which has been treated in some way to preserve it temporarily until it reaches the tanner.

Hides are exported from Bengal viâ Calcutta cured in the following ways:—

Air-dried or flint-dried.—The hide as it is taken from the animal is spread out or pegged out on the ground with the 'flesh' side uppermost or stretched out on a bamboo frame and allowed to dry in the air. The hides come in this condition to Calcutta. Before export they are frequently 'arsenicated' by dipping in a very dilute solution of white arsenic in caustic soda and again allowing to dry. This arsenic dip is supposed to act as an insecticide.

Dry salted.—The hides, when taken from the animals, are spread out on the ground with the flesh side uppermost and on the flesh side a strong solution of 'Patna' or 'Muzaffarpur' or 'Earth salt' is poured. This is then generally worked into the hide by rubbing with a piece of stone or brick, and the hide is then allowed to dry. Further applications of salt solution or mixture of salt and water are subsequently given, and the hide again allowed to dry. Patna salt and Muzaffarpur salt and earth-salt are apparently all the same thing, essentially an impure sulphate of soda mixed with earth. The hides come in this condition to Calcutta, and are not further treated for export.

'Skins' are either air-dried or dry-salted in much the same way as hides. In either preparation the skin is stretched out on a board to which it is pinned by a considerable number of nails all round the edge. It is the usual practice to stretch the skins quite tightly in this way

Buffalo hides are almost always dry-salted. Those which are not so cured are air-dried.

Hides and skins are collected from every district in Bengal and a large number of these hides and skins are brought to Calcutta for export.

Hides may be divided into two classes—'slaughtered' and 'dead'—the former being from slaughtered animals and the latter from animals which have died from disease or old age or by accident. The number of slaughtered hides collected is probably very much smaller than the number of 'deads.'

In every district where there are Muhammadans there will be found villages in which cattle are slaughtered. In the Darbhanga district I visited two such villages near Darbhanga, Kuruni, 8 miles distant, and Jale, 15 miles distant, and one such village, Bowi or Bowri, 2 miles from Madhubani. The butchers in these villages send out men or go to neighbouring 'haths' within a radius of about 12 miles and buy old cattle, which are no longer fit for work or for milking. These cattle are chiefly bought from Muhammadan cultivators, as a Hindu is prevented by his caste from selling his cattle for slaughter. The butcher may get a certain number of cattle from Hindus by misinforming the sellers as to what he intends to do with the cattle, but the number obtained in this way is not great. After these cattle have been slaughtered, the meat is sold in the village, and either the butcher air-dries the hides himself or he sells them to the owner of a hide godown in the 'green' state (a hide just as it is taken from the animal is termed 'green'). In each of the villages above mentioned from 6 to 10 cattle are slaughtered daily. The hide is much the most valuable part of the animal. The whole animal will, on the average, be worth about Rs. 7, and the hide of this animal will be worth about Rs. 5.* If the butcher sells his hides 'air-dried' to the owner of the hide godown, he appears to get from 10 annas to 12 annas per lb. according to quality and cure.

In the towns possessing Municipalities there are usually Municipal slaughter-houses in which the butchers of the town must slay their cattle. In Bihar and in and around Calcutta a large number of cattle are slaughtered. Thus, taking Darbhanga as a typical small town in Bihar, here from 30 to 100 cattle are slaughtered per diem, In Calcutta itself all cattle must be slaughtered at Tangra. Here about 250 cattle are slaughtered every day. Around Calcutta there is a belt of smaller Municipal slaughter-house, e.g., Cossipore and Dum-Dum. and from Calcutta and neighbouring slaughter-houses about 600 hides per day are obtained. From the larger slaughter-houses the hides are always sold at once in the 'green' state to the owners of hide godowns. These 'green' hides may be sold by weight, as at Darbhanga, or for a lump sum, as at Calcutta, where the hide is bought while the animal is still alive. At these larger slaughter-houses the butchers have no difficulty in disposing of their hides—the buyers come down to the slaughter-houses and are very keen on getting the hides.

In every case the slaughtered hides are first purchased from the butchers by Muhammadan biparis, owners of small hide godowns. These small hide godowns can be found almost anywhere in Bengal. As we shall see later they are the first step in the collecting agency of 'deads' also. The number of hide godowns and their distribution within the Province may be judged from the following examples:—

(1) The northern portion of the Darbhanga district (roughly the area marked out in the accompanying sketch map).

Around Darbhanga town there are three large godowns and at least three smaller ones. At Jale, near Jogiara, 15 miles north-west from Darbhanga on the Darbhanga-Baraigpia Railway, there is a small godown. Ten to 15 miles further up the same railway line at Sitamari is another godown. At a village Bowi or Bowri, near Madhubani, about 15 miles north-east of Darbhanga, on the Darbhanga-Jaynagar Railway, there are 3 or 4 small godowns.

None of the godowns are more than a few miles from the railway.

(2) The Jessore district.—This is a rather large district, and is subdivided into five subdivisions, viz., Sudder, Narail, Magurah, Jhenida and Bongong. In the Sudder subdivision there are two godowns at Jessore and one at Kaliganj. In the Jhenida subdivision there are two godowns, and without doubt the other subdivisions are equally served in this way.

* FOOTNOTE.—These and other figures given as current prices in this report refer to the period of my enquiry, viz. June, July and August 1907.

From these godowns the hides are generally sent direct to Calcutta. The smaller biparis may sell to larger biparis, but the majority send direct to Calcutta, to an aratdar or commission agent. In Calcutta there are a large number of hide-godowns belonging to these Muhammadan commission agents, mostly situated in the neighbourhood of Chitpur Road and north of Lal Bazar. These men offer parcels of 1,000 or more for sale to the European hide merchants. Every morning these men send notes to the principal European firms showing what parcels of hides they are offering for sale, and these firms send representatives to inspect the parcels and buy. The hides are sold by private auction, each firm making an offer which is not disclosed to the other bidders. Generally a sample batch of 50 is examined, and the average weight of the hides is supplied by the aratdar, and on this the firm's buyer makes his estimate. If the whole batch does not come up to the sample shown, a rebate has to be paid by the aratdar.

So much for the preparation and collection of slaughtered hides by native collecting agencies.

As has been already mentioned, a Hindu raiyat is prevented by his caste from selling cattle for slaughter, and when a beast becomes ill or too old for work or milking he desowns it and turns it loose to die. As soon as it dies the carcase becomes the property of a chamar. Every zamindari is divided up into more or less well defined areas among the chamars on the zamindari, and thus each chamar has an area within which he is entitled to all carcases. For this right the chamar pays an annual fee to the zamindar. The chamar skins the carcases and generally cures the hide himself, making an air-dry preparation. When he has collected 3 or 4 hides he takes them to a small hide godown and sells them. In the neighbourhood of towns where there are fairly large godowns the biparis may send out men who will visit villages within, say, an area of 12 miles and obtain the hides within this area in a 'green' state. The chamar sells his hides to the bipari either by weight or as so much per piece. Within areas in which there is any competition for the hides the system of selling by weight appears to be generally in vogue. The price mentioned both by the chamars and by the biparis and paid to the chamars ran for from 7 to 9 annas per lb. The deads are disposed of by the small bipari in just the same way as has been already described in the case of 'slaughtered' hides.

This collection by native agency may be called the 'normal' method of collection.

The best known classes of hides which came into Calcutta in this way from Bengal are called Patnas, Darbhangas, Ranchis, Sambalpurs, Cuttacks, and Mehapurs. Roughly speaking, the name denotes the district from which the hides come, though by usage these names are coming to some extent to indicate classes or preparations.

Patnas are the better class of hides from Behar. They are 'slaughtered' hides and are 'air-dried' preparations. They have been taken off carefully, so that very little flesh remains on the hide, and have been carefully dried on bamboo frames. These fetch about Rs. 18 per 20 lbs., and as the average weight will run to about 7 lbs., 20 pieces will fetch Rs. 120 to Rs. 130.

Darbhangas, of the better class, slaughtered, are similar to Patnas There are, however, very many 'deads' known as Darbhangas, and the preparation of these is poor. A great deal of flesh is left on the hide, and it has been very badly stretched in drying, so that the preparation has an untidy crumpled appearance. These poorer class 'Darbhangas' fetch Rs. 13 to Rs. 15 per 20 lbs. With the average weight running to 7 lbs., this means that 20 pieces fetch Rs. 90 to Rs. 100.

Ranchis are a class of small 'deads,' air-dried and not well prepared. Fetch about Rs. 15 per 20 lbs., and as the weight runs between 5 and 6 lbs., 20 pieces fetch only from Rs. 75 to Rs. 90.

Sambalpurs are also a poor class of air-dried 'deads,' fetching only Rs. 13 to Rs. 16 per 20 lbs. and about Rs. 80 per 20 pieces.

Mehapurs are hides collected from the districts in the Presidency Division, such as the 24-Parganas, Nadia, Jessore, Khulna. These hides are collected by the biparis in the 'green' state from the chamars and 'dry salted.' These fetch about Rs. 10 per 20 lbs., have an average weight of 10 lbs., and consequently fetch about Rs. 100 per 20 pieces. As they are salted, they weigh about 1½ time as much as if 'air-dried.'

Besides the collection by native agency as has been described, a considerable number of hides are now collected by the European firms by means of their own agencies in the district. Thus, Messrs. Schröder Smidt & Co. have an agent at Dinapore and he collects hides over a large part of Behar; in Darbhanga several of the Muhammadan hide merchants prepare hides especially for Messrs. Schröder Smidt & Co. A collector goes round from Dinapore and visits these godowns periodically. The preparation for Messrs. Schröder Smidt is better than for the Calcutta market, less flesh is left on the hides, and they are carefully stretched and dried. Some of the biparis considered that it paid them to sell to Messrs. Schröder Smidt & Co., whilst others preferred to sell in Calcutta.

The hides as bought in Calcutta are sorted, trimmed a little, arsenicated if 'air-dried' cures, and baled for export. The classification of Calcutta hides is very complex. They are classified in the first place according to the locality from which they are obtained, in the second place into first, second, thirds, fourths and fifths according to the quality of the hide and cure, absence of sores, brand marks, hair-falls, etc., in the third place according to weight. Each of the large exporting firms has its own 'marks' which are known on the home markets

About 45 per cent. of the Calcutta hides are sent to Germany. The next largest consumers are Italy and Austria-Hungary. Spain, United States of America, France and the United Kingdom are comparatively small consumers. The United Kingdom takes only 2-3. per cent. The largest quantity of 'buffalo' hides are taken by the United States, and the States are also the largest consumers of skins. The figures for 1904-05 give a general idea of the trade since 1902, and in this year the following countries took the following percentages of the Calcutta hides and skins, reckoned by number. (Figures calculated from tables in Report on Maritime Trade of Bengal, 1904-05):—

	Hides per cent.
United Kingdom	2·1
Germany	45·2
Italy	18·8
Austria-Hungary	15·1
Spain	7·8
France	2·0
United States	7·6
Other countries	1 2

	Skins per cent
United Kingdom	6·2
France	5·5
Italy	1·8
Germany	2·0
United States	81·8
Other countries	2·7

I cannot speak with any personal knowledge of the method of disposal of the hides after they reach the consuming countries. I understand that they are in the first place bought by auction, and that the brokers in this trade are chiefly Jews. It appears that the hides have still to pass through several hands before they reach the actual consumers, i.e., the tanners The Calcutta merchants may be called on for a 'refund' if the hides are found, subsequent to purchase, not to come up to specification. Such matters are settled by arbitration.

The census figures do not give much idea as to the concentration of the trade of preparing hides for export. The number of chamars in a district forms no criterion, as many chamars are entirely engaged in agriculture. It might be thought that the number of sellers of hides, horns, bristles and bones would be more or less proportional to the extent of the trade in any district.

The 1901 census gives :—

District.	No. of sellers of hides, etc.

According to these figures the districts in which the trade in hides is largest are (1) Purnea, (2) Khulna, (3) Jessore, (4) Monghyr, (5) Calcutta, (6) Darbhanga. This does not agree with my own observations either in the district or in the Calcutta market. Ranchi hides, e.g., are a prominent class in the Calcutta market, whilst according to these figures the hide trade in Ranchi and in Chota Nagpur would appear to be very small.

The cattle population of a district should give a very fair idea of the possible size of the hide trade, but I am not aware that any figures of cattle population are available.

As is well known, the total export trade in hides and skins from British India is enormous and has increased very rapidly of recent years. At the same time the price of hides has also increased by leaps and bounds.

The following figures give the total exports of raw hides from British India (in trade figures "raw" means not tanned) :—

(During the last year, 1906-07, the total exports of hides and skins from British India were larger than ever and valued at more than 10 crores of rupees.)

About 85 per cent. of all hides exported from British India are exported from Calcutta, and of these about 60 per cent. are collected from Bengal. This is shown by the following figures for the year 1904-05 (taken at random) :—

	Hides. Wt.	Value.
		Rs.
Total Indian exports	709,261 cwts.	370 lakhs.
Share of Bengal	601,107 ,,	322 ,,
Imported by Rail and River into Calcutta (total).	637,765 ,, / 892,872 mds.	193 ,,
Imported by Rail and River into Calcutta (from Bengal).	5,33,981 ,,	110 ,,

These figures are sufficient to show that the trade in hides is one of the most important export trades in Bengal. It is second in value only to the jute trade.

I made it a special point to decide to whom the money ultimately goes which is paid by the countries for whom the hides are exported from Bengal. I found rather to my surprise that there was not such a very great difference between the prices paid by the European firms in Calcutta and the prices paid by the small Muhammadan biparis to the first owners of the hides, i.e., the butchers or the chamars. At the time of my enquiry the Calcutta prices could be taken as Rs. 18 per 20 lbs. for very best air-dried cure, Rs 16 as an average price and Rs. 13 as the lowest. Compare this with the prices already mentioned as paid in the district to the butchers and chamars, viz., from annas 10 to annas 12 for slaughtered hides and from annas 7 to annas 9 for "deads." We might take 12 annas as the top price paid in the district, annas 9-6 as the average and annas 7 as the lowest ordinarily paid, or being converted, Rs. 15, Rs. 11-14 and Rs. 8-12, respectively, per 20 lbs.

	Price paid to butcher or chamar.	Price paid to European firms in Calcutta.	Difference (charges for collecting and collectors' profits).
	Rs. A.	Rs. A.	Rs. A.
Best air-dried cure per 20 lbs.	15 0	18 0	3 0
Medium quality ditto	11 14	16 0	4 2
Worst quality ditto	8 12	13 0	4 4

We may reckon, then, that of the money paid by the European shipping firms in Calcutta, about 25 per cent. goes to the Muhammadan aratdars and biparis for collecting the hides, and the remaining 75 per cent. to the original owners of the hides, i.e, the butchers or the chamars.

In the case of a slaughtered hide the butcher had paid a fair price to the agriculturist for the beast, and so we may consider that a fair proportion of the money goes to the owner of the beast and compensates him for the loss of his beast. In the other case the dying of his beast is a dead loss to the Hindu raiyat and an almost clear gain to the chamar, the only set-off to this gain being the annual fee the chamar pays to the zamindar for the right to all carcases over a certain area.

It should be noted that without any outside help the chamar population must within the last 10 years have quite doubled its income, owing to the increased demand and increased prices paid for hides.

I do not attempt to give an estimate of what proportion of the money paid by European countries for Calcutta hides goes to the Calcutta shipping firms to pay them for handling and shipping. Those firms themselves say that they make from 3 to 5 per cent. profit.

The Calcutta hide merchants are of opinion that the air-dry cure, if carefully carried out and followed by dip in arsenic before export, is perfectly satisfactory. But as generally carried out this cure is unsatisfactory. As has been already stated, hides are bought by weight in Calcutta, and very generally also in the district. In consequence the butcher and the chamar in flaying leave flesh on the hide in order to increase the weight. It is true that by doing so they are only able to sell their hides at a lower rate per lb., but they consider that nevertheless they generally gain by leaving on the flesh. The Calcutta merchants are generally of opinion that the butchers and chamars and small dealers lose by thus preparing 'fleshy' hides, but they find it very difficult to convince them of this. A further discussion of the rates obtainable for 'good' and 'bad' cures will be found in the following paragraph.

It is generally admitted that the quality of the hides exported from Calcutta could be much improved by a better cure.

Leaving flesh on the hide can only have a bad effect. It prevents the hide from drying so quickly as it otherwise would; and unless a hide is dried quickly in this country putrefaction is certain to set in. The result of the putrefaction may or may not be visible at first, but it is sure to show up in the first operations preparatory to tanning. Again, even if the hide has been dried once, the flesh is very likely to take up a little moisture subsequently and putrefy or serve as a nest for maggots. It is very common to find a batch of very fleshy hides in which large areas of each hide have been eaten away by this maggot, leaving only the epidermis, so that these areas are as transparent as tissue-paper. This maggot is, I believe, the larva of a small beetle Dermestes vulpinus.

Another frequent defect in the 'air-dry' cure as practised in India is that the drying is effected too rapidly and in too strong a sun. This causes a blistering of the hide and, moreover, the outer surfaces become quite dry, hard and impervious to moisture before the inner tissues have dried, and thus the inner tissues are as it were sealed up wet and subsequently putrefy. The dry should be carried out by stretching the hides on bamboo frames and standing the frames in an open shed through which a free current of air can pass and gain access to both the 'flesh' and 'hair' sides of the hides. The method of drying the hides by stretching them out 'flesh' side up on the ground is unsatisfactory, as the hair side in contact with the ground will remain wet and probably putrefy whilst the flesh side is drying.

What tanners think of Calcutta 'air-dried' hides can be judged from the fact that Calcutta tanners invariably use 'green' hides from the slaughter-house, that the Government Harness and Saddlery Factory at Cawnpore use only 'dry-salted' hides, and that Mr. Chatterton in the Government Chrome Tannery at Madras carefully tried a batch of good quality Patna hides, but found they turned out very badly in the 'soaks' and in 'lime.'

Professor H. R. Procter in his 'Principles of Leather Manufacture' (page 41) says:—"Drying is a very common method of preserving hides as well as other putrescible matters . . . . as applied to hides, it is, to the tanner, one of the least satisfactory modes of cure, involving very considerable difficulties in bringing hides back to the moist and swollen condition which is necessary at the outset of his operations . . . great differences are found in the ease with which dried hides soften, according to the way in which the drying has been accomplished, the difficulty being greater the higher the temperature which has been used. The best mode of dry is to have in the shade in a good draught of cool air with the flesh side out. Hides or skins dried in a tropical sun are not only difficult to soften, but are liable to damaged portions which either refuse to soften or blister and go to pieces in liming owing to the structure of the hide being destroyed by heat, the outer surface drying first and forming an impervious layer which hinders evaporation from the inside, so that the moist interior becomes melted, while the outside appears quite sound. Such injuries are often only to be discovered by soaking and liming. Very similar damage may occur from putrefaction of the interior after the outside has become dry, and to get good results the drying must be gradual but rapid, especially in hot climates."

Fleming in his "Practical Tanning," page 303, says much the same thing, emphasising especially the difficulty of getting 'air-dried' hides back into a perfectly soft condition without putrefaction setting in at some point.

Villon "Treatise on the Leather Industry" translated by F. T. Addyman, page 22 speaks of the putrefaction which sets in on the under side of hides which are stretched out on the ground to be dried by the sun.

It is thus clearly submitted on all sides that the air-dry cure as at present practised on hides exported from Calcutta is most unsatisfactory. The point to decide is whether it would be better to continue the present system and insist on the necessary precautions being taken as to fleshing properly and drying carefully, or whether it would be better to introduce some other method of cure.

I think I am right in saying that the Calcutta firms are largely responsible for the prevalence of the 'air-dried' cure. A hide cured in this way has the least possible weight and thus freight is saved. Also the difficulty of estimating the weight of 'curing' material is avoided when no 'curing' material is employed.

The other method of cure which is adopted in Bengal, viz., the dry salted cure, is not so much in favour with the Calcutta hide merchants, because the curer can very materially increase the weight of a hide by putting on excess of 'earth-salt,' which is a mixture of certain salt and mud—and it is difficult to estimate exactly how much of the weight is due to the salt. Also it is easy to hide defects on the flesh side by a liberal plaster of salt and mud. It is, however, probable that from the tanner's point of view the 'dry-salted' hide is preferable to the 'air-dried." This may be judged from the fact that the Government Harness and Saddlery Factory at Cawnpore takes only dry-salted hides. The Superintendent, Major Walker, is not however satisfied with the salt used, and is thinking of establishing a collecting agency by which the hides will be cured with salt provided by the factory. He thinks that Sambhar Lake salt would be a very suitable salt for dry salting. The earth salt used at present contains impurities, such as iron pyrites, and makes iron stains on the hides. Mr. Wolf, a large exporter of skins in Madras, uses Madras sea-salt for his cure and considers this a very satisfactory curing salt, being 'mild' in its action. He said that neither Sambhar Lake salt nor the rock-salt obtainable in the Punjab was satisfactory for curing as both made the skins 'tinny' and wanting in 'nature.' A salt which is satisfactory for curing skins would be equally satisfactory for hides. I consider Mr. Wolf's opinion of value as, unlike the Calcutta hide merchants, he buys especially for a firm of tanners, viz., Messrs. Blumenthal of Paris, and is thus able to get the opinion of the tanners on any preparation he may send them.

Dr. J. Gordon Parker, Director of the London Leather Industries Laboratories, is very emphatic that dry-salting with a pure salt would be the most satisfactory method for curing Indian hides. He writes:—"I maintain that the best method for your country would be the salting of the hides on the flesh side, laying them in pile for two or three days for the salt to penetrate, and then drying them in a shady place, not in direct sunlight. It is the heat which in some cases does the harm. I consider that the plastering with alkaline earths and clay is a mistake, and I do not consider that the dipping in weak arsenic is much good. I consider that salt or sulphate of soda (Glauber salt) would be equally effective, and would suit your purpose better."

As a conclusion based on these technical considerations, I decide that the best cure would be dry-salting with Madras sea-salt, rubbing in the salt instead of pouring a solution over the hide, but that in cases where this method could not be introduced the cure would be very greatly improved by simply flaying clean, i.e., not leaving flesh on the flesh side, and drying the hides on bamboo frames under open sheds

The question of 'flaying' has already been mixed up with the question of 'cure,' as it has been stated that very generally flesh is left on the hides and is very likely to spoil the cure The hides from Tangra and the other slaughter-houses near Calcutta are, however, free from this defect but err in the opposite direction—the butchers in flaying score the hides with the knife. This appears to be simply carelessness and would probably be much more easily remedied than the other defect, viz., leaving on flesh, which is done with a definite purpose. I have watched the operation of flaying both at Tangra, where the hides are scored, and at Darbhanga, where too much flesh is left on. The scoring is not due to want of time as the Darbhanga butchers flay in about the same time as the Tangra butchers. The butchers are careless because it has become the custom to flay in this careless manner in the neighbourhood of Calcutta, and because, owing to the keen demand for hides of all sorts, they can get a good price even for these carelessly flayed hides. There should not be any difficulty in flaying without scoring even with a naked knife, but to avoid scoring even in rapid flaying by careless butchers, various flaying knives have been invented, e.g.—the Brien's skinning knife, Darso's knife and the Negass electric skinning knife (vide Villon loc cit, pages 12-13).

It is not, however, so certain that a much better price would be obtained for better cure.

The English experts are enthusiastic on the subject of improving the cure of Indian exported hides and say that if the hides were better cured they would fetch much better prices. Thus Mr. A. Seymour Jones writes:—"I would advise you . . . . to devote your attention . . . . to the improvement of local conditions of cure, &c. . . . . The Government of India could do very valuable work by educating the native in a simple way, and show that that way means more rupees and not annas for his product with a world waiting to buy his wares. The first step should be flaying, curing and packing and instructions given how to dispose of his product to best market advantage." Again he writes:—"Most of the hides and skins of India are exported, and if you can succeed in getting some improvement in flaying and cure, you at once increase the price and so benefit India." Dr. J. Gordon Parker writes "re the curing of Calcutta hides, what I endeavoured to convey to Mr. Earle when he called here was that thousands and thousands of pounds were lost yearly owing to the careless curing of Indian hides"

The Calcutta merchants are by no means so optimistic; they consider that it would pay the small hide merchants and the butchers and chamars to cure better, but they admit that the price they are able to pay for better cure is not so very much greater than the price paid for the poor cures. The trade has itself been able to effect improvements to a certain extent. The cure of the North-West hides and of "Cuttack" hides is generally admitted to have been improved in consequence of representations by the Calcutta firm; and it can be very plainly seen at Darbanga at the present day that Messrs. Schröder Smidt's agency in Behar is causing a number of hides to be better cured.

The following figures, supplied to me as examples by the Calcutta firms, give an idea of the difference in prices paid for good and bad cure:—

(1) An ordinary badly cured "Ranchi" hide, average weight 6 lbs., will fetch Rs. 15 per 20 lbs, or Rs 90 per 20 pieces. The same hide, if fleshed more cleanly and well cured, would have an average weight of 5 lbs. and fetch Rs. 17 per 20 lbs., or Rs 85 per 20 pieces.

(2) An ordinary badly cured "Darbhanga," average weight 7 5 lbs., will fetch Rs. 13 per 20 lbs., or Rs. 97-8 per 20 pieces. The same hide, properly cured, would weigh 7·0 lbs. and fetch Rs. 15 per 20 lbs, or Rs. 105 per 20 pieces.

The first example shows that the chamar would lose by flaying cleanly, whilst the second shows that he would gain a little. And all the numerous examples given me were much the same; sometimes the calculation seemed to show that the chamar would gain a little by better cure; sometimes to show that his present methods paid him a little better. I understand that this state of affairs is due largely to the present great demand for hides and to the competition among the Calcutta firms.

The present inferior cure of hides cannot be considered as generally due to ignorance on the part of the chamars and butchers.

The 'scoring' of hides prevalent in the slaughter-houses around Calcutta is due to carelessness and indifference or ignorance. But the general prevalence of fleshy hides is due to a desire on the part of the small hide merchants and the butchers and chamars to increase the weight of the hides. This they will admit quite freely and will explain the point by means of numerical examples, e.g, a butcher at Jale in the Darbhanga district explained that if he left a certain amount of flesh on a hide it would weigh 8 lbs, for which he would get 10 annas per lb., or Rs. 5 for the hide, whilst if he took off all the flesh it might only weigh 6 lbs. For this better cure he would get 12 annas per lb., yet for the whole hide he would only realise Rs. 4-8. The same butcher said that he knew perfectly well how to cure properly.

For the same reason, viz., to increase the weight, dry salted hides are often plastered with an excess of earth salt.

Proposals for improving the present situation.

It appears self-evident that the tanner would be willing to give a better price for better cured hides than for badly cured hides, and the present state of affairs in which the Calcutta merchant is duly able to give a very slightly better price for better cure must be regarded as 'artificial' and not necessarily permanent. The task to be faced is two-fold, viz:—

(I) To remedy the present artificial state of the Calcutta hide trade, so that better cured hides shall fetch an appreciably better price than badly cured hides in this market.

(II) To teach the butchers and chamars to cure in the best manner, and to show that it pays to cure in this manner.

My proposals for the solution of the first of these problems are as follows:—

(Ia) To address the Calcutta hide merchants through the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and strongly urge the formation of an Association of Hide Buyers.

Such an Association could issue a notice that after a certain date hides, which were not properly fleshed, would not be bought by any firm in the Association. A European Inspector could be appointed by the Association who would pass or condemn hides intended for sale in Calcutta.

(Ib) To address the principal Associations of Tanners in Europe and America, pointing out clearly the present artificial state of the Calcutta hide trade, and urging them to take such steps as will ensure a normal condition of this trade.

They should insist that their requirements in the matter of 'cure' shall be more carefully attended to by the collecting and distributing trade. If the tanners bought by means of their own agencies, or to a certain extent amalgamated with the hide merchants, the interests of the collecting and distributing trade would be one with the interests of the tanners, and the object would be at once effected.

And for the solution of second problem :—

(IIa) To start a demonstration flaying and curing department in connection with the Tangra Slaughter-house, Calcutta.

For this purpose we should need to acquire a piece of land near the Tangra Slaughter-house, and erect on it a few sheds This would be our curing yard and hide godown. We should need a European Superintendent, with a knowledge of cattle and a working knowledge of vernacular, to be in charge of the department. Under him would be the native flayers and curers. Messrs. Schröder, Smidt & Co. are willing to supply us with a few men having a sound knowledge of flaying and curing. It should be necessary to try different methods for the disposal of the hides—(1) to sell the hides in the green state, fetching a better price than the ordinary Calcutta slaughter-house hide would demonstrate to the butchers the advantage of the flaying without scoring; (2) some hides should be cured in the most approved manner with Madras sea-salt and offered for sale both in Calcutta and on the home market. The first sales in Europe would be experimental, and would not be expected to be very profitable until some definite arrangement for disposal had been arrived at. Professor Procter, Dr. J. Gordon Parker and Mr. A. Seymour Jones would no doubt help us in placing our 'cure' on the home market.

I have gone as carefully as possible into the details of cost of up-keep of such a department, expenditure and receipts, and I am of opinion that after the Superintendent has gained his experience of the business, the department should be a paying concern.

(IIb) To start a collecting agency over a fairly small area in some district; and when the agency is properly started, give instrutions to the chamars within the area to 'cure' more carefully, telling them at the same time the higher price the agency will pay for the better cure.

In this way the chamars within the selected area will be taught in a really practical manner to cure better.

When the agency has proved a success in this area it should be made over to a private individual or firm, and another agency started in another district

For a start I propose an agency over the Madhubani Zamindari in the north of the Darbhanga District.—This is an area in which the hides are cured very badly and up to the present has not been worked by the Calcutta firm. Similar suitable areas would be found afterwards in Chota Nagpur and Sambalpur.

Details of the proposed agency on the Madhubani Zamindari.—Mr. Hines, the manager of the estate, has estimated that we would collect about 10,000 hides per annum on the Madhubani Zamindari. We should require a European agent in charge of the collecting agency. He would need to be well acquainted with mufassal life and accustomed to dealing with natives of the lower classes. Under him would be 4 or 5 Muhammadan buyers, each located at a small godown. These small godowns would be distributed over the estate. These Muhammadans would buy hides, their operations being controlled by the agent. The hides would from time to time be transferred to a head godown, sorted, made into bundles and sent to Calcutta for sale.

I have gone as carefully as possible into the details of cost of up-keep of such an agency, expenditure and receipts, and I am of opinion that after the agent has gained his experience, the agency as suggested would pay its way.

Discussion of the proposal made.

(Ia) At my interviews with the various Calcutta firms, it was generally admitted that an Association of Calcutta hide-buyers would meet the situation. Further, each firm expressed its willingness to join the Association, but doubted very much if the other firms would join.

(Ib) I have not been able to find a list of the chief Tanners' Associations of Europe and America. Probably such an address would go through the Department of Commerce and Industry of Government of India and the Revenue and Statistics Department of the India Office, and these departments would be able to make a list of the Tanners' Associations it would be desirable to address. I hear that a German and Austrian Association of Tanners has recently been formed for the express purpose of representing the dissatisfaction of the German and Austrian tanners at the character and assortment of hides imported into Hamburg, especially Calcutta hides. This would be a very suitable Association to address. Probably also a copy of the address should be furnished to the various Commercial departments of Governments (such as the Imperial Royal Austrian Commercial Museum, Vienna), to the various Leather Trade Journals, and to the various Leather Trade Schools.

I seems to me that there is sufficient evidence to show that the trade is at present in an artificial and unsatisfactory condition, and that in the interests of Indian trade, Government would be justified in taking steps to alter this condition. I should not propose that the present collecting and distributing agency should be done away with, but that collecting agents and tanners should amalgamate to such an extent that their interests would be in a measure common.

(IIa) and (IIb). I think it is sufficiently obvious that if Government is to do any thing in the way of instructing the 'butchers' and chamars, it must be prepared to buy and sell and handle a certain number of hides. No butcher or chamar would allow a Government instructor to interfere in the curing of hides which were the butcher's or chamar's own property. Nor would butchers or chamars attend any school, unless they were paid a full wage to do so. By the flaying department suggested in proposal (IIa) all the butchers who use the Tangra Slaughter-house, i.e., all the Calcutta butchers, would see the way in which we were flaying and could be trusted to make sufficient enquiries to decide if it paid us to flay in this way. By curing with Madras sea-salt in the most approved manner and sending this cure to the home-market we should expect to show to the home tanners how much the quality of Indian hides can be improved by cure and to create a demand for this kind of cure. By the agency as proposed in (IIb) we should be able to supply the only argument which could possibly be of any avail in persuading the chamar to cure differently, i.e., we should ourselves be able to offer to buy his hides at a better price if he would cure better. We should be able to pay him a better price, because by means of our agency we should be earning the profits of the merchant who collects and brings hides down to Calcutta. We could afford to make a smaller profit and offer a better price to the chamars until the condition of the Calcutta market had improved and better cure naturally fetched a higher price than poor cures in that market.

Enquiry as to the desirability of developing the Tanning Industry in the Province of Bengal, and as to the possibility of Government assisting in the development by means of education or instruction.

THE tanning industry of the various Indian provinces was the subject of the Industrial Monographs for the year 1904.

The Monograph for the Province of Bengal was written by Mr. Rowland N. L. Chandra, Deputy Magistrate. In this monograph the present state of the industry in the Province is described in considerable detail, and it will only be necessary here to give a very brief résume.

We may say that tanning is carried on chiefly as a home-industry on a very small scale. The tanners who work in this way are uneducated men, and the tanning as carried out by them is a very rough process, and the leather produced is a very inferior article. This country leather is made up into shoes, harness, &c., to meet local requirements. The Census tables (1901) show that there are about 5,000 tanners and curriers in the Province, exclusive of the workers in the Calcutta tanneries (5,279 actual workers in the Divisions which form the present restricted Bengal). These tanners are distributed all over the Province, but the concentration is greatest in the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions It is very difficult to form any correct estimate of the amount of country leather which is tanned by these men and used by the local shoe-makers and saddlers Mr. Chatterton in his Monograph on tanning and working in leather in the Madras Presidency (page 18) attempts an estimate of the amount of leather used by the country leather-workers in that Province. He takes the number of leather-workers from the Census tables, and assumes that each worker will on the average earn at least three annas daily and work up leather of twice that value. If we make a similar estimate for Bengal, since the number of actual workers, shoe, boot and sandal makers, is returned in the Census tables (1901), for the Divisions which form the present restricted Bengal, as 56,933, we obtain—

Total value of leather used by country shoe-makers, &c., annually	77·92 lakhs rupees.
Total value of leather goods produced by country shoe-makers, etc., annually	116·89	„ „

The value of this rough and inferior leather made by the country tanners is not much greater than the sum which the hides from which it is made would have fetched had they been exported from the country. If we reckon the leather as worth 10 per cent. more than the hides, we shall not underestimate the value of the leather. This gives us—

Value of hides used annually by country tanners for production of country leather	70 lakhs rupees	(approximate).

We have already seen (Report on enquiry as to the possibility or desirability of improving the cure of hides and skins exported from Bengal) the number and value of the hides exported from the Province, and for the period 1901—06, we may say roughly as the average—

Value of hides exported annually from the Province ... 150 lakhs rupees.

Except in Calcutta and neighbourhood, tanning is entirely conducted as a home industry. In Calcutta, however, there are a few small tanneries where leather is manufactured in a systematic and methodical manner, and is consequently much superior to the rough leather tanned by the country tanner in his own home. There are not, however, more than five or six tanneries in Calcutta of any size, and the largest of these does not produce more than 2 lakhs rupees' worth of leather annually. The small dimensions of the industry may be judged from the Census figures :—

	Total workers and dependants (Bengal).
Tanneries and leather factories—owners, managers and superior staff	249
Ditto operatives and other subordinates ...	1,550

A drive round the Calcutta tanneries will also convince one of the insignificance of the industry. The principal tanneries, and the only ones worthy of consideration, are Messrs. J. Teil & Co., Messrs. Monteith & Co., the Calcutta Tannery Co., the Bengal Tannery Co., Sircar's Tannery and Chowson Chinaman's Tannery.

As an outside estimate we have—

Value of leather produced annually in Calcutta tanneries ... 5 lakhs rupees.

This leather is used by the Calcutta carriage-builders for carriage hoods and by Calcutta boot and shoe-makers for boots and shoes used by Indian gentlemen and to some extent by Europeans.

There is no leather manufactured in Bengal for export (Messrs. J. Teil & Co. export a very small quantity).

There is a certain amount of leather imported, and also a certain amount of leather goods (superior quality goods for Europeans and Indian gentlemen). The value of the import is not, however, large; probably not more than Rs. 8 lakhs per annum.

The statistical tables available, viz., "Roberts on Trade carried by rail and river in Bengal, 1901-02, 1902-03, 1903-04, and 1904-05 unfortunately do not enable us to form a very accurate estimate of the imports of leather goods, because 'boots and shoes' are not returned as 'wrought leather,' but are included under the heading of 'apparel.' The figures available are:—

e may get a very rough idea of the value of the boots and shoes imported into from the figures for the value of boots and shoes imported into India vid Bengal —

These goods were imported for Bengal, and in part for other provinces fed by Bengal seaports, and perhaps we may estimate roughly that one-half were taken by Bengal.

After giving this brief sketch of the present industry, we may now consider in what way or ways the industry may develop. For this purpose it is instructive to look at other Indian provinces in which the industry is already more developed than in Bengal.

1. In Madras not only are hides tanned for country use, but also practically all hides exported are partially tanned. (This used also to be the case with skins, but of recent years, owing to the development of chrome-tanning in America and Europe, the tanning of skins for export has fallen off to a very large extent.) But although many more hides are exported from Calcutta than from all the other Indian ports combined, yet none of these hides are tanned before export. An examination of the trade figures leaves little doubt that it pays to tan hides before export.

We may take it roughly that 1 cwt. of raw hide will produce 1 cwt. of tanned leather, for although the hide loses weight by the preliminary operations, which remove dirt, salt, flesh and hair, on the other hand it gains weight during the operation of tanning proper. We see, then, that 1 cwt. of tanned Madras hide has always fetched one-third as much again as 1 cwt. of raw Indian hide, which is a very fair increase of price to pay for tanning.

At first sight, then, it looks as though it would be desirable that the hides which are exported from Calcutta should be previously partially tanned as in Madras. The question arises :—"Why should there be this difference between Madras and Calcutta? Is it because more suitable tanning materials are available in Madras or because tanning materials are cheaper there?" It does not appear to be due to want of suitable tanning materials in Bengal. Here "babul" (Acacia arabica) and myrobolams are available. These materials are used also in Madras and in Cawnpore and yield leather of good quality. In Madras certainly another material is used largely, viz., "avaram" bark (Cassia auriculata) which is not available in Bengal, but this bark does not appear to give such a good leather as "babul," the leather turning red on exposure to light. Nor does it appear that the cost of tanning materials is less in Madras than in Calcutta. In Calcutta, I am told, the cost of "babul" bark is now Re. 1-4 per maund (or Rs. 35 per ton), whilst previously it was only annas 8 per maund. This bark contains on an average 16 per cent. of tannin. According to Mr. Chatterton (op cit. page 24), the average price of "avaram" bark in Madras is Rs. 67-8 per ton, and it contains on an average 12 per cent. tannin, so that "avaram" in Madras instead of being cheaper than "babul" in Calcutta is very considerably dearer. There is one point on which it is difficult to get definite information. It is certain that "babul" bark in the quantity at present required in Calcutta is available at Re. 1-4 per maund, but would a very much larger quantity be equally available? I have noticed whilst travelling in Bengal that "babul" grows freely over large areas, e.g., travelling from Calcutta to Jessore by railway I estimated that on either side of the line as far as could be seen "babul" trees grew on an average 100 yards apart. Again, in the Darbhanga district the "babul" grows freely, so that I should say there would be plenty of "babul" available in Bengal to meet a very much larger consumption than the present one.

So far as availability and cost of tanning materials go, therefore, Calcutta appears as suitable as Madras for the tanning of hides for export, nor have I been able to find any adequate reason for the difference between Calcutta and Madras in this matter.

But although the trade figures show that it pays to tan hides for export in Madras, and there is no reason to suppose that it would not be equally profitable in Calcutta, yet this tanning of hides for export is not exactly an ideal industry to develop. As I have already mentioned, of late years this tanning industry in Madras has received a severe set-back from the development of the chrome-tanning in America and Europe. For this process skins are required in an untanned condition; up to the present chrome-tanning has been especially applied to skins for the manufacture of glace-kid boot "uppers" and some difficulty has been found in making satisfactory heavier leather from hides, e.g., for boot soles and for belting, by the chrome process. But it is quite possible that in the near future these difficulties may be overcome, and then the demand for the tanned Madras hides may fall just as severely as has the demand for tanned Madras skins.

Again, the buying and selling in connection with the tanning in Madras are very speculative. The prices both for raw hides and for tanned hides fluctuate largely, and the prices for the tanned hides do not necessarily follow the prices for raw hides, so that either a tanner must have a very large capital to enable him to hold his tanned stock for a favourable market or he will be unable to keep his tannery open during a period of adverse prices. During my visit to Madras in July (1907) I found many tanneries closed and many working at very low pressure. This of course means irregular employment for the workmen, and undoubtedly it would be much preferable to develop an industry which will give steady employment to the operatives rather than such a one.

11. In Cawnpore there are several large tanneries conducted on European lines. The largest tannery is the "Government Harness and Saddlery Factory," which manufactures saddlery, harness and accoutrements for the Indian Army. The other large tanneries are

"The Government Boot and Army Equipment Factory" and the "North-West Tannery Co." The Government Boot and Army Equipment Factory is not a Government concern, but has a contract for the supply of boots to the Army. This contract, I was told, forms about one quarter of their work, and besides this they manufacture all kinds of leather goods for Native Armies and States and better quality boots, etc., for Europeans. The North-West Tannery Company manufacture largely cheaper boots and shoes for natives and also a large number of bags, portmanteaus, dressing cases, etc. Another large tannery, the Wense Tannery, has now been closed down, as it did not pay. The Government Boot and Army Equipment Factory employs about 2,000 hands and the North-West Tannery about 1,000. The quantity of leather tanned per annum is roughly as follows:—

	lbs.
Government Harness and Saddlery Factory	1,500,000
Government Boot and Army Equipment Factory ...	750,000
North-West Tannery	500,000
Other factories	250,000
Total ...	3,000,000
Estimated value (rupees) ...	2,000,000

The North-West Tannery Company estimate the value of their finished goods at Rs. 10 lakhs per annum, and on the same basis we have—

	Value of goods produced per annum. Lakhs rupees.
Government Harness and Saddlery Factory	30
„ Boot and Army Equipment	15
North-West Tannery	10
Other factories	5
Total ...	60

	Lakhs rupees.
Value of goods taken by Army	33·75
Ditto ditto private consumers	26·25

These figures are sufficient to show that the tanning and leather manufacturing in Cawnpore forms a very fine industry employing 6,000—7,000 men.

The question at once arises:—"Is there any reason why the tanning and leather working industry should not develop to an equal extent in Calcutta or elsewhere in Bengal?" and along with it the further question, "How is it that this industry has developed to such fine proportions in Cawnpore and scarcely at all in Bengal?" It does not appear that tanning materials are any cheaper in Cawnpore than in Calcutta: labour is a little cheaper, but Cawnpore is not without its labour difficulties. The Government Factory, it will be noticed, produces about as much leather as the other factories together, and the Army takes more than one-half of all the leather goods manufactured in Cawnpore. The industry is, therefore, largely dependent on the Army at the present time, and in my opinion the tanning and leather-working industry has developed to such proportions in Cawnpore simply as a consequence of the Government starting their harness and saddlery factory in this place. As a matter of history, the Government Factory was started here just after the Mutiny, viz., in 1859, and the next largest factory, viz., Messrs. Cooper Allen's (the Government Boot and Army Equipment Factory) was started with a Government subsidy. Further, I understand that the only other large tannery in India which produces finished leather is Adamjee Peerbhoy's in Bombay, and this tannery owes its growth to Government encouragement and is largely dependent on Government contracts. (The Perambore Harness and Saddlery Factory, Madras, does not tan leather, but is entirely supplied by Messrs. Adamjee Pearbhoy's.) In short, the development of the tanning industry on factory lines in India has been due very largely to Army requirements and Government encouragement, and, in my opinion, if part of the Government tanning and leather work could be transferred to Calcutta, this Government factory would in all probability form a nucleus around which the tanning and leather-working industry would develop to proportions quite equal to those of the Cawnpore industry. Unfortunately there appears to be little prospect of Government starting such a factory in Calcutta. The only Government tanning and leather working factories are the Government Harness and Saddlery Factory at Cawnpore and the Perambore Harness and Saddlery Factory, and quite recently (July 1907) the Director-General of Ordnance in India has announced his wish to concentrate each branch of work as much as possible and, so far as leather work is concerned, to close Perambore and concentrate all the work at Cawnpore. I understand that as this concentration will be opposed to many interests, it is strongly objected to on behalf of these interests, and it is quite possible that the leather work may not be further concentrated than at present; but that there will be a further decentralization against the expressed wishes of the Director-General of Ordnance must be considered as very unlikely.

We have already noticed that more than half of the products of the Cawnpore factories go to meet Army requirements. Our estimate of the value of goods taken by private consumers was 26·25 lakhs. These goods are sold largely in other Provinces than the United Provinces. I made enquiries in Cawnpore as to whether there was any reason to suppose that there would be a limit to the demand for goods of the quality turned out by such factories. I pointed out that at the present time the total imports of leather and leather goods (including boots and shoes) into India were, say, worth Rs. 50 lakhs per annum and suggested that after the industry had grown to produce another Rs. 50 lakhs worth of goods that there would be little further room for development. This, however, is not an admissible view of the situation. We have already seen that, in Bengal alone, at least 117 lakhs rupees worth of rough country-made leather goods are consumed annually. Now the taste for boots and shoes of European styles, such as are produced at the Cawnpore factories, is growing rapidly, and men who previously wore country-made country-style shoes are now taking to the use of European-style goods. So that the correct view of the matter seems to be that the demand for factory-made leather goods may be developed in India to an almost unlimited extent.

From our comparison of the tanning industry of Bengal with that of Madras and of Cawnpore, the conclusion at which we have arrived is that it would be quite a good thing if large tanneries and leather-working factories, similar to the Cawnpore factories, could be started in Calcutta or elsewhere in the Province.

There is at present quite sufficient demand for the class of goods which would be manufactured to justify the starting of several large factories, and the demand can undoubtedly be developed to an almost unlimited extent. There are no technical objections to the starting of tanning in Calcutta. The same tanning materials are available here as in Cawnpore (babul bark and myrobolams are used in Cawnpore). These are available at the same rates in Calcutta. In addition, mangrove bark is available in quantity in the Sundarbans. (Owing to a large demand nowadays for tanning materials of all kinds, strenuous efforts are being made by scientists to prepare tanning liquors from mangrove which will give a high-class leather, and probably in the near future this material will be available even for high-class work.) Labour may be a little dearer, but very good wages have to be paid now in Cawnpore. A good supply of water is available from the Hooghly above Calcutta, say at Serampore, Titaghar or Hooghly, and the water is of good quality. And the development of factories of this kind is good for the working classes, especially if the factories are taken some little distance from the city, so that the workers are housed in sanitary dwellings by the factory management. Steady employment and good wages are ensured for a large number of workers.

This is the development of the tanning industry which can be thoroughly recommended. The objection to the Madras industry of partial tanning for export has already been noted. Again, the idea of improving tanning as a home-industry for the villages cannot be entertained, as the process of tanning can never be satisfactorily carried out on a very small scale. Success in tanning depends essentially on securing uniformity of conditions, uniformity in the strength of the liquors, etc., and a worker on a very small scale cannot afford the system of control necessary for this.

We have already noted that it is very unlikely that Government can directly start this factory tanning and leather-working industry in Bengal, and consequently the only thing that remains is to try to attract private capital for the purpose.

Government could probably help, to some extent, in its initial stages, any really sound concern which might be started, by giving it a fair chance to tender for the supply of leather goods required by Government, if not for the Army, perhaps for the Police or for the various other departments of the Local Government, requiring a certain amount of leather goods.

We now come to the problem which more directly concerns us as to whether this development could be helped by means of education or instruction.

Here, again, we can profitably examine what is being done elsewhere in India.

1. In Cawnpore nothing is being done by means of education or instruction for the leather trade. The management of the tanneries factories is in European hands, and the superintending staff have either received their training in Europe or picked it up in the factory. These factories do not feel the need of any more theoretical education for their superintending staff, nor do they ask for any further education for their workers, except a little more general education, which they ask should be any thing rather than literary.

2. In Madras Mr. Chatterton, the Director of Technical and Industrial Enquiries in the Presidency, has established a small tanning and leather-working factory on purely business lines in which all the tanning is done by the chrome process. Mr. Chatterton is a firm believer in the superiority of chrome-leather over vegetable-tanned leather for many purposes; especially he believes chrome-leather to be very suitable for the manufacture of water-well buckets. A very large number of leather water-buckets are used in the Madras Presidency, and his object in starting this chrome-tannery has been to introduce chrome-leather for the manufacture of water-buckets. Incidentally he is willing to allow anyone who is desirous of learning chrome-tanning to work in the tannery and see all the process.

In Bengal the leather water-bucket is not used, so that the motif which started the chrome-tannery in Madras is absent in Bengal: nevertheless it is quite an open question whether chrome-leather is not as good or better than vegetable-tanned leather for boots and shoes in this country. The process of chrome-tanning has several great advantages over vegetable-tanning, the chief of which is that it is quick, and in consequence a much smaller capital is required than in the vegetable process for a given outturn. Such an industry which can be worked satisfactorily with a small capital is undoubtedly the kind of industry which is most suited for those members of the Indian community in Bengal who are anxious for Swadeshi industrial development. It appears that at present the wealthy members of the Indian community are not prepared to put their money into any large Swadeshi industrial concern, and the only course which remains for the educated classes who are really anxious to take up industrial careers but yet have only small funds at their disposal, is to take up industries which can be successfully run with a moderate amount of capital. Now it is these men who have at any rate effected this much, that at the present day an interest in industrial development has been aroused in the country, and the Government should, I think, in considering the question of technical education, take especially into consideration the requirements of this class, and, as I have said, chrome-tanning is an industry which offers special advantages for such men, and the Government should bring this industry prominently to their notice and offer such as may wish it the chance of learning the details of the processes involved.

Several well-educated Indian students have availed themselves of the opportunity to learn the chrome-tanning process in Madras, and one or two of them have subsequently tried to start small chrome tanneries. But up to the present no appreciable chrome-tanning industry has sprung up.

Owing to the existence of the large Government Harness and Saddlery Factory at Cawnpore and Mr Chatterton's Chrome Tannery at Madras, the Government of Bengal can already offer a very complete education in tanning and leather-working to any generally-educated student who wishes to learn this industry. The Superintendent of the Government Harness and Saddlery Factory at Cawnpore is perfectly willing to take such men and put them through a five years' course of training in the factory, in which time they would learn every process in the factory. The men would, of course, be required to work their way through the factory. And in Madras the chrome-tanning is, so to speak, on view for any one who wishes to learn all about it.

We must consider the question:—"How many students would avail themselves of the instruction if a tanning and leather-working school were started in Bengal?" There is at present no employment available in the Province for men trained in such a school, and, as I have already said, the Cawnpore factories even do not feel the need of such training for their superintending staff. The only students who would avail themselves of such instruction would be those with no definite idea as to what they would do afterwards and those who had the idea of starting a tannery for themselves or of securing the management of some tannery which was proposed to be started. I have consulted "the Association for the Advancement of Scientific and Industrial Education of Indians," Dr. N. Sircar, Secretary of the "Bengal Technical Institute," and Dr. A. L. Sircar, Secretary of the Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science," in order to learn the opinion of the Indian community, and especially of that section interested in industrial development, as to the demand which might be expected for training in the processes of the tanning industry. Dr. N. Sircar has himself been attracted to chrome-tanning, as he considers that this is a process which will pay even on a small scale and that there is a ready demand for the leather, and in connection with the Bengal Technical Institute he has started a small chrome tannery with a capital of about Rs. 7,000, but up to the present no student has wished to learn the process. The general opinion was that the number of students would not be large, partly owing to caste prejudices.

The conclusion arrived at as the result of my enquiries can therefore be stated as follows:—

I.—There is plenty of scope for a large tannery and leather-work factory, after the style of the Cawnpore tanneries, to be started near Calcutta or elsewhere in Bengal, and by such factories the tanning industry would be developed in the most satisfactory manner.

II.—The chrome-tanning industry is particularly suited to the requirements of that section of the Indian community now especially interested in industrial development. This could be taken up in fairly small factories and its development in Bengal could be viewed with satisfaction.

My recommendations for bringing about these developments are:—

I.—That the Government of Bengal should address the Government of India, and point out the advantages to the general trade of the Province which would result from the starting of a branch Army Supply Harness and Saddlery Factory in Bengal, and urge strongly the starting of such a branch factory.

II.—That the views of the Government as to the desirability of establishing tanneries in Bengal should be made known to the public, and especially to those who are likely to find capital for industrial schemes. This could be done by publishing pamphlets and by lectures and authorised and signed leaders or articles in the principal newspapers and trade publications.

The Local Government should also make known to the public its willingness to help, during its initial stages, any concern which might be started on really sound lines by giving it a fair chance to tender for the supply of leather goods required by the various departments of the Local Government.

III.—With regard to educational measures, I cannot recommend the starting of any classes or school in Bengal for teaching tanning, but I recommend that scholarships be given to any students with satisfactory credentials to allow them to proceed to Cawnpore to learn tanning and leather-working at the Government Harness and Saddlery Factory or to Madras to learn chrome-tanning under Mr. Chatterton, and that the willingness of Government to give these scholarships should be announced as publicly as possible, together with a clear statement as to the completness of the training available at Cawnpore and Madras.

The course of training at Cawnpore would last five years. Towards the end of this period the students would probably be earning a living wage. The scholarships awarded should be just sufficient to pay for the students' board and lodging in Cawnpore (say Rs. 50 per mensem) until such time as the Superintendent of the Factory found himself able to give the men a living wage.

The course of a training at Madras need not extend for more than one year if the student had a previous scientific education. Mr. Chatterton could decide the period it would be advisable for any particular student to work under him. In this case also the scholarship awarded should be just sufficient to pay for board and lodging (say Rs. 50 per mensem).

REPORT ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE INCOME-TAX IN BENGAL DURING THE THREE YEARS ENDING THE 31ST MARCH 1908.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 638S.R.—The 20th August 1908.—The following extracts from the Report of the Board of Revenue on the administration of the Income-tax in Bengal during the three years ending 31st March 1908 are published for general information.

C. E. A. W. OLDHAM,
Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

No. 4249B., dated Calcutta, the 11th August 1908.

From—PANDIT RAMA BALLABH MISRA, M.A., Secretary to the Board of Revenue, L. P.,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

I AM directed to submit the following Report on the administration of Income-tax in the Lower Provinces during the triennium ending on the 31st March 1908 * *

Member in Charge:
THE HON'BLE MR. E. W. COLLIN, I.C.S.

(i) Miscellaneous orders and rulings of importance.— * * The Government of India directed that in future all claims for the refund of income-tax paid under Parts I and III may be received and examined if preferred within six years from the date of realization of the tax.

(ii) It was laid down by the Government of India that income-tax should not be levied on the compassionate gratuities granted to the families of deserving Government servants left in indigent circumstances.

(vii) It was ruled by the High Court that an owner of mines (whether worked by himself or lessees) is liable to pay both income-tax and road cess on the same net profit derived, or royalty received, by him from the mines. (Indian Law Reports, April 1, Volume XXXIV, Part IV, pages 257-288).

* * * * * *

Revenue derived from Income-tax during the triennium.—The receipts, charges and net revenue derived from the collection of Income-tax during each of the three years 1905-06, 1906-07, and 1907-08 were as follows:—

YEAR.	Receipts.	Charges.	Percentage of charges.	Net revenue.
	Rs.	Rs.		Rs.
1907-08 ...	51,98,644	1,67,478	3·2	50,31,166
1906-07 ...	48,64,256	1,63,011	3·4	47,01,245
1905-06 ...	46,48,526	1,51,862	3·3	44,96,664

The increase in the net revenue during 1907-08 was 7 per cent., as compared with 1906-07, and 11·9 per cent., as compared with 1905-06. The average net receipts of the triennium show a decrease of Rs. 3,53,624 or 6·9 per cent., as compared with the figures of the preceding triennium. The decrease is partly due to the partition of Bengal and partly to the enactment of Act XI of 1903.

Demand on account of incometax.—The final number of assessees and the final demand for the year 1907-08 showed an increase of 2,017 persons and Rs. 3,49,223, or 4·6 and 7·9 per cent., respectively, as compared with the figures of 1906-07; and an increase of 3,517 persons and of Rs. 5,40,412, or 8·4 and 12·9 per cent., respectively, as compared with the figures of 1905-06.

There was a reduction of the demand of about 5½ lakhs in the Province owing to the partition. The demand in the districts outside Calcutta was Rs. 13,82,342 in 1905-06 against Rs. 19,42,186 in 1904-05. During the succeeding two years, the demand of the districts increased by about 2 lakhs, while the demand in Calcutta has increased by 6½ lakhs since 1904-05. The final demand of the Province at the close of the triennium stood at Rs. 47,45,507 against Rs. 44,62,577 at the close of 1904-05.

The increase is due to more careful inquiry and assessment, to the rapid growth of trade and increased commercial prosperity, especially in the city of Calcutta, to the opening of new coal mines in Burdwan, and to the flourishing state of the coal and mica industries and of the trade in lac in the Chota Nagpur Division.

Number of assessees and the amount of tax collected under Part IV, in the grade of Rs 1,000-1,250 during the triennium.—The Government of India in their letter No. 7678S.R., dated the 8th December 1904 noticed the relatively large number of assessees in the lowest grade of the amended Act, namely, Rs. 1,000—1,250 in 1903-04, the year following the passing of Act XI of 1903. The matter was therefore made the subject of an enquiry by the Board; and in accordance with the directions given by the Government of Bengal in its letter No. 547S.R., dated the 8th November 1905, they prescribed the submission of certain statements by District Officers in order to check the tendency of the assessing staff to bring into the lowest grade assessees who were entitled to exemption under the change of law. The figures furnished by the District Officers on the subject for the last three years are summarized below:—

Year.	Number of assessees under Part IV in the grade of Rs. 1,000—1,250.	Amount of tax collected under Part IV in the grade of Rs. 1,000—1,250.
		Rs.
1907-1908	10,647	2,12,109
1906-1907	10,571	2,11,392
1905-1906	10,602	2,12,279

The number of persons assessed in 1907-08 shows an increase of 76 and 45 persons or ·7 and ·4 per cent., respectively, as compared with the figures of the preceding two years; and the amount of tax collected shows an increase of Rs. 717 or ·3 per cent., as compared with 1906-07, and a decrease of Rs. 170 or ·08 per cent., as compared with 1905-06.

Of the total number of assessees in the lowest class of Part IV (that is, those assessed on the lowest taxable income) in 1907-08, 482 were formerly in higher classes, 1,685 were new assessees and 2,668 were assessees who in previous years had been assessed in lower classes, as against 526, 1,464, and 2,631, respectively, in 1906-07, and 552, 1,455 and 2,809, respectively, in 1905-06. The assessments cancelled on objection or appeal in the cases of new assessees in the lowest class were 247 or 5·7 per cent., against 224 and 293 or 5 and 6·9 per cent., respectively, in the preceding two years.

This subject was dealt with in paragraph 8 of the last triennial report, when the increase in this class of assessees in 1903-04 was explained. Since that year, the assessments in the lowest class have followed the ordinary fluctuations of the year and the figures do not indicate a tendency on the part of the assessing staff to bring under assessment, without adequate investigation, those who were exempted on the raising of the taxable minimum in 1903.

Incidence of the demand on population.—The following statement shows the proportion of persons assessed to the population and the villages in the province and the incidence of the tax during the triennium under report :—

Year.	Proportion of persons assessed to population.		Proportion of persons assessed to villages.		Number of persons in proportion to each rupee of tax assessed.
	Persons.	Population.	Persons.	Villages.
1907-1908 ...	1	1,113	33	100	11
1906-1907 ...	1	1,164	32	100	12
1905-1906 ...	1	1,206	30	100	12

The variations are due to the increase in the number of persons finally assessed and in the final demand, as explained in paragraph 8 of the Report.

Rural and urban incidence of the tax.—The proportion of the tax paid in Calcutta in comparison with that paid in the rest of the province is exhibited below :—

Year.	Amount of tax realized in—
	Calcutta.	Rest of province.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1907-08 ...	30,59,617	15,35,269	45,94,886
1906-07 ..	28,61,229	14,11,458	42,72,687
1905-06 ...	27,11,460	13,70,492	40,81,952

The number of assessees in each year has already been compared in paragraph 8 above. It will be seen that, during the last year under consideration, Calcutta contributed 42·2 per cent. of the persons assessed and 66·6 per cent. of the tax realised. The feature of the triennium is the increase of taxation realised in Calcutta, which amounts to over 6 lakhs of rupees. The proportion of the tax contributed by Calcutta has risen from 55·8 per cent. to 66·6 per cent.

As regards the assessments under Parts II and IV of the Act only, the seven cities—Calcutta, Patna, Gaya, Darbhanga, Monghyr, Bhagalpur, Cuttack—with a population of over 50,000 inhabitants in each contained between them 23·6 of the assessees in the province and contributed 55·07 per cent. of the tax collected.

The incidence of the tax in rural areas during the year 1907-08 varied from Re. 1 to every 166 persons in Sambalpur to Re. 1 to every four persons in Darjeeling.

Incidence of the tax according to incomes.—The incidence of the tax according to the different rates of incomes is shown in the following table:—

Class.	Rate of income.			Percentage of assessees of each class.	Percentage of collections contributed by each class.
	Rs.		Rs.
I ...	1,000	but less than	1,250 ...	33·5	6·1
II ...	1,250	ditto	1,500 ...	12·1	3·3
III ...	1,500	ditto	1,750 ...	8·9	3·0
IV ...	1,750	ditto	2,000 ...	7·6	3·2

The proportion of the number of assessees with incomes of less than Rs. 2,000 a year was 62·1 per cent. and that of the amount paid by them 15·6 per cent. The percentages are lower than in the last triennium, and this is possibly an indication of the increased prosperity of the mercantile community.

* * * * * *

Objections to the assessments.—The percentages of objections to assessments for the whole Province were 12·4 in 1907-08, 12 in 1906-07, and 12·06 in 1905-06.

Exemptions and result of revision.—The figures on the margin compare the number of persons exempted on revision and the amount of tax remitted by District Officers, Commissioners and the Board, during the triennium under report. The percentage of exemptions on the number of persons originally assessed was 1·4 in 1907-08, 1·4 in 1906-07 and 1·6 in 1905-06; that of remissions on the original demand 1·3, 1·7, and 1·6, respectively.

Collections of Income-tax.—The following statement compares the amount of the tax collected under each part of the Act during the last three years:—

Year.	Part I—Salaries, pensions, annuities and gratuities.	Part II—Profits of Companies.	Part III—Interest on securities.	Part IV—Other sources.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1907-08 ...	7,43,267	9,26,193	1,10,407	28,15,019	45,94,886
1906-07 ...	6,97,768	7,86,208	1,02,565	26,86,146	42,72,687
1905-06 ...	6,55,139	,30,878	98,496	25,97,439	40,81,952

The total collections on account of tax under all parts during the year 1907-08 showed an increase of Rs. 3,22,199 or 7·5 per cent. over those of 1906-07 and Rs. 5,12,934 or 12·6 per cent. over those of 1905-06. The increase in the total collections during 1907-08, as compared with those of the preceding year, was obtained from all the main classes of assessees; Salaries (Part I) contributing Rs. 45,499, Companies (Part II) Rs. 1,39,985, Securities (Part III) Rs. 7,842, and other sources (Part IV) Rs. 1,28,873, or 14·1, 43·5, 2·4 and 40 per cent. of the total increase, respectively. Of the total increase in 1907-08 as compared with the figures of 1906-07, Calcutta contributed Rs. 1,98,388 or 61·6 per cent., a result which is chiefly attributed to the greater prosperity of the jute, coal and banking businesses, to the formation of new companies, to increase of establishment on the railways and in mercantile offices and to larger issues of debentures.

The gross collections during the year 1907-08, including arrears of tax, penalties, etc., amounted to Rs. 47,61,152, as compared with Rs. 44,34,001 in 1906-07 and Rs 42,39,121 in 1905-06.

The percentage of tax collected under each part on the total amount of tax collected during the year 1907-08 was as follows :—

Part	I—Salaries	...	...	16·2
„	II—Profits of companies	...	...	20·1
„	III—Interest on securities	...	...	2·4
„	IV—Other sources	...	...	61·3

The percentage of collections on the final demand on account of tax alone during 1907-08 was 96·8, as compared with 97·2 and 97·07 in the two previous years, respectively.

The percentage of collections on the final demand on account of tax, penalties etc., both current and arrear, excluding advance payments and excess collections, was 95·3, as compared with 95·7 in 1906-07 and 95·9 in 1905-06. The districts of Bankura, Midnapore, Hooghly, Howrah, Murshidabad, Gaya, Cuttack and Palamau succeeded in collecting the entire demand on account of tax within the year. The prescribed standard was reached in all the other districts, except Bhagalpur, where the percentage fell from 99·2 in 1906-07 to 89·8 in 1907-08. The short percentage in this district was due to the fact that a large number of objections, which were filed by some higher class assessees about the close of the year, could not be disposed of within the year.

Outstanding balances of Income-tax.—The outstanding balance on account of tax, penalties and costs for the year 1907-08, as compared with the two previous years, is shown below :—

Year.	Balance on account of—
	Tax.	Penalties.	Costs.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1907-08 ...	1,71,926	12,154	3,569	1,87,649
1906-07 ...	1,41,705	10,579	3,485	1,58,769
1905-06 ...	1,39,926	8,809	2,595	1,51,330

The sum of Rs. 1,87,649 against the year 1907-08 includes Rs. 25,672 for the year 1906-07. Calcutta alone returns a balance amounting to Rs. 1,52,283, as compared with Rs. 1,35,832 in 1906-07 and Rs. 1,33,420 in 1905-06. The increase is due to the increase in demand. Of the total balance of Rs. 1,87,649, Rs. 1,11,121 are reported to be under realization, Rs. 45,795 are doubtful and Rs. 30,733 are probably irrecoverable.

Coercive measures.—The following statement compares the demand, collection and balance on account of penalties, fines and costs for the last three years :—

Year.	Demand.		Collection.		Balance.
	Penalties and fines.	Costs.	Penalties and fines.	Costs.	Penalties and fines.	Costs.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.

1906-07 ...	15,170	8,662	7,908	6,042	7,262	2,620
1905-06 ...	14,069	7,565	7,957	5,971	6,112	1,594

Concluding remarks.—The main feature of the period under report is the Partition of Bengal, in consequence of which the final number of assessees and the final demand in the first year of the triennium dropped from 52,493 and Rs. 44,62,577 to 41,955 and Rs. 42,05,095 or by 20·08 and 5·8 per cent., respectively. At the close of the triennium, however, the final number of assessees and the final demand came up to 45,472 persons and Rs. 47,45,507 against 52,493 persons and Rs. 44,62,577, respectively in 1904-05, the year just preceding the Partition. The decrease in the final number of assessees has been made up by 33·4 per cent., but the final demand has exceeded by 6·3 per cent. Another feature is the increase of the tax realised in Calcutta owing to the increase of business in the last three years, and the Collector deserves credit for his successful administration of the Department. Like all other direct taxation the tax continues to be unpopular, although the relief given by the raising of the maximum limit of the taxable income is appreciated. There is, however, no open indication of discontent, and the administration of the Act was carried on smoothly. The thanks of the Board are due to Commissioners and to District Officers generally for their satisfactory management of the Department.

FINANCIAL RESULTS.

The main feature of the period under report is the partition of Bengal, in consequence of which it is not possible to compare the fluctuations of the past three years with the preceding triennial periods. The receipts, which in 1904-05 were Rs. 2,08,65,770, fell to Rs. 1,43,62,962 in 1905-06. During the last year of the triennium the receipts rose to Rs. 1,51,17,649. The statistics for the districts transferred to the Province of Eastern Bengal and Assam have been excluded, while those for the district of Sambalpur, which has been added to Bengal, have been incorporated in the report.

* * * * The revenue collected under both the Stamp and Court-fees Acts during the year 1907-08 amounted to Rs. 1,51,17,649 and exceeded the receipts of any other year during the triennium, being Rs. 4,10,967 more than in 1906-07 and Rs. 7,54,687 more than in 1905-06. The increase of revenue, which amounts to 2·8 per cent. and 5·2 per cent. in the two years, occurred under both judicial and non-judicial stamps. While the receipts under the former head received a set-back in 1906-07, from which, however, they recovered completely in 1907-08, the receipts from the sale of non-judicial stamps increased steadily throughout the triennium. There has been a corresponding steady increase in the total charges during the past three years, although the general result shows an increase in the annual net income. The total charges during 1907-08 amounted to Rs. 3,69,340, giving an increase of 2·3 and 3·5 per cent. over the figures of 1906-07 and 1905-06, respectively. The increased expenditure was due to the larger amount of discount paid to vendors on the increased sales of stamps.

A.—JUDICIAL STAMPS.

The sale-proceeds of Court-fee stamps (excluding stamps for copies) fell from Rs. 96,13,749 in 1905-06 to Rs. 94,66,666 in 1906-07. In the subsequent year (1907-08), however, they exceeded by Rs. 4,06,887, or 4·3 per cent., the receipts of 1906-07. The increase is mainly attributed to larger resort to Civil Courts, to the payment of a larger amount of duty in probate and letters of administration cases in Calcutta and to the gradual development of survey-settlement operations. The enquiries held by revenue officers under section 19-II (3) of the Court-fees Act, VII of 1870, as amended by Act XI of 1899, have led to more careful valuations by applicants for the grant of probates and letters of administration. There was an increase in the receipts from the sale of stamps for copies and a slight decrease in the sale of plain paper.

The total receipts under the former head amounted to Rs. 5,65,756 against Rs. 5,54,846 in 1906-07 and Rs. 5,27,721 in 1905-06. Under the latter head the total receipts amounted to Rs. 1,93,282 and show a decrease of Rs. 499 as compared with the receipts of 1906-07, and an increase of Rs. 8,826 as compared with the receipts of 1905-06. The increase under the head of miscellaneous receipts, as compared with the years 1906-07 and 1905-06, was due to the fact that Court-fee stamps worth Rs. 8,000 were required for a probate in the district of Purnea. There being, however, only one stamp for Rs. 1,000 in stock, the balance of Rs. 7,000 was credited under the head "miscellaneous receipts," and a certificate was given on the back of the stamp accordingly.

B.—NON-JUDICIAL STAMPS.

Non-judicial stamps show an increase of Rs. 3,39,074 or 8·5 per cent when compared with 1906-07. The increase was shared by all classes of stamps.

Impressed Stamps.—The revenue derived from the sale of impressed stamps (the most important item among non-judicial stamps) showed a progressive increase during the past three years. The receipts during 1907-08 were Rs. 24,82,943, which exceeded those of 1906-07 and 1905-06 by Rs. 1,60,601 and Rs. 3,99,845, respectively. The largest increase occurred in Calcutta and is attributed to the growth of trade. In other districts the increase is generally ascribed to the increase in the number of deeds executed owing to the failure of harvests and higher price of food-grains.

Hundis or inland bills-of-exchange.—The revenue derived from the sale of hundi or bill-of-exchange stamps rose steadily during the past three years. The receipts during 1907-08 were Rs. 1,62,419 and show an increase of Rs. 12,860 as compared with those of 1906-07 and of Rs. 27,997 over those of 1905-06. The largest increase occurred in Calcutta and is attributed to the development of the natural resources of the country and the growth of its inland trade.

Impressed labels or special adhesive stamps.—Receipts from the sale of impressed labels which are used only in Calcutta showed a progressive increase during the past three years. The receipts during 1907-08 were Rs. 11,17,810, which exceeded those of 1906-07 and 1905-06 by Rs. 79,269 and Rs. 1,51,158, or by 7·6 per cent. and 15·6 per cent., respectively. The increase is attributed to the growth of trade and the increasing popularity of this class of stamps in Calcutta.

One-anna receipt stamps.—The sale of this stamp was stopped with effect from 1st October 1905. * * * * The revenue derived from the sale of the stamps during the first-half of 1905-06 amounted to Rs. 2,23,529.

Foreign Bill Stamps.—These stamps are sold chiefly in Calcutta for bills-of exchange, cheques and promissory notes drawn or made out of British India and chargeable with a duty of more than one anna. The receipts from this source during the past year amounted to Rs. 90,178, which, compared with the receipts of 1906-07 and 1905-06, show an increase of Rs. 4,268 and Rs. 7,699, respectively.

Share-transfer Stamps.—Sales of these stamps, which are used for the payment of stamp duty on transfers of the shares of public companies and associations, are practically confined to Calcuttta. The revenue during 1907-08 amounted to Rs. 1,87,363, which, compared with Rs. 1,27,528 and Rs. 68,731, the receipts of the years 1906-07 and 1905-06, shows an increase of Rs. 59,835 and Rs. 1,18,632, or 46·9 and 172·6 per cent., respectively.

The practice obtaining in the Calcutta share market of using adhesive stamps on separate instruments of share-transfers in payment of the original duty as well as in payment of excess duty was brought to the attention of the Board in the year 1905, and the Collector of Stamp Revenue, Calcutta, pointed out that the figures for a period of 10 years ending 31st March 1904 appeared to suggest that the revenue derived from the sale of adhesive share-transfer stamps bore no proportion to the increase in the number of Limited Companies and the consequent increase in the number of transactions relating to shares. Section 11 (e) of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, permits the use of adhesive stamps for transfers of shares by endorsement, and it is clear from rules 5, 13, and 15 of the Government of India's Rules, published with Notification No. 3632Exc., dated the 29th June 1906, that additional duty may be paid by affixing adhesive stamps when the original engraved or embossed stamp is insufficient; but the use of adhesive stamps in payment of duty on original deeds of transfer has not the authority of law. There was reason to believe that the stamp duty was being evaded. There was, however, a consensus of opinion that the law cannot be enforced or the present practice abolished without causing great practical inconvenience in the Calcutta Share Market, and the Board, on a careful consideration of all the facts, recommended to Government that section 11 (c) of the Stamp Act should be amended so as to legalise the present practice of using adhesive stamps on separate instruments of share-transfers in payment of original duty. They considered that the risk of loss to the revenue by fraudulent second use of stamps must be faced and that it can only be checked by asking the mercantile community to co-operate in the enforcement of the provisions of section 12 of the Stamp Act and by offering substantial rewards for the detection of fraud. The Government of Bengal supported the recommendation of the Board; and the Government of India in their letter No. 7044Exc., dated the 23rd November 1907, to the address of the Government of Bengal, stated that the desirability of amending section 11 (c) in the manner proposed will be considered when the Stamp Act, 1899, next comes up for revision.

Since the discussion began three years ago there has been a considerable increase in the value of adhesive share-transfer stamps sold from the Calcutta Collectorate. The Collector attributes this increase to speculation in coal shares and to the floating of joint stock companies. Mr. Baboneau also thinks that the discussion of the question of the fraudulent use of adhesive stamps has been useful in the protection of the revenue.

Stamps for Legal Practitioners' licenses.—The amount of revenue realised from the sale of these stamps during 1907-08 was Rs. 97,649, which shows an increase of Rs. 2,112 and Rs. 1,958, respectively, over the receipts of the years 1906-07 and 1905-06. The increase is due to the increase in the number of legal practitioners.

Notarial Stamps.—These are one-rupee foreign bill stamps over-printed with the word "Notarial" under rule 15 (d) of the rules issued with the Notification of the Government of India No. 3632Exc., dated the 29th June 1906. They were sold in 10 out of 33 districts in 1907-08. The sales of the year amounted to Rs. 1,787 in comparison with Rs. 1,574 and Rs. 1,516 during the two previous years.

Forms for cheques or receipts.—Forms for cheques and receipts are impressed with one-anna stamps by the Controller of Printing, Stationery and Stamps in accordance with rule 7 of the rules issued with the Notification of the Government of India No. 3632Exc., dated the 29th June 1906, on receipt of a certificate of payment from a Government treasury. Hitherto the practice had almost exclusively been confined to European firms and Banking Corporations, but the Marwari and other Indian merchants and traders have gradually come to realise the utility of this procedure as a safeg uard against abstraction in the case of hundis, receipts and bazar chits. Cheque forms of different kinds issued by the Accountant-General, Bengal, for the use of Incorporated Local Funds, are also impressed in the office of the Controller of Printing, Stationery and Stamps, with one-anna stamps and issued to all treasuries in Bengal. The receipt of the last year of the triennium from this source amounted to Rs. 1,46,996, which exceeded those of 1906-07 and 1905-06 by Rs. 19,916 and Rs. 21,819, or by 15·7 per cent. and 17·4 per cent., respectively. The largest increase occurred in Calcutta and is attributed to the deterrent measures adopted by the Collector of Stamp Revenue, Calcutta, in the case of unstamped and insufficienly stamped hundis and other documents. The floating of several limited companies during the triennium also contributed to the increase.

Miscellaneous receipts.—The receipts under this head are mainly composed of realisations under section 35 and sections 32, 37, 40 and 41 of Act II of 1899, adjudication fees and duty on debentures. The increase which is exhibited under this head for the past year is entirely due to the realisation of Rs. 1,19,000, representing the duty on the Port Trust Debentures floated in the years 1900, 1903, 1905, 1906 and 1907 in a consolidated form. The failure to pay the stamp duty thereon at the time the loans were raised was brought to the notice of the Board. They did not think it necessary to treat the case as of wilful neglect, and called the attention of the Port Commissioners to the provisions of section 8 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, which require that the stamp duty should be paid immediately on issue of debentures by a local authority.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE SALE OF STAMPS.

* * * * The total number of vendors engaged in the sale of judicial and non-judicial stamps during the year 1907-08 was 2,884, showing a decrease as compared with the previous two years of 94 and 103 persons, respectively. In some districts the decrease is attributed to the cancelment of the licenses of a number of vendors for misconduct. In other districts the decrease is attributed to the removal from the list of persons who were only nominal stamp vendors and to the reduction in the number of stamp vendors so as to allow each a sufficient income from the sale of stamps. The decrease in Calcutta was attributed to the abolition of one-anna receipt stamps, the sale of which constituted a profitable source of income, and the discontinuance of discount on postage stamps, which led to the closure of the stalls of those vendors who dealt chiefly in such stamps.

Under the Central Provinces rules, licenses to sell stamps are issued to Sub-Post-Masters and village Schoolmasters by their official designation only, and the Deputy Commissioner grants them advances without prepayment and without requiring the vendors to furnish security for the advances. These vendors remit cash to the treasury by money-orders for purchase of stamps which are sent to them by insured parcels in return for cash, the Government bearing the cost of remitting the money and of insuring the stamp parcels. On the recommendation of the Commissioner of Orissa the Board agreed to the continuance of the practice in Sambalpur.

The expenditure on discounts allowed to stamp vendors during the past year exceeded that of the preceding year by Rs. 10,604 and that of the year 1905-06 by Rs. 13,905. There was an increase in respect of both judicial and non-judicial stamps and plain paper. The increase was the necessary result of increased sales. The average discount per vendor during the triennium under report was Rs. 67.

Since the discontinuance of the discount on postage stamps many complaints have been received in Calcutta regarding the difficulty of procuring such stamps in quarters where there are no post offices within easy distance. It has been reported that the Collector had frequently to force the existing vendors to keep a sufficient stock of one-anna and half-anna unified stamps for sale to the public, as required by the rules.

In the districts outside Calcutta there were few complaints during the period under report of difficulty or inconvenience in procuring stamps and the sales were on the whole properly conducted by licensed vendors.

The system of taking the thumb impressions of purchasers on the stamps themselves as well as on the vendors' registers, which was introduced in the district of Cuttack during the preceding triennium, was extended to the other districts of the Division during the period under report and is reported to have been attended with satisfactory results. In September 1907 the Commissioner of Orissa reported on the working of the system and recommended its general adoption. The matter is under consideration.

PUNITIVE ACTION OF THE COURTS AND REVENUE OFFICERS.

* * * * The total number of cases dealt with by the Civil Courts during the last year of the triennium was 1,724 in comparison with 1,342 in 1906-07 and 1,431 in 1905-06. There was an advance of Rs. 2,515 in the duty and penalty realised by the Civil Courts in comparison with the realisations of the preceding year, and of Rs. 287 in comparison with those of 1905-06. The increase in the number of cases is probably due to a more careful examination of documents by Civil Courts. There was an increase of 72 in the number of cases decided, but a decrease of Rs. 12,965 in the duty and penalty realised by Revenue officers as compared with the figures of the preceding year, and a decrease of 50 in the number of cases decided but an increase of Rs. 4,609 in the duty and penalty realised in comparison with 1905-06. This is due to variations in the amount of consideration for which transactions were effected by the contracting parties.

* * * * The number of cases instituted was 567, in which 579 persons were brought to trial against 1,086 cases and 1,086 persons in the preceding year, and 667 cases and 650 persons in the year 1905-06. The fines imposed amounted to Rs. 4,429 against Rs. 6,388 in 1906-07 and Rs. 5,701 in 1905-06. The falling off in 1907-08 has been occasioned by the smaller number of cases detected in Calcutta and also to the greater scrutiny and check applied by the office of the Collector of Stamp Revenue, Calcutta, with regard to such cases in accordance with the recent orders of the Board on a representation by the Marwari Association referred to in the paragraph below.

The amount distributed in rewards was Rs. 4,351 against Rs. 5,805 and Rs. 3,173, respectively, in the preceding years. The number of persons convicted was 570 and the average fine imposed was less than Rs. 8. The adequacy of punishments inflicted has not been discussed by Divisional Commissioners, but these figures would appear to point to some leniency in the sentences passed. Outside Calcutta rewards are practically never given.

The increased activity in the prosecution of offences against the Stamp Act resulted in complaints in Calcutta. The Board received in 1906 from the Marwari Association, Calcutta, a representation stating that the provisions of the General Stamp Act relating to unstamped documents and insufficiently stamped documents were harshly worked in Calcutta to the serious inconvenience of the up-country trading community. The Association alleged that existing members of firms were held responsible for offences against the Stamp Law committed many years ago by their predecessors, that collecting servants of firms were held responsible, that notices requiring explanation did not always reach parties and that a proper hearing was not always given by the Collector of Stamp Revenue. They complained of the system of giving rewards to informers in stamp cases as holding out temptation to improper acts, and urged that penalties imposed should vary according to the gravity of offences and that individuals should not be made to suffer for acts of which they were morally innocent.

Having carefully considered all the matters urged by the Association, the Board were of opinion that the Collector should exercise special caution in instituting proceedings in the case of old documents. Whatever be the legal liability, the Board considered it reasonable to refrain from prosecuting members of a firm or from requiring them to compound under section 70 of the Act for offences committed by previous members of a firm with which they had no connection.

WORKING OF SECTION 19H ADDED TO THE COURT-FEES ACT, VII OF 1870, BY ACT XI OF 1899.

* * * * The amount of deficit duty realised fell from Rs. 15,819-11 in 1905-06 to Rs. 8,980-4 in 1906-07, but rose again by Rs. 11,251-12. Of the cases reported during 1907-08, 70·2 per cent. were enquired into; the corresponding percentages in the two preceding years were 78·8 and 84·2. The proportion borne by the deficit duty realised to the amount originally paid was 6·4, 3·02 and 3·4, respectively, during the three years of the triennium.

No case of serious undervaluation was discovered during the triennium under report.

RESOLUTION ON THE ADMINISTRATION REPORT OF THE ORISSA PORTS FOR THE YEAR 1907-08.

No. 2622Marine.

Government of Bengal.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.

Dated Calcutta, the 24th August 1908.

RESOLUTION.

Administration Report of the Orissa Ports for the year 1907-08.

READ—

Letter from the Commissioner of the Orissa Division, No. 5860., dated the 4th July 1908, submitting the report on the Administration of the Orissa Ports for the year 1907-08.

THE receipts of the ports amounted to Rs. 6,522-3-9 during the year, as compared with Rs. 14,934 in 1906-07. The decrease of Rs. 8,411-12-3 in the receipts is due to smaller amounts being realized as port dues during the year, as the number of vessels visiting the ports in 1907-08 was much less than in the previous year. This is accounted for by a poor harvest as a consequence of which there was less rice available for export than is custumary.

2. The expenditure amounted to Rs. 17,732-5-3 against Rs. 13,871 in the previous year. The rise is chiefly due to increases of expenditure under the head "Pension" at Cuttack, and under "Petty construction and repairs" and "Dockyard services and supplies" at Balasore.

The receipts together with the opening balance of Rs. 8,216-5-1 amounted to Rs. 14,738-8-10. There was thus an excess expenditure of Rs. 2,993-12-5 which will have to be met by a contribution from Government.

3. The value of trade during 1907-08 was Rs. 54,45,357 against Rs. 1,04,23,811 in the previous year.

4. One hundred and fifty-seven vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 69,550 tons visited the ports during the year, against 226 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 171,112 tons in the preceding year.

5. The passenger traffic between the Orissa Ports and Calcutta showed some slight increase during the year. The number of passengers, carried between Calcutta and Chandbali and vice-versâ, which form the bulk of the traffic, was 37,659 and 49,060 against 34,495 and 31,391 in the previous year.

6. The Port Officer of Calcutta inspected all the ports and light-houses during the year. They were found to be in a satisfactory condition. The erosion of the Shortt's Island on the sea face continues.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

W. A. INGLIS,

Secretary.

The mean pressure, temperature, etc., are deduced from the traces of the Knudsen's Barograph and from eye observations.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. The rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.

No. 3459Agri.—The 1st September 1908.—The Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to prescribe the following rules for regulating the examination in vernacular languages of officers of the Bengal Agricultural Service.

F. W. DUKE,
Offg. Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Rules for the Examination in Vernacular Languages of Officers of the Bengal Agricultural Service.

1. Every officer of the Bengal Agricultural Service is required to pass an examination in a selected vernacular language within two years of the date of his arrival in India or of his first appointment to the service, whichever is later, but the Local Government may, for special reasons, extend the period for passing in any particular case. Failure to pass within the prescribed period will, in the absence of such special orders as the Local Government may issue to the contrary, entail loss of appointment or stoppage of increments of pay.

2. The examination will be conducted under the direction and control of the Central Examination Committee.

3. The examination will be held twice a year simultaneously with each half-yearly Departmental Examination of Assistant Magistrates and others in April or May and in October or November, on dates to be notified in the Calcutta Gazette in communication with the Central Examination Committee.

4. The Director of Agriculture shall in due time report to the Chief Secretary the names of intending examinees and the subject and the standard each candidate will take up.

5. The examination will be held at the following centres :—

(1) Bankipore for candidates employed in the Patna and Bhagalpur Divisions.
(2) Calcutta for candidates employed in the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions.
(3) Ranchi for candidates employed in the Chota Nagpur Division.
(4) Cuttack for candidates employed in the Orissa Division.

N.B.—The examination in Uriya will be held only at Cuttack under the control of the Local Committee formed at that centre.

6. The compulsory vernacular of a candidate will be either Bengali or Hindustani according as the one or the other is prescribed by Government. In the case of an officer employed in the Orissa Division the compulsory language will be Uriya.

7. No native officer shall be liable to examination in a language which is his own vernacular.

8. There will be two standards of examination—(1) higher standard and (2) lower, standard.

An officer must pass by the lower standard completely before he can take up any paper by the higher standard. In case, however, a candidate is permitted to take up both standards at the same time, he must finish his lower standard papers first before taking up any of the higher standard papers. No extra time will be allowed for taking up both standards at the same time. If he passes in either of the papers, he will be held to qualify for the lower standard, but passing marks must be obtained in both sets of papers to qualify for the higher standard.

9. The examination will include the following subjects :—

(1) Transliteration and translation of a printed passage selected from a newspaper suitable official report or the like.
(2) Translation into the vernacular of an English passage similarly selected.
(3) Dictation into the vernacular of a simple passage in English.
(4) Conversation in the vernacular.

(a) The paper set for translation from the vernacular should also be transliterated into the Roman character according to the Hunterian or Wilsonian system.

(b) The paper set for dictation shall be translated into the vernacular and dictated off-hand fluently and intelligibly and the translation written down by a clerk exactly as dictated.

(c) The conversation test should show that the candidate is able to converse freely and at first hand both with the educated classes and with the village cultivators, but should not include technical expressions concerned with subjects other than agriculture.

10. The maximum and the pass marks assigned to each branch of the examination and the time allowed for the papers are subjoined :—

		Maximum marks.	Pass marks.	Time allowed
(1) Transliteration	One paper	20	10	One and-a-half hours.
(2) Translation from vernacular	One paper	20	10	One and-a-half hours.
(3) Ditto from English		20	10	Two hours.
(4) Dictation from English		20	10	Half an hour.
(5) Conversation		80	40	Ten minutes.

11. The papers set at the examination should be of a general character, and should specially deal with agricultural matters and not with specialized revenue or magisterial reports.

12. The question paper will, as far as can be arranged for, be set by an officer of the Agricultural Department in consultation with the Central Examination Committee.

13. The Central Examination Committee after perusing the reports and the examination papers shall report to Government the names of such officers as in their opinion have passed.

14. When an officer, who has not yet passed in his compulsory vernacular, is required by reason of transfer or for any other cause, to pass in a different compulsory language, the limit of time laid down in rule 1 shall run from the date of the order requiring him to pass in a new language.

15. No officer is required to pass in more than one vernacular; but every officer is expected, in order to increase his usefulness, to make himself familiar with the vernacular of the district or districts in which he happens to be serving. No reward will be given for passing in a first compulsory language, but for passing in any other vernacular language, a knowledge of which is, in the opinion of the Local Government, likely to add to his efficiency in the performance of his duties, an officer will receive a reward of Rs. 250 for the lower standard and of Rs 500 for the higher standard, the examination in such cases being the same as that prescribed for members of the Indian Civil Service.

16. These rules will apply to officers now in the service, subject to the conditions of their respective agreements, and to such orders as they may have already received from Government.

2. On or before the date on which these rules come into force, all Mukhtars practising in the subordinate Courts shall file a statement of the names and addresses of the clerks employed by them and shall report any changes as they occur. The certificates required by rule 4 shall be furnished in regard to the persons whose names are reported for registration under this rule.

3. No Mukhtar shall employ more than one clerk at one and the same time, without the express permission of the District Magistrate, or such officer as the District Magistrate shall authorise to grant such permission.

4. A Mukhtar, desiring to employ as a clerk any person not in his employ at the date these rules come into force, shall state in his application that such person is a fit and proper person to be so employed, and that he will be employed bonâ fide, in his own service, for the purposes of his legal business.

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

HINDI CHAIR IN THE PRESIDENCY COLLEGE.

The Hon'ble BABU GAJADHAR PRASAD said :—

In view of the facts—

(1) that under the new Regulations of the Calcutta University, vernacular has been made compulsory up to the B.A. standard;

(2) that a Bengali chair has consequently been established in the Presidency College;

(3) that the Presidency College is the premier institution of the kind in the province;

(4) that there are students with Hindi as their vernacular studying in the College;

(5) that no provision has been made for coaching them in Hindi; and

(6) that the session has already advanced too far, will the Government be pleased to create a Hindi chair, without avoidable delay, in the College ?

The Hon'ble MR. STREATFEILD replied :—

"Instruction in the vernacular is not actually required by the University Regulations. The University test is practically in composition only, and its sole object is to ensure that students keep up such a knowledge of their own vernacular as to be able to express themselves clearly in it. The number of Hindi-speaking students in the Presidency College is exceedingly small. In the circumstances, the creation of a chair in Hindi does not appear at present to be called for."

THE BENGAL LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1908.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM presented the further Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that the Report which was presented in Council on the 9th March, 1907, and the further Report be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that the clauses of the Bill be considered in the form recommended by the Select Committee. He said :—

"It will be expected that I should say a few words of introduction to the measure now before the Council, as the Bill has been pending for many years and has come before this Council on three separate occasions.

"The question of the amendment of this Act first arose at the close of 1895, in connexion with a Resolution issued by the Government of India on the subject of the organization of a separate Veterinary establishment in India, in which that Government expressed the view that if, under the existing law, local bodies could not contribute towards the maintenance of veterinary projects, the law should be amended. A Bill was accordingly drawn up in the beginning of 1896, with the object of enabling District Boards to devote some portion of their funds to the establishment and maintenance of Veterinary Dispensaries and to the improvement of the breed of horses and cattle, and the prevention and cure of horse and cattle diseases. The opportunity was taken of adding provisions to empower District Boards to spend money on the training and employment of medical practitioners and the promotion of free vaccination. The Bill was introduced in Council in the spring of 1896.

"The prevailing scarcity of drinking-water during the summer of the same year drew the attention of Government to the necessity for dealing with the subject of village water-supply in a systematic manner, and this led to the question of village sanitation generally, and to the necessity for raising further funds for the purpose. The Bill, however, was not proceeded with, in consideration, amongst other reasons, of the famine and scarcity of 1896-97, and the possibility, which was then being considered, of the separation of Local from Provincial finance.

"The question of amending the Act was again taken up in 1901, in connexion with a proposal to authorize the levy of tolls on new bridges, until the initial cost and capitalized value of the cost of maintenance or renewal had been recovered. In 1902, a fresh draft Bill was prepared, incorporating provisions with this object, and including the provisions in the Bill introduced in 1896, as well as others. This Bill was again revised and expanded in accordance with certain suggestions made by the Government of India; and a fresh Bill was introduced in this Council by the Hon'ble Mr. Shirres in March, 1904. This Bill was subsequently withdrawn, and another Bill prepared in 1905 containing a number of further provisions, among which the most important were—

(1) to prohibit the diversion of the road-cess to purposes other than those enumerated in section 109 of the Cess Act;

(2) to authorize the imposition of a cess for the purpose of guaranteeing interest on money borrowed for the construction of railways;

(3) to delegate formally to Commissioners of Divisions certain powers which practically, though not nominally, are at present exercised by them;

(4) to improve the position of Union Committees; and

(5) to legalize expenditure from the District Fund on minor works of irrigation.

"After further correspondence with the Government of India, certain modifications were made in the Bill; the provisions in regard to ear-marking the road-cess were omitted, and a new Bill was drawn up and introduced in Council by the Hon'ble Mr. McIntosh in November, 1906. The Bill was referred to a Select Committee, and their Report was presented to this Council on the 9th March, 1907. This Committee recommended that, in view of the very decided opposition to the provisions empowering the Boards to impose a cess to meet payments due in respect of a railway or tramway, these clauses should be omitted. They were accordingly excluded from the Bill.

"After the submission of this Report of the Select Committee, the consideration of the Bill was postponed by His Honour the President, in order that steps might be taken to insert provisions for—

(1) the ear-marking of the road-cess for the objects for which it is collected, and

(2) giving local Union Committees further powers in respect of measures of sanitation, conservancy, drainage and water-supply, and empowering them to supplement the funds available for such improvements by permissive local taxation.

"The Government of India have recently accepted the recommendation of this Government in regard to prohibiting the diversion of the road-cess, with one condition; and they have approved generally of the proposals framed with a view to enlarging the powers and responsibilities of Union Committees. Additional clauses were consequently drafted, as explained by me at the meeting of this Council held on the 11th July last; and the Bill was re-committed to the Select Committee. The further Report of the Select Committee I have presented to the Council to-day.

"It will thus be seen that this Bill, which originally started in a short draft of a few clauses now nearly 13 years ago, has gone on growing like a snow-ball, but with many vicissitudes, till it has attained its present dimensions and form. From a Bill framed merely for the purpose of enabling District Boards to contribute towards veterinary measures, it has developed into a long Bill of sixty-four clauses, dealing with nearly all portions of the Act, and containing many provisions of far-reaching importance. I trust that it has now reached its final stage.

"Omitting the numerous provisions inserted with the object of removing defects and supplying omissions which many years' experience of the working of the Act has brought to light, I may mention the following as some of the more important objects of the Bill :—

(1) to legalize the expenditure of District Board Funds on the establishment and maintenance of Veterinary Dispensaries, the entertainment of Veterinary Assistants and the improvement of the breed of cattle and horses ;

(2) to permit District Boards to contribute towards the training and employment of medical practitioners, and the promoting of free vaccination ;

(3) to authorize the levy of tolls on newly-constructed bridges;

(4) to formally delegate to Commissioners powers which they practically, though not nominally, exercise at present ;

(5) to enable District Boards to spend money on tanks and wells which are not the property or under the control of the Board, and, in the case of famine or scarcity, on minor works of irrigation ;

(6) to permit District Boards to contribute towards the construction and maintenance of hostels attached to private educational institutions of all kinds, to constitute Education Committees and to enable Government to transfer funds to District Boards for this purpose ;

(7) to legalize the expenditure of the District Fund on the construction of residences for the District Engineer, and the payment of advances to members of their establishment for the acquisition or construction of residences ;

(8) to make it obligatory for every District Board to form a Sanitation Committee and appoint a Sanitary Inspector;

(9) to give to Union Committees certain important powers in respect of local sanitation, drainage and water-supply, and

(10) to prevent the diversion of the road-cess to purposes other than those enumerated in the Cess Act.

"A copy of the new Bill was circulated to important Associations, with the encouraging result that several useful suggestions have been received, and but little adverse criticism has been offered. The provisions, in regard to the earmarking of the road-cess, appear to have met with universal commendation. I have adopted a few of the suggestions in some of the amendments which stand in my name."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble BABU GAJADHAR PRASAD said :—"May it please Your Honour—I am satisfied with the Bill which the Select Committee have presented to the Council. I do not desire to object to any provision in the Bill, but I propose the addition of a provision which in my opinion seems necessary.

"There is a provision in section 28 of the Municipal Act relating to the granting of allowance to the Chairman or the Vice-Chairman of the Municipality. I propose the introduction into the Bill of a clause similar to section 28 of the Municipal Act.

"In support of my proposal, I beg leave to say that the work of District Boards will be further multiplied by the operation of the Local Self-Government Amendment Act, which gives additional powers to District Boards and imposes on them corresponding liabilities.

"The nature of the work requires an energetic whole-time Vice-Chairman, and no competent non-official member will be very willing to serve gratuitously. The duties of the Vice-Chairman of the District Board are becoming more and more onerous day by day. The Vice-Chairmen are generally honorary. It is reasonable, therefore, that the District Board should be empowered to grant allowance to the Vice-Chairman. By this I do not mean that every Vice-Chairman should get some allowance; but I certainly mean that if a Vice-Chairman efficiently discharges his duty, and if the District Board thinks fit to grant some allowance to him, the District Board must have the necessary powers. The allowance is a legitimate charge on the District Fund, being one incurred in the performance of the duties imposed by the Act.

"There is also another point which deserves notice. The District Boards are generally more solvent than the Municipalities, and the District Board Vice-Chairman may have to go out on out-door work, and to travel longer distances than a Municipal Vice-Chairman.

"I wish to move—

(1) that after clause 9 (now 11)* of the Bill the following be inserted, namely:—

9A. At the end of section 23 of the said Act, the following shall be inserted, namely:—

'The Vice-Chairman of a District Board may, if the Board thinks fit, receive such allowance as may be fixed by it at a meeting; and

(2) that after clause 26 (1a) [now 27 1)] of the Bill, the following be inserted, namely:—

In the first line of clause fourthly of the said section 53, after the word 'payment,' the words 'of the allowance of the Vice-Chairman of the District Board fixed under section 23 of this Act and' shall be inserted."

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM said:—"I am afraid these amendments cannot be accepted. Hitherto, the Vice-Chairmen of District Boards have generously performed their duties without any pecuniary recompense. To pay them for the performance of these duties would undoubtedly amount to a change of principle, and as such would require the approval of the Government of India. To make such a reference now would mean the further postponement of this Bill; and even were the Government of India to agree to such a change in principle, the Bill could not be passed during the current session. I think it will be the sense of this Council that this very long pending measure should not be further delayed on account of a proposal, the propriety of which is open to considerable doubt."

The motion was put and lost.

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA-DHIRAJ BAHADUR, OF BURDWAN, said:—"Before moving the amendments standing against my name, I beg to make a few observations on the Bill that we are about to pass into law to-day. It is a matter of gratification to all of us, who take a keen interest in the welfare of the villagers of Bengal, to find that important sections and clauses have been inserted in the present Bill to improve the sanitary conditions of rural Bengal.

"It is a great Government, Sir, that gives medical aid to the people, but it is a greater Government that also sees to the health of its subjects; as we all know, to comfort the sick and ailing is a noble thing, but it is a nobler endeavour to try and eradicate sickness.

"The Union Committees, and specially the Sanitation Committee of the District Board, should have picked men on their respective bodies, because otherwise the larger powers that are now being given may, instead of becoming a boon, prove to be a source of oppression and unnecessary annoyance to the villagers and the public at large.

"To those who constantly clamour for more self-government in this country, the amended enactment before us ought to give satisfaction. Here, in this Bill, we have splendid opportunities of showing what capacities we Indians have in managing our own affairs, and I hope, therefore, that those who will be entrusted with the new powers that are being given now, will wield them with ability and usefulness.

"The Indian atmosphere just now seems to be surcharged with outcries for more political powers. No doubt the country is awakening; but this new current of ambition should be watched carefully, so that it might not come as a sudden and rude shock to the awakened and the awakeners. Aspirations for self-government can only be healthy for us, if we Indians realize once for all that such things, though very desirable, cannot be demanded, for they have to be deserved. In conclusion, I heartily congratulate the Government on having recognized the absolute necessity of proper village-sanitation in Bengal.

"I beg now to move that to section 41A, in clause 20 (now 22) of the Bill, the following be added, namely :—

(2) The election of any person to be Chairman of a Union Committee shall be subject to the approval of the District Board.

(3) If a Chairman of a Union Committee be not elected within the period prescribed in this behalf by rule made under clause (c) of section 138 of this Act, the District Board shall appoint a member of the Committee to be Chairman."

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM said:—"I am prepared to accept both of the proposals of the Hon'ble Member contained in his motion. It is very desirable that, if the Union Committee should fail to elect a Chairman, the District Board should have power to appoint one."

There being no opposition, the Hon'ble the President declared the motion carried.

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA-DHIRAJ BAHADUR, OF BURDWAN, by leave of the Council, withdrew the following motion of which he had given notice, namely :—

That in section 99A, in clause 44 (now 47) of the Bill, after the words 'irrigation work,' where they first occur, the words '(other than a canal)' be inserted.

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA-DHIRAJ BAHADUR, OF BURDWAN, also moved that the following be added to clause 48 (now 51) of the Bill, namely:—

(3) After the word 'road,' in clauses (c) and (d) of the said section 109, the words 'or bridge thereon' shall be inserted.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM, having accepted the amendment, the Hon'ble the President declared the motion carrred.

The Hon'ble RAI KISHORI LAL GOSWAMI, BAHADUR, moved that after proviso (1) (a) to section 86A, in clause 41 (now 43) of the Bill, the following be inserted, namely :—

(aa) the expenses incurred by the District Board in paying compensation to the owner of any private ferry for the partial or complete loss of income from such ferry, and in recouping itself for the partial or complete loss of receipts in respect of any public ferry referred to in clause (4) of section 52, when such loss results in either case from the construction of such bridge, or the construction or widening of such road-way or foot-way.

He said :—"It will sometimes so happen that the construction of these bridges will injuriously affect some of the private ferries or some of the public ferries, or even at times lead to their extinction. The law on the point is quite clear, that when private ferries are injuriously affected or become extinct in consequence of the construction of bridges, the owner of the private ferry is, under certain circumstances, entitled to ask compensation from the District Board. In order to obviate all doubt on the point I shall refer to a District Board case reported in Volume 25, Indian Law Reports, Calcutta Series. On page 346 of that volume, the head-note runs thus:—

The District Board of Dinajpore erected a bridge over the river Tulai in consequence of the erection of which ferry, which was within 100 cubits of the bridge and owned by the Maharaja of Dinajpore, who was also the owner of the land taken for construction of the bridge, ceased to exist: Held, that the owner of the ferry was entitled under the Land Acquisition Act to compensation for the loss of the ferry.

"There is another case reported in Volume 34 of the same series, page 485. There the learned Judges observed that:—

In other words, where the ferry landing and the ferry franchise remain precisely as before, though the profits are liable to be depreciated by the new mode of travel legitimately created, no compensation can be claimed; but where by reason of the acquisition itself the exercise of the franchise, or the use of the property pertaining to the franchise, is interfered with, damages can be rightly claimed.

"Now some of these cases clearly go to show that under certain circumstances owners of private ferries will be entitled to compensation if their ferries are affected by the construction of these bridges. But oftener it will happen that District Boards will be deprived of the income derived from private ferries. The income of ferries we all know go to serve useful purposes by helping the District Boards to promote sanitation and primary education in the area over which the District Boards have jurisdiction. Sir, in the new Bill there are several onerous duties imposed upon the District Board, which will necessitate a large expenditure of money. If the District Boards were to lose the income of the private ferries it would be found that there would be less money available for sanitary purposes, and its resources, which would be crippled. Such a crippling of the funds would be undesirable. I think any one that has gone through the various opinions that have been given upon the Bill, in response to Your Honour's invitation asking for an expression of opinion, will find that there is much reluctance on the part of several Associations to the establishment of a toll-bar. They seem to think that it will be a grievous burden on the people and they go further and say it will hamper internal trade. I am not in sympathy with these persons at all; on the contrary, I welcome the introduction of this portion of the measure, for without the levy of a toll it will be absolutely impossible in the present stage of finance of the District Boards to undertake the construction of expensive projects.

"Sir, from those opinions which I have already referred to, Your Honour will be pleased to see that there will be many Members of District Boards who will not cherish the idea and who would naturally be reluctant to vote for the establishment of a toll-bar, for the purpose of constructing a bridge. They will be able to add emphasis to their opposition by pointing out the fact that the Road-Cess Fund will be encroached upon on account of the District Board being liable to pay compensation to owners of private ferries, or there would be a loss of revenue which would retard the promotion of sanitary welfare. The amendment which I propose will really mean the prolongation of the period during which the toll will be collected. One who has any experience of the working of tolls in this country, and I think things are very much the same in other countries, is aware that the opposition and repugnance arises at the very outset; but after they get accustomed to the thing they do not feel the inconvenience due to the paying of tolls, and surely if the period of the levy of tolls is prolonged inconvenience will not be felt by the people. I think, Sir, for these reasons it is inadvisable to cripple the resources of the District Board, which will be the result as I have attempted to point out. I, therefore, submit this amendment for your favourable acceptance."

The Hon'ble BABU KALI PADA GHOSH said:—"It seems to me that the owners of private ferries will be entitled to compensation under the circumstances referred to in the amendment which is proposed. The cases to which reference has been made by the mover of this amendment settles this point, and I think the expenses incurred should be paid by the District Board. This can be provided for in the Act, and I think the proper place for a provision like this will be in section 86(a)."

The Hon'ble BABU DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI said:—"In supporting this amendment, I ask permission to withdraw the amendment in my name which is similar in effect. At the time I was not aware of the fact that my hon'ble friend had sent in this amendment; otherwise it would not have been necessary for me to send in this amendment, though it is larger in scope. In sending in my amendment I had contemplated cases, in which for some reason or other the establishment of a toll-bar would not be possible. But having listened to the Hon'ble Member, I think that the greater portion of my amendment would be covered by his amendment. And I do not think it necessary to press for the acceptance of the remainder of my amendment. I, therefore, beg leave to withdraw my amendment."

The Hon'ble BABU JOGENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE said:—"I am afraid that there is some misapprehension on the part of the mover of this amendment. The last case to which he has referred shows clearly that no owner of a ferry is entitled to compensation on account of the making of improved means of communication which may reduce his profits. The case is not only not in his favour, but clearly against him.

"I can quite sympathize with landlords and owners of ferries who will incur some loss if bridges are made, and if the Government so chooses it may grant them compensation; but this compensation has to be paid by the District Boards. When such an expensive work as a bridge is made it must be made at the cost of the whole district. In such a case, I think it reasonable that private owners of ferries might incur some loss for the good of the public."

The Hon'ble BABU RADHA CHARAN PAL said:—"I support the amendment of my hon'ble friend, Rai Kishori Lal Goswami, Bahadur, and I fail to understand the opposition of my friend on the right. It has been clearly stated by my friend, the mover of the amendment, that it is just and proper if the owner of a ferry is deprived partially or wholly of a loss of income to which he was entitled on account of the construction of a bridge or the widening of a road-way or foot-way he should be compensated. The case which has just been quoted by my friend, the Hon'ble Rai Kishori Lal Goswami, Bahadur, fully supports his contention, and the opposition of my friend on the right and the arguments he has adduced do not in any way convince me that the amendment is not necessary. As far as I understand, he says that the owner of a ferry ought to suffer some loss on account of some improvements by which the District Board benefits. It ought not to be forgotten that the owner of a ferry has obtained this privilege on payment of a certain amount of rent. If then he is deprived of that source of income, or his income is diminished in any way, he is entitled to compensation. I think, therefore, this is a perfectly fair proposal which ought to commend itself to the Hon'ble Members for acceptance."

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM having accepted the amendment, the Hon'ble the President declared the motion carried.

The Hon'ble RAI KISHORI LAL GOSWAMI, BAHADUR, also moved that in proviso (2) to the said section 86A, in clause 41 (now 43) of the Bill, after the letter "a" the letters "aa" be inserted.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM having accepted the amendment, the Hon'ble the President declared the motion carried.

The Hon'ble RAI KISHORI LAL GOSWAMI, BAHADUR, also moved that after clause (a) of section 86L, in clause 41 (now 43) of the Bill, the following be inserted, namely:—

(aa) the amount of the expenses incurred by the District Board in paying compensation to the owner of any private ferry for the partial or complete loss of income from such ferry, and in recouping itself for the partial or complete loss of receipts in respect of any public ferry referred to in clause (4) of section 52, when such loss results in either case from the construction of such bridge, or the construction or widening of such road-way or foot-way.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM having accepted the amendment, the Hon'ble the President declared the motion carried.

The Hon'ble RAI KISHORI LAL GOSWAMI, BAHADUR, also moved that clause 42 (now 44) of the Bill be omitted. He said:—

"I move this amendment not without considerable hesitation. I have not been quite able to realize the object of introducing this provision whether the object is to enable District Boards to make such contributions or to safeguard any grant resolved upon by the District Board, by the sanction of Your Honour, I do not know. I have not been quite able to realize the exact object for which section 88A has been enacted. The reason why this hesitation arises is this, that under the present law there is no provision for a grant for water-supply or grants of contributions for construction or maintenance of water-works within municipal areas. As a matter of fact, several grants for water-supply within municipal areas have been made, and they are appreciatively referred to in the Government Resolution on the working of the District Boards. I think, Sir, that the diversion of money derived from rural areas and from a rural population to purposes which will tend to ameliorate the sanitary condition of the people residing within the town is wrong in principle. Your Honour will also be pleased to remember that there is no provision in the Municipal Act, by which a municipality can reciprocate in a similar generous manner for the benefit of the rural areas. It is notorious that the water-supply in areas within the jurisdiction of the District Board is inefficient; there is also some apathy on the part of District Boards to improve the water-supply and strictures have been passed on them in the Government Resolution on the working of District Boards. In recent times, the tendency to make such grants for the improvement of water-works or the construction of water-works within municipal areas has been very much in evidence, and I think it is becoming a growing tendency. I shall remind Your Honour of what has been said in the Bengal Administration Report of 1906, with regard to water-supply:—

The total expenditure increased by Rs. 29,976, or by about 28 per cent., but the increase occurred wholly in the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions, where the expenditure was almost doubled; in the rest of the Province, there was a decline in expenditure. The District Boards of Champaran, Muzaffarpur, Darbhanga and Palamau incurred no expenditure under this head; while in Howrah, out of the budget provision of Rs. 3,000, only Rs. 678 were spent against Rs. 464 spent in the previous year out of the similar budget provision. In the Presidency Division, the expenditure increased by Rs. 21,839. In Nadia, 21 wells were completed and 12 more taken in hand, while Rs. 1,099 were spent as interest on loans taken under the Land Improvement Act. In Jessore, 23 tanks were excavated at a cost of Rs. 14,014, and 5 wells were made. In Khulna, seven tanks were completed, work to the amount of Rs. 9,628 done on eight others, and 20 tanks were taken up under the grants-in-aid system at a cost of Rs. 7,349. In Gaya, the District Board made a grant of one lakh of rupees to the Gaya Municipality towards the water-works scheme, and in Monghyr the District Board paid during the year a second instalment of Rs. 10,000 out of the promised contribution of Rs. 30,000, towards the Victoria Water-Works in the town of Monghyr. Out of a total allotment of Rs. 1,500 made by the Sambalpur District Council under this head to the two tahsils, only Rs. 450 were brought to account.

"It is well-known, Sir, that whenever any scheme for water-supply is conceived in respect of any Municipal town, there is always a very keen scramble for the collection of money to pay the capital expenditure. We all know that it is only by the imposition of the highest water-tax under the law that the bare cost of maintenance can be met. On these occasions it is usual to approach the Government to make generous grants; and also local munificence is appealed to. The response is not always equal to expectations cherished. When some amount is secured there is always a scramble to get more, and the only possible source they can look to is the District Board. The District Magistrate, naturally, and if I may be permitted to say so, very properly, takes a keen interest whenever any scheme for water-supply within municipal areas is brought forward. He naturally would have an inclination to see that a portion of the District Fund, devoted to that purpose. It is also a notorious fact that most of the influential Members of District Boards, who are residents within municipal areas, are personally interested in having a water-supply in the place where they reside. It is, therefore, not at all difficult to get a resolution passed by a District Board such as it is constituted, to apply, and, without meaning any disrespect,—I say misapply, the money of the District Fund for promoting the sanitary welfare of towns, especially district towns. I think, Sir, Your Honour will set your face against such a diversion of money of the District Boards, whose wants are daily growing, but the growth of whose resources are not keeping pace with the numerous works they are entrusted with.

"With these words, I beg to move that this clause be omitted. I understand that by the omission of this clause it would not be possible for the District Boards to spend any money for a purpose like this. I am not quite sure if the Boards can legally spend any money of their own for the purpose of water-works in towns even if section 88A be omitted. It is only for that reason and apprehending that District Boards will spend money for water-works in towns as they have hitherto done, even if section 88A be omitted, that I have proposed an alternative amendment."

The Hon'ble BABU JOGENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE said:—"I have much pleasure in seconding the amendment so ably moved by my friend, the Hon'ble Rai Kishori Lal Goswami, Bahadur. I understand that amendments to this effect stood in the name of several Members when the first Report of the Select Committee was presented. It is well-known that the resources of many of the important districts in these provinces have been very much crippled by the inclusion of the water-works into the accounts. I do not agree that water works are outside the scope of beneficent works of District Boards, because a very large proportion of the population of the district live there and have to go there. The unhealthiness of a district is a matter of serious importance to the people. But while conceding that the District Board might continue the maintenance of water-works from District accounts, it must not be forgotten that the resources in command of District Boards are so limited that they could ill-afford to make any such contributions. I believe that the Government will in future help in the construction of water-works and their maintenance as generously as Your Honour has done during Your Honour's tenure of office, and I hope that the District Boards will not continue to provide anything out of their scanty resources for the construction and maintenance of water-works."

The Hon'ble BABU RADHA CHARAN PAL said:—"In connexion with this amendment, I regret that I cannot support my hon'ble friend, Rai Kishori Lal Goswami, Bahadur, although in this matter I find that my hon'ble friend on my right has enthusiastically supported it. Sir, I have followed with great interest the arguments adduced by my hon'ble friend, Rai Kishori Lal Goswami and his supporter, my hon'ble friend, Babu Jogendra Chandra Ghose. Both contend that the District Boards are not in a position to contribute to the maintenance of water-works, wells or tanks in the Districts; but the question is this, if they are not in a position to contribute, who asked them to do so? The Bill, as drafted, clearly gives the District Board discretionary power: if they are able to contribute they will do so, with the consent of the majority of the Members of the District Boards; and even then their hands are fettered. It is only with the sanction of he Local Government that they can contribute: so my hon'ble friend will see that it is not compulsory on the part of District Boards to contribute for the maintenance of water-works in the District. It is said that the District Magistrate naturally takes great interest in the Municipality and he is the President of the District Board. It is just and proper that he should. The District Boards are comparatively rich bodies and the Municipalities poor bodies, and therefore it is only right that the District Magistrate who looks to the well being of his own District would try to help the Municipalities. Then, Sir, we are well aware that the Municipalities, generally speaking—not even excepting the Calcutta Municipality—have to strain their utmost to carry out the various requirements of the Act. Even so rich a Municipality, as the Calcutta Municipality, has not sufficient funds to carry into completion the various necessary works for the sanitation of the town, and when the Council is discussing the Budget then I shall perhaps ask for funds for the Calcutta Municipality. While we are thankful to many philanthropic gentlemen for their munificence, I fail to understand why we should not avail ourselves of the resources of District Funds when they are in a position to contribute towards beneficent works which will benefit the whole district.

"Under these circumstances, I do not think that this section ought to be deleted from the Bill, but it should be retained."

The Hon'ble BABU GAJADHAR PRASAD said:—"I think it is my duty to bring to Your Honour's notice that I have served on the Municipality and the District Board of Patna for about 25 years, and I still belong to both these bodies, and my experience, judging from the Patna district, is that District Boards are always solvent and Municipalities are always in want of money. Residents of districts are interested in the sanitation of their head-quarters. Your Honour is aware that zamindars and raiyats have frequently to attend Courts and have to attend to other business at head-quarters. Then, the members of District Boards and members of other associations have often to go to head-quarters. It is, therefore, in their interests to see that the town or head-quarter is in a sanitary condition. Your Honour is aware that epidemics are more prevalent in towns than in villages, and I think therefore that District Boards should always be allowed to contribute towards the sanitation of the towns. There is the safeguard and it is a very proper safeguard, that the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor is necessary for this purpose. The Government will not allow District Boards to contribute when they themselves are in want."

The Hon'ble BABU KALI PADA GHOSH said:—"I wish very much to say that all District Boards are not like the Patna District Board, of which my friend is the President. I unfortunately come from a part of the country where District Boards have always been found to have insufficient funds to meet the cost of works, which legitimately fall within the scope of the Boards. Sir, in this Council we have, during Budget discussions, dealt with sanitation in rural areas, especially as regards water-works which are very much neglected, or rather the District Boards find it impossible to carry out that work in the manner they would like. When we remember this, I cannot certainly go against the amendment moved by my hon'ble friend, Rai Kishori Lal Goswami, Bahadur, and I think that the District Board should be confined to the very necessary purposes for which the fund was created, although I do not go so far as to say that any contributions made by the District Boards to any water-works in municipal areas is a mis-application of that fund. Certainly I say, regard being had to the interest of rural areas, a contribution is unnecessary. A Municipal Board can very well take care of the areas in its charge, and District Boards should primarily hold all its funds for all works which are in the legitimate scope of that Board. My friend, the Hon'ble Babu Radha Charan Pal, has pointed out one fact, that section 88A does not make it compulsory on the District Board to make a contribution and, to safeguard this, section 88A will be allowed to stand in the Bill. District Boards will too frequently be led to the belief that this provision has been specially enacted that District Funds should be applied to the work comtemplated by section 88A. I do not agree, therefore, with my hon'ble friend, Babu Radha Charan Pal, that section 88A should be allowed to stand. So I certainly support the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Rai Kishori Lal Goswami, Bahadur.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM said:—"Government cannot accept this amendment. The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Kishori Lal Goswami has said that he cannot understand why this provision should have been inserted. I can explain this to him. Clause 42 (now 44) was inserted in this Bill in its earlier stages, with the object of legalizing contributions from the District Fund towards the improvement of the water-supply in municipalities situated within the district. The legality of such a contribution formed the subject of discussion in 1893, when a contribution was made for such a purpose by the District Board of Shahabad to the Municipality of Arrah. The Legal Remembrancer at the time gave his opinion that such a contribution was legal; but it seemed to Government that this opinion might at any time be called in question, in view of the declaration in section 1 that the Act shall not extend to any place or town to which the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act have been extended. The object is clearly one to which a portion of the District Fund may very properly be devoted, since a pure water-supply in a municipality is a benefit to the district generally, and an outbreak of infectious disease caused by an impure water-supply within a municipal area may result in the spread of the disease to all parts of the district. It has been provided, as a safeguard, that any such contribution shall be subject to the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor.

"The Hon'ble Member who has moved this amendment has read out certain figures in the cases of Gaya and Monghyr, comparing the amounts contributed towards the water-works with the amounts spent on original works. He has forgotten to point out that one class of expenditure is recurring, and one non-recurring.

"The Hon'ble Babu Jogendra Chandra Ghose has said that he knows that many Boards have been crippled by contributing to the establishment of water-works. He has carefully avoided mentioning the name of any such District Board. I do not know to which Boards he refers. I am not aware of any such case. Both these gentlemen have spoken as if District Boards would be compelled to make such contributions; but as the Hon'ble Babu Radha Charan Pal has pointed out, it is entirely optional with them to do so.

"In fact I am astonished, Sir, that a merely permissive provision of this nature should have given rise to the remarks that have fallen from some of the Members to-day.

"The Hon'ble Babu Kali Pada Ghosh assumes that rural areas will be neglected for urban areas; but I would point out to the Hon'ble Member that we are specially providing elsewhere in this very Bill for the improvement of water-supply in rural areas."

The motion was then put and lost.

The Hon'ble RAI KISHORI LAL GOSWAMI, BAHADUR, also moved that the following proviso be added to section 88A, in clause 42 (now 44) of the Bill:—

Provided that no application for such sanction shall be made unless it is authorized by a resolution which has been passed at a meeting specially convened for the purpose and in favour of which a majority of not less than two-thirds of the members of the District Board have voted.

He said:—"I have already referred to the personal composition of District Boards which is peculiarly favourable to making grants for water-supply within rural areas. It would be very desirable in making this permissive section, as the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has said, to safeguard in such a way that really the permission emanates from those interested vitally in the welfare of the district, and with the sufferance of a considerable majority of the members of the District Board. I have proposed this additional safeguard that there should be a majority of two-thirds to authorize a grant for water-supply, and I think this would be considered as very reasonable. My hon'ble friend, Babu Gajadhar Prasad, has remarked that he has a long-standing connection with both the District Boards and the Municipality. I think my friend, like another individual in a more critical condition, created by the imagination of the poet, finds himself faced by a divided duty when he has got to consider the interests both of the District Board and the Municipality.

It is not often that we hear of a District Board in affluent circumstances. I think we hear the contrary story very often. From the passage I have just read from the Administration Report, it will be quite clear that the Government has been year after year putting spur on the District Boards to spend considerably bigger amounts for water-supply in rural areas, and the Government regrets that more is not spent. Surely, the agency for the judicious use of money for the water-supply has been settled in this Bill by investing Union Committees with power to deal with sanitary conditions in their areas, and I hope there will be a larger demand when the Union Committees' work is properly defined, as it is hoped it will be under the new law. I think, Sir, what I have said will show that the safeguard I have proposed is eminently necessary to prevent an injudicious diversion of money from sanitary purposes within rural areas."

The Hon'ble BABU JOGENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE said :—"I beg to second the amendment just moved by my friend, the Hon'ble Rai Kishori Lal Goswami, Bahadur. You have heard that the new section has been introduced in order to avoid all objections as to the legality of making provision for water-works. It is no good now referring to that matter again because it has been passed. The question now is, should we put some safeguard against the improper use of the District Board Funds for the purpose of the construction and maintenance of water-works? It is said that it is a permissive section. The money can only be spent by the District Boards themselves. I do not agree with my hon'ble friend, Rai Kishori Lal Goswami, Bahadur, that District Boards are not independent bodies and that the District Officers often exercise undue influence over them. On the contrary, I think District Magistrates would stand between them and the people of the district when occasion arises. But the mischief is not there, the mischief is that most of the members of District Boards reside in the district towns, and as we are all human beings we cannot forget our own individual convenience and safety, forgetting the convenience and health of the poor unfortunate population of the district who do not reside there. For the safety of the great agricultural population of this country, who are not represented on the District Boards, this safeguard is absolutely necessary. It is not right to say that because this is a permissive section no amendment is necessary. Everything would have been right if the great mass of the population were represented.

"It is the town population mostly that forms the District Boards. I have said that they are independent and they have shown this on occasions, but they are human beings. As regards the objections of my learned friend, the Hon'ble Babu Radha Charan Pal, who said he wanted money for the Calcutta Municipality, I think it would have been better if he had not mentioned that.

"Your Honour, the Hon'ble Babu Kali Pada Ghosh and myself, who represent the District Boards, are in favour of this amendment. As regards the gentlemen who represent the Municipalities, I place the Hon'ble Babu Gajadhar Prasad in the category of a person who has the interest of the Municipalities more at heart than the interest of the District Boards he represents. He is very anxious, as we all know, to have the water-works at Bankipore; therefore his advice on this occasion cannot be called very disinterested."

The Hon'ble THE PRESIDENT here intimated that the Government were prepared to accept the amendment.

The Hon'ble BABU JOGENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE remarked :—"As the Government is going to accept the amendment, I need say no more."

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM said :—"I wish to say, Sir, on behalf of Government, that I am prepared to accept this amendment, provided that the words 'total number of the' be inserted before the word 'members' in the last line of the proposed amendment."

The amendment was then put in the following form, namely: —

Provided that no application for such sanction shall be made unless it is authorized by a resolution which has been passed at a meeting specially convened for the purpose and in favour of which a majority of not less than two-thirds of the total number of members of the District Board have voted.

The Hon'ble THE PRESIDENT declared the motion carried.

The Hon'ble RAI KISHORI LAL GOSWAMI, BAHADUR, also moved—

(1) that in the second paragraph of sub-section (1) of section 118B, in clause 53 (now 55), of the Bill, the word "houses" be substituted for the word "property"; and

(2) that the following be added to sub-section (1) of the said section 118B, in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, namely:—

Explanation.—'Houses' include huts, shops, granaries and warehouses and buildings of all other kinds.

He said:—"The reason why I propose this change is that I understood the object and scope of these special provisions for special taxation to be that the tax should be limited only to the actual residents of the hamlet for whose sanitary improvement this money is to be spent. The present wording of the Bill unduly widens the basis for taxation, including amongst the assessees persons who are only remotely interested in the sanitary work to be done there. The first victim will be all the zamindars who have got lands within the Union and who will come under the operation of this Act. They already pay a tax for the improvement of the sanitation of the place, and there should not be a further impost levied from them in the guise of a special taxation. The members of the Union Committees will be mostly the agriculturists, and they would very much prefer that the zamindars are made to pay for sanitary works to be done in accordance with the special provision laid down in the Bill. The next class of people who will also suffer and who ought not to suffer on account of this Act will be those cultivators who live outside the limits of the Union; but who hold lands for cultivation. I think, Sir, this tax ought to be confined to persons who actually own or occupy houses within the limits where special sanitary works are to be done. This portion of the Bill professes to be modelled on the Village Chaukidari Act and the Chota Nagpur Rural Police Act, under which a tax is levied for the protection of the life and property of people residing in villages. Section 7 of the Chota Nagpur Rural Police Act says:—

All owners or occupiers of houses in any village, and every zamindar or under-tenure-holder who has a bhandar or cutchery for the collection of rent within the village shall be liable to assessment for the purposes of the Act.

"In the Village Chaukidari Act, section 14, says:—

'All owners or occupiers of houses in any village, and any person who has within such village a cutchery for collecting rents, shall be liable to assessment for the purposes of this Act.'

"I think, Sir, this provision of the Bill ought to run on the same lines and the assessment should be restricted to the owners or occupiers of houses which will, according to the definition hereafter given, include cutcheries of the zamindars."

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM said:—"I cannot advise the Council to accept this amendment. There is no sound reason in my opinion why the assessment should be confined to owners or occupiers of houses within the Union. It is presumed that the Hon'ble Member has chiefly in mind the case of absentee landlords, and that he wishes that they should escape assessment if they have no house within the Union. I cannot accept this view; and I am supported in this by the opinion of others, several of whom are themselves landed proprietors. The new provisions in regard to Union Committees empower such Committees to take measures in respect of tanks, wells and water-courses as well as houses. If a Union Committee re-excavate, enlarge, deepen or otherwise improve a tank, or repair or deepen a well or water-course, benefit will accrue to the owner. It is obvious that the owner of such property should be liable to contribute towards the cost of such improvement, equally with persons who own or occupy houses within the Union. It is conceivable, on the other hand, that a person who merely owns some land within the limits of the Union may not benefit in any way from works carried out with the object of improving the sanitary conditions of a village. It may be argued that such persons should not be liable to assessment. On the other hand, all persons assessed under the section have the right of appeal (under section 118C) to the District Board, if they consider they have been unjustly or improperly assessed; and if dissatisfied with the decision of the District Board in the matter, they can move the Divisional Commissioner to exercise his power of revision. Looking, however, to the fact that the new provisions are principally directed towards the sanitary improvement of villages, I would be prepared to accept the following proposal:—

> That in section 118B (1), in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, for the words 'the owners or occupiers of property' the following be substituted, viz., 'the owners of buildings, tanks, wells or water-courses, or the occupiers of buildings.'

"The term 'building' is preferable to 'house' for obvious reasons."

There being no opposition, the Hon'ble the President declared the amended motion carried.

The Hon'ble BABU DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI, by leave of the Council, withdrew the following motions, of which he had given notice, namely:—

(1) that after proviso (1) to section 86A, in clause 41 (now 43) of the Bill, the following be inserted, namely:—

> (2) Provided always that when, owing to the construction of a bridge, there is any loss to the owner of a private ferry, such loss will be compensated out of the proceeds of the toll-bar, or out of the funds of the District Board when no tolls are levied.

(2) that in line 9 of section 118B, in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, the word "houses" be substituted for the word "property."

The Hon'ble BABU DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI also moved that in proviso (c) to sub-section (2) of section 118B, in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, for the word "seven" the word "four" be substituted.

This amendment being opposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Oldham, the Hon'ble Babu Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari moved that the word "five" be substituted for the word "seven" in the same proviso.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM having accepted this amendment, the Hon'ble the President declared it carried.

The Hon'ble BABU DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI also moved that after clause 29A (now 32) of the Bill, the following be inserted, namely:—

> '60A. A District Board may form, as occasion may require, permanent or temporary committees in a village or group of villages for carrying out general or specific works of sanitation, such as the digging of wells and tanks, the cutting of jungles and the draining of marshy places, &c.'

He said:—"This, Sir, is purely a permissive section, and ought not to meet with any opposition. The reason why I have thought it necessary to make a permissive provision like this is this: It is conceivable that works outside the scope of individual Unions and which would take up more of the District Board's time than it would care to bestow on them would be neglected. The Unions will no doubt do good work, but their number is not very large; and even if their number be considerably enlarged, their constitution will be more or less formal and con fined to their own units. The Unions will not be able to take up work not strictly within their jurisdiction. I, therefore' propose that District Boards—if it is found necessary to do so—should have power to appoint Committees able to take up work outside the purview of Village Unions. These Committees, if appointed, will be able to give time and energy for the proper carrying out of works which the Board would not be able to attend to.

"It is really not a new thing. My hon'ble friend, Babu Jogendra Nath Mookerjee, who served previously on the Council, raised this question and pointed out that it was desirable to have organisations like those which I suggest to carry on special work. The Village Unions themselves are not able to do it, and the District Boards themselves are not able to attend to it. Under these circumstances it seems to me that it is desirable to have some organizations of the kind suggested, and if the proposal is accepted, an agency may be provided which will be able to do good work."

The Hon'ble BABU GAJADHAR PRASAD said:—"I second the amendment, and my experience as Chairman of a District Board is that in villages the digging of wells and tanks are generally entrusted to people of a village and a headman, but of course they are not recognized as a Sub-Committee. They do the work and it is afterwards passed. I think we should be better provided for in the Act."

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM said:—"It is for such purposes as those mentioned by the Hon'ble Member that Union Committees may be appointed under the Act; and it is more especially to enable the Union Committees better to carry out such measures that the new provisions extending their powers and responsibilities have been inserted in the present Bill. On the other hand, it might lead to serious difficulty if two authorities were established with concurrent jurisdiction in the same area. The existing provisions in the Bill appear to me to fully provide for the case. If such work did not come within the scope of a Union Committee, the District Board have themselves sufficient power under the law as it stands. I think this amendment should, therefore, be rejected."

The motion was then put and lost.

The Hon'ble Mr. Oldham moved that for clause 19 (now 21) of the Bill, the following be substituted, namely:—

> 19. In the proviso to section 36 of the said Act, for the words 'the Local Board to which the Union Committee creating such appointment is subordinate,' the words 'the District Board' shall be substituted.

He said:—"This amendment is necessitated by the terms of section 119, sub-section (1), which provides that the District Board may, with the sanction of the Commissioner, direct that any specified Union Committee shall act as the agent of, and shall be subject to the control of, a Local Board, instead of the District Board, either for all purposes or for the purposes specified in the order; and sub-section (3) enacts that so long as an order made under sub-section (1) with respect to any Local Board continues in force, the reference to the District Board in the foregoing sections of the Act shall, so far as may be necessary, be read as if made to such Local Board."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that for clause 21 (now 23) of the Bill, the following be substituted, namely:—

> 21. In section 44 of the said Act, for the words 'the Local Board to which it is subordinate as hereinafter provided,' and for the words 'the Local Board,' the words 'the District Board' shall be substituted.

He said:—"This amendment similarly is consequential upon section 119."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that for clause 28 (now 30) of the Bill, the following be substituted, namely:—

28. In section 58 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885, for the words 'the Local Board to which such Union Committee is subordinate,' the words 'the District Board' shall be substituted.

He said:—"The same explanation applies here."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that in clause 42 (now 44) of the Bill, for the words "the construction, repair and maintenance, under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, of water-works, wells or tanks within the district," the following be substituted, namely:—

(a) the construction, repair and maintenance, under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, of water-works, wells or tanks within the district; or (b) taking measures under the said Act for the prevention of plague in the district.

He said:—"Clause 42 (now 44) of the Bill, as already explained, empowers District Boards, with the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, to contribute towards the cost of the construction, repair and maintenance, under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act, of water-works, wells or tanks within the district. Such contributions have been made in the past, and it has been decided to specifically provide for them. There is another kind of contribution which has also been made in the past, and for which it is doubtful whether the Act provides at present. Since the advent of plague to this Province, Municipal authorities have in many cases exhausted their resources in taking measures against this scourge; and District Boards have, in several instances, come to their help. A question has recently been raised as to whether the Act authorizes such contributions. Plague usually breaks out first in the larger municipalities, and spreads thence into the farther parts of the district. It is manifestly in the interests of the district as a whole that prompt measures should be taken to prevent or to stamp out, when they occur, such outbreaks; and it is only right, therefore, that District Boards should have power to assist in case of emergency in such measures. It has been thought advisable to take the present opportunity of making this clear."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that after sub-section (1) of section 91, in clause 42A (now 45) of the Bill, the following be inserted, namely:—

(1a) The Civil Surgeon of the district shall be a member ex-officio of the Sanitation Committee of his district.

He said:—"Section 91 enacts that every District Board shall appoint, to be members of Sanitation Committees, not more than five nor less than three members of the Board. It is very important that the Civil Surgeon of the district should always be a member of this Committee, and it has been thought necessary to provide definitely for this in the Act."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that after sub-section (1) of section 118B, in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, the following be inserted, namely:—

(1a) The Union Committee shall appoint one of their number to receive and collect the said assessment, and to grant receipts for the same, and to keep the accounts thereof; and may permit the person so appointed to retain any sum, not exceeding five per cent. of the amount collected by him, to repay the costs of such collection.

He said:—"Section 22 of the Village Chaukidari Act, 1870, provides that every panchayat shall appoint one of their number to receive and collect the rate, and to keep the accounts thereof. There is no similar provision, however, in the Chota Nagpur Rural Police Act. As section 118B will apply to districts in which the Chota Nagpur Rural Police Act is in force, as well as to districts in which the Village Chaukidari Act is in force, it has been decided to insert a general provision of the nature indicated in this amendment."

The Hon'ble BABU JOGENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE, by way of amendment, proposed that the words "or any other person" be inserted after the words "one of their number" in the above amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM having accepted this, the motion was put in the amended form and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that in sub-section (2) of section 118B, in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, for the figures "15 to 20, 22, 25 to 34, 47 and 63," the figures "15 to 19, 25 to 29, 31 to 34, 46A, 46B and 63" be substituted.

He said:—"A careful scrutiny of the two Acts in question has disclosed the necessity of slight alteration in the section in respect of the sections of the Village Chaukidari Act, 1870, to be applied."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that in the same sub-section, for the figures "8 to 11, 13, 15 to 21, 34 and 36," the figures "9, 10, 13, 15 to 18, 20, 21, 34 and 36" be substituted.

He said:—"The same remarks apply in this case".

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that after proviso (a) to section 118B (2), in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, the following be inserted, namely:—

(aa) the references in section 46B of the said Village Chaukidari Act, 1870, to the chaukidari assessment shall be construed as references to the assessment imposed under this section.

He said:—"This is a consequential amendment".

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that proviso (e) to sub-section (2) of section 118B, in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, be omitted.

He said:—"This is also a consequential amendment".

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that in sub-clause (qq), in clause 59 (now 60) of the Bill, for the figures "118A," the figures "118B" be substituted.

He said:—"It will be clear to the Hon'ble Members that section 118B should also be included under sub-section (qq) of section 138".

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that clause 36 of the Bill be omitted.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also, with the permission of the President, moved that to clause 26 (3) (now 27 (4), of the Bill, the following be added, namely:—

and

(d) of the expenses of any of the poorer inhabitants of the district for journeys to and from any hospital established in any part of British India for the treatment of special diseases.

He said:—"Clause 36 of the Bill empowers a District Board, with the approval of the Commissioner, to defray the expenses of poorer inhabitants of the district for journeys to and from any hospital established in any part of British India for the treatment of special diseases. This clause was inserted chiefly with the object of extending to servants of District Boards and poor inhabitants of the district the concessions granted by the Government of India as to the treatment of Government servants at the Pasteur Institute at Kasauli. It has been pointed out, however, that the effect of the clause as it stands would be that the power given by it would have to be exercised by the members of the District Board in meeting, and the approval of the Commissioner then obtained. Obviously this procedure might involve delay of perhaps a month. In the case of a person bitten by an animal suffering from rabies, immediate action for his despatch to Kasauli should be taken. It is advisable, therefore, that a quicker procedure should be provided. This object will be attained by inserting the provision about the payment of such expenses in clause 26 (3) (now 27 (4), of the Bill, that is, under section 53 of the Act."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also, with the permission of the President, moved that in sub-clause (iii) of section 118C, in clause 53 (now 55) of the Bill, for the word "holding" the word "property" be substituted.

He said:—"As Hon'ble Members will observe, this is merely a question of drafting."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also, with the permission of the President moved that in sub-clause (o1), in clause 59 (9) now 60 (10), of the Bill, for the words "famine-relief," the words "the relief of famine, serious distress or scarcity" be substituted.

He said:—"This amendment is necessitated by the amendment made in section 99 and the terms of the new section 99 (a)."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM also moved that clause 5A (now 6) of the Bill be numbered 6, and that all necessary changes be made in the numbering of the remaining clauses and sub-clauses.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. OLDHAM then moved that the Bill, as settled in Council, be passed.

The Hon'ble BABU JOGENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE said:—"It gives me great pleasure to find that this great and beneficent measure, inaugurated by Your Honour, is going to be made law to-day. The diversion of the road-cess to purposes other than those for which it was originally imposed was a standing grievance of the people. It remained for you to remedy it and the people ought to be grateful to you for it. I need not take up the time of the Council by recapitulating the history of the road-cess and the difficulties of the District Boards and by showing the magnitude of the service rendered by Your Honour. It is known to all and appreciated even by the papers which see nothing good in British rule. Your Honour has also earned the gratitude of the people by listening to the objection raised in my note of dissent to the first Report of the Select Committee, embodying the opinion of many of the non-official Members and expunging the provision about the imposition of the railway cess. Now I have to speak of a matter of supreme importance to the people under your charge, namely, the new provision about making sanitary improvements in the rural areas. The growing unhealthiness of the districts of Bengal is just now the greatest danger to the people and a matter deserving of the most serious consideration at the hands of the Government.

"Whatever might be said against the Government and its Officers, it would be very ungrateful indeed not to acknowledge what has been done by them for the education of the people, medical help to them and the prevention of epidemics and the improvement of sanitation in this country—matters to which all past Governments were all but indifferent and impotent on account of ignorance and prejudice. Indeed, our ideas of the education of the masses, and the necessity of adopting measures according to sanitary science, and the like, are the outcome of European science and European democratic ideas. British officials may be haughty, and I for one would like to keep aloof from them whenever possible; but I know that there is not one among them who does not feel that he is here for the amelioration of the condition of the people under his charge. The defects of the British Rule are many, but to say that it has been the cause of famines, plagues and malaria would not be correct and be rather ungrateful, and the person who, knowing it, does not say so, helps in the propagation of untruth.

"Your Honour has once again vindicated the character of the British Governor for his earnest solicitude for the welfare of the people under his charge, by the introduction of the new provisions about sanitation. Your Honour has supplied self-governing bodies with limited powers of taxation for carrying out sanitary improvements. I am thankful to the Select Committee for accepting the safeguards against improper taxation, which I thought would take away all objections to it.

"The Select Committee have provided that the rates can be imposed by the people's representations when two-thirds of them agree to it; then again a moderate limit has been placed on the power of taxation. But I cannot but give expression to my apprehension that the means at the command of the District Boards and Union Committees would be quite insufficient to meet the necessities of the case. The ear-marking of the road-cess will also handicap the District Boards in many matters and probably in the matter of education. Indeed, though much has been done, very much more ought to be done, and people who have received Western education are greatly dissatisfied because they find that, as compared with other civilized countries, so little is done in this country, and they hold the Government responsible for the general ignorance and comparative poverty of the people and also for the many thousands of preventable deaths. It is, however, easy to criticize, but very difficult to do. However, the passing of the present measure is not enough, unless the Government will rise to the occasion and find money for very much larger grants for education and sanitation. My only regret on the present occasion is that Your Honour has been unable to raise the proportion of the elected Members of District Boards as you intended to do. But I believe that a larger measure of self-government will soon be granted, and we need not be impatient. In conclusion, I must say that I would be failing in my duty as a representative of the District Boards if I do not give expression to my gratitude to Your Honour for this great measure of far-reaching beneficence."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

The Council was then adjourned to Saturday, the 5th September, 1908.

CAUTION WHEN APPROACHING GERMAN COASTAL WATERS.

No. 360 (first publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 1202 of 1908), are republished:—

Subject.—The German Government has given Notice that under certain circumstances, such as manœuvres, ordinary exercises, or for other causes, it may be necessary to prohibit free entrance into German harbours and river mouths by night.

Signals.—To indicate that entrance to a harbour is closed, or that obstructions exist therein, three red balls by day and three red lights by night, placed vertically one above the other, will be shown in a conspicuous position near the approach to the harbour.

Caution.—Vessels must then approach the harbour with the greatest caution. At night it is advisable, when possible, to anchor until daybreak outside the prohibited area.

The same course should be pursued if search lights are at work, or signals given, the meaning of which is not recognisable from the Sailing Directions or Light Lists.

Examination—

Service.—All merchant vessels desirous then to enter or leave these privileged harbours, must not enter or leave without a pilot, and must submit to examination if required.

The establishment of an Examination service will not be notified publicly, but, so far as possible, the requisite reports and directions will be given to approaching vessels by Patrol ships, which will also carry the abovementioned signals, viz., three red balls by day and three red lights by night, and also, under certain circumstances, the pilot flag.

The Examination commission (and pilots) are on board the Patrol ships; it is in the real interest of Masters of vessels to comply with all directions received from them.

Under all circumstances vessels are prohibited from passing the line of Patrol ships without communicating with them.

On a gun being fired or signal made from a Patrol ship, all merchant vessels must stop immediately.

RESOLUTION ON THE ADMINISTRATION REPORT OF THE POLICE DEPARTMENT FOR THE YEAR 1907.

POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.—POLICE.

Dated Calcutta, the 27th August 1908.

READ—

The Report on the Administration of the Police Department for the year 1907.

Read also—

The Report for the year 1906 and the Resolution of Government thereon.

MR. C. J. STEVENSON-MOORE, I.C.S., held charge of the office of Inspector-General of Police for the first quarter of the year. Mr. A. V. Knyvett, C.I.E., officiated for him for the remainder of the year. The report has been written by Mr. L. F. Morshead, I.C.S., who relieved Mr. Knyvett on his retirement in March 1908.

2. Substantial progress was made during the year towards the reorganization of the staff in accordance with the proposals sanctioned by the Secretary of State in 1906. Nine Probationary Assistant Superintendents and eight Deputy Superintendents were added to the cadre. There was an increase in the subordinate establishment of 20 Inspectors, 40 Sub-Inspectors, 150 Head-Constables and 792 Constables. The majority of this increased staff was appointed for investigation work. Three hundred and seventeen town chaukidars were replaced by Constables during the year. The replacement of the remaining 183 was left to be carried out on the arrival of recruits on completion of their training from the Constables' Training schools. A scheme is now under preparation for the reorganization of the River Police. New rules for the recruitment of Sub-Inspectors were introduced during the year. Under these rules candidates are nominated by District Committees, consisting of the District Magistrate, the Deputy Inspector-General of the Range and the Superintendent of Police. The nominees are then assembled for selection at different centres in the Province, the list of selected candidates being finally passed by the Inspector-General of Police. It would be premature at present to forecast the results which the new system of recruitment and the change in working practice will bring about. The investigating staff is passing through a transition stage, and the working of the new system will be watched with interest. It appears to be a defect in the rules that they do not provide for sufficient enquiry into the antecedents of candidates before they are registered as eligible. In a few cases candidates have been admitted into the force, who were afterwards found to be undesirable. This is especially likely to be the case when there is a difficulty in obtaining eligible candidates in any particular district and its vacancies have to be supplied from adjacent districts. The Lieutenant-Governor trusts that this defect will be speedily remedied.

Training Schools.

3. There was practically no change in the course of instruction prescribed at the Police Training College and the Constables' Training Schools. Good work was done at all these institutions. An interesting advance is being made in the introduction of a course of training in shorthand. Six selected cadets received training in shorthand at the Bhagalpur Church Missionary Society's Institution, but had not attained sufficient proficiency to be able to report at meetings. A special officer has recently been appointed to give instruction in this subject at the Training College and to work out a system of shorthand suitable to the Bengali language.

The Police Training College was removed to Ranchi at the close of the year. The Constables' Training School formerly at Purulia was removed to Berhampore in October.

Discipline.

4. The Lieutenant-Governor notices with satisfaction that the education of the force has been improved. Ninety per cent. of the officers and 32 per cent. of the men could read and write: in the previous year only 26·4 per cent. of the men were literate. The percentage of officers departmentally punished has, however, risen from 12·9 in 1905 and 17·5 in 1906 to 19 in the year under report. Thirteen per cent. of the men were departmentally punished as against 13·6 per cent. in 1906. The number of convictions under the Penal Code was 114, an increase of four over the figure for the previous year. Three charges of torture were brought against the police during the year, the same number as in each of the two preceding years. It is satisfactory to note that the number of charges of extortion brought against members of the force has steadily decreased. There were 37 such charges in 1905, 32 in 1906, and only 15 in 1907. The Lieutenant-Governor has no doubt that the improved pay and prospects of the police have already begun to lead to a steady improvement in morale. He agrees with the Inspector General that what is chiefly wanted at present is to instil into Inspectors a greater sense of their own responsibility; and he anticipates that the efforts which are being made in this direction will produce increasingly good results in the discipline and conduct of the force.

Health.

5. The average daily percentage of sick in hospital has fallen from 1·8 in 1906 to 1·6 in the year under review. The figures show that the Burdwan Division is the most unhealthy; but Purnea is the worst individual district with a percentage of 4·2. Hooghly and Angul are the next most unhealthy districts.

Town Police.

6. Further steps have been taken towards the reform of the Town Police. The full force sanctioned has not yet been provided, but is being gradually worked up to as funds permit. As stated above, further progress has been made towards the complete replacement of town chaukidars by Constables. The results so far are certainly satisfactory. The Town Police succeeded in effecting an increased number of arrests. A new scheme of patrol has been introduced in Patna City and is now under consideration for general adoption.

Rural Police.

7. It cannot be said that the new system of chaukidari administration, which has been introduced in several districts of the Province, has produced all the results that were anticipated from it. The success of the system depends mainly on the selection of suitable persons to be Presidents of panchayats. In districts where this has been effected, the system has worked satisfactorily; but it cannot be denied that in other districts it has resulted in a loss of touch between the regular and the rural police. In some cases it may not be possible to obtain suitable Presidents. But the Lieutenant-Governor acknowledges with pleasure the success which has attended efforts really made in certain districts. His Honour desires also to record his appreciation of the public spirit of some zamindars who have given themselves to this work with most valuable results. Wherever the Presidents of panchayats are not in full sympathy with the administration or do not realise their responsibility for the work of the chaukidars, there has been delay in reporting crime, and the usefulness of the village chaukidar, as far as the surveillance of bad characters and assistance in investigation are concerned, has been, to a certain degree, impaired. The system is at present only tentative, and its working will be very carefully watched. It must, however, be observed that the officers who were most sanguine as to the success of this system always regarded it as a necessary condition to success that a whole-time Deputy Magistrate should be employed to supervise the work of the panchayats, attend to their recruitment and verify the administration in each district. It has not been possible as yet to appoint these officers; and until this has been done, the system can hardly have a fair trial. Meanwhile the Lieutenant-Governor trusts that the greatest care and tact will be exercised by District Magistrates and Superintendents of Police not only in selecting panchayats, but in seeing that the orders which have been passed as to their treatment and their relations with the local police are properly carried out.

The total number of chaukidars in the Province has been reduced by 2,000. The Lieutenant-Governor is satisfied that care has been taken to see that the number employed does not exceed local needs. There is still great diversity in different districts in the system of rewarding and punishing chaukidars. The average fine imposed upon chaukidars in the district of Gaya was Rs. 3-3; in the district of Hazaribagh it was 2 annas. In the latter district the amount paid in rewards fell from Rs. 1,180 to Rs. 90 in 1907. The Lieutenant-Governor reiterates his opinion that in some districts the punishments are too frequent or too severe, while in other districts too little attention is paid to the granting of rewards. He trusts that this matter will receive the careful attention of the Inspector-General.

Cognizable Crime.

8. The total number of reported cognizable cases differs by 410 from the figures for 1906. The number is high, and the excess over the average for the past decade must undoubtedly be attributed to the high price of grain. Excluding public nuisances and offences under special or local laws, the percentage of police cases resulting in conviction to cases decided, rose from 77 in 1905 and 80 in 1906 to 82 in the year under review,—a fact which seems to denote a continued improvement in investigation work. The percentage of convictions in Sessions cases was nearly the same as in the previous year. The number of cases declared false decreased from 3,392 in 1906 to 3,210 in 1907. This represents a little over 2 per cent. of the total number of cases reported. Patna and Shahabad are the districts in which these cases are most numerous. The percentage of such cases in which prosecutions were instituted under sections 182 and 211 of the Indian Penal Code has again fallen from 15·7 in 1905 and 12·8 in 1906 to 10·9 in the year under review. The percentage of convictions in such cases has also fallen from 39·5 in 1906 to 37·6 in 1907. These results are very unsatisfactory. The attention of Magistrates was drawn to this important subject in the Resolution on the report for 1906; but the results this year are no better than before. The worst results are reported from Darjeeling, Birbhum and Manbhum. In the first named district there were 37 false cases: only one prosecution was instituted; and that proved unsuccessful. The results in Saran were the best, where 16 prosecutions were instituted, of which eleven proved successful. In Hooghly there were 12 prosecutions and 8 convictions. It appears that Magistrates are too often unwilling to assume the full responsibility for the opinion they have given in declaring a case false by proceeding to direct a prosecution. The percentage of cases in which prosecutions are undoubtedly advisable, and convictions might be expected to follow, could never perhaps be very high, but might certainly be higher than at present. There has been a considerable fall in the number of cases in which compensation was awarded under section 250, Criminal Procedure Code. The Lieutenant-Governor has again to notice with regret that Magistrates do not as a whole make sufficient use of this valuable provision.

Remands.

9. His Honour desires again to draw the special attention of all Magistrates to the necessity for the speedy disposal of cases. One cause of delays is undoubtedly the frequent transfer of officers; but, even when this is taken into account, the figures for remands are still unsatisfactory. The percentage of cases disposed of at the first two hearings has remained practically stationary, while that of cases remanded more than six times has again risen. The worst results come from the Patna Division, particularly the Patna district, where no less than 123 cases of the 953 sent up were remanded more than six times. This compares unfavourably with the next heaviest district, Midnapore, where there were almost the same number of cases, but only 15 were remanded over six times. It would assist Government to a more just appreciation of the work of the police and magistracy if it were possible to discriminate remands occasioned by the difficulty of tracing the antecedents of unidentified prisoners from those due to delay in bringing forward and recording evidence locally available; but any attempt to do so would probably occasion great difficulties in compilation.

Serious Crimes: Murder, etc.

10. The number of serious crimes against the person fell from 3,555 in 1906 to 3,452 in 1907. The number of murders rose from 284 to 306. Of these 306 cases, only 180 came before the Courts, and of these only 43 per cent. ended in conviction. These results are disappointing. The proportion of undetected cases is high; and the judicial results in detected cases cannot be considered satisfactory. The most important cases under this heading were the murder of the Maharaja of Sonbursa in Bhagalpur, and the murder of a European girl at Darjeeling by a corporal of the Artillery at Katapahar.

Rioting, etc.

11. The total number of rioting cases has slightly decreased, the decrease being shared by every Division except Burdwan and Chota Nagpur. As the decrease has been progressive for three successive years and accompanies an increase of preventive action under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code, it is a satisfactory feature. The increase in the Midnapore district of the Burdwan Division is attributed to political unrest. The increase in the Chota Nagpur Division is accompanied by a decrease in the number of cases in which persons were bound down to keep the peace under section 107, Criminal Procedure Code. The Lieutenant-Governor sees reason to infer that where this section has been sufficiently utilised the results have been good, and that where rioting tends to increase, sufficient use has not been made of it.

Dacoity, etc.

12. The number of dacoities has steadily if slightly decreased; 247 such cases occurred in 1905, 228 in 1906 and 204 in 1907. This figure is much below the average for preceding years, and the police are to be congratulated upon their success in dealing with this form of crime. The decrease is most noticeable in the Bhagalpur and Chota Nagpur Divisions, and is undoubtedly due to the successful prosecution of gang cases, and proceedings under section 110, Criminal Procedure

Code, particularly in Purnea and Manbhum. Purnea, however, still heads the list with 35 dacoities; but this figure is less by 17 than that for the previous year. The next worst districts are Shahabad with 21 and Midnapore with 17 cases. In Manbhum the number of dacoities decreased from 27 in 1906 to 7 in 1907. There was a brief outbreak of dacoity in Sambalpur, and in Hooghly the number of cases rose from 6 to 12, 11 out of which were undetected. The number of burglary cases remained practically unchanged; and the number of theft cases slightly increased. The figures for these forms of crime are, however, considerably above the average of preceding years, an unfortunate but inevitable result of the high price of grain. The Southal Parganas still heads the list for cattle-thefts. Nevertheless, the number of these cases in this district has decreased from 403 in 1906 to 224 in 1907, a result attributable to the successful prosecution of some notorious cattle-lifters.

The Lieutenant-Governor notices a rather remarkable increase in the number of cases of arson. There were as many as 432 cases of arson in the year under review, 87 of which, however, were declared false. Midnapore was responsible for about 10 per cent. of the total number of cases in the Province; but the worst Division is the Presidency where there were as many as 109 true cases, only one of which ended in conviction. Some part of the increase in this form of crime is attributable to political unrest. The difficulty of obtaining evidence in cases of this nature and the steps necessary for prevention, are engaging the serious attention of Government.

Railway Police.

13. There has been a general increase of crime on all the Railway systems in the Province. The total number of cases reported to the Railway Police has risen from 7,875 in 1905 and 8,658 in 1906 to 10,348 in the year under review. The increase is chiefly in cases of minor offences against property. The figures, however, are somewhat delusive. The division of the Railways into smaller police charges has undoubtedly resulted in the maintenance of closer supervision and less concealment of petty crime. The increase in the volume of traffic and the extensions of the Railway systems (notably the Grand Chord on the East Indian Railway and the Purulia-Ranchi branch of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway) are probably as much responsible for the increase in the number of cases as the prevailing scarcity. The percentage of convictions to cases decided was 89·5 per cent. against 88·9 in the previous year. The number of obstructions on the line fell from 63 in 1906 to 48 in the year under review. The most important of these was the attempt to blow up the Lieutenant-Governor's train on the 5th December. There were three or four strikes on the Railway during the year, the most serious being the strike of European and Eurasian guards and drivers on the East Indian Railway in November. It was found necessary to despatch a Company of European troops from Calcutta to Asansol to maintain order; and detachments of military and armed police were stationed at other centres on the line. It is satisfactory to record that these precautions prevented any serious disturbance.

Criminal Investigation.

14. Mr. C. W. C. Plowden was in charge of the Criminal Investigation Department throughout the year. The operations of the Department, of which an interesting account is given in the latter portion of the report, were remarkably successful. Valuable work was done in dealing with organized gangs of thieves and dacoits; and the Department undertook in addition the investigation of a number of incidental cases of murder, forgery, and other serious crimes. The most important of these investigations was the enquiry into the attempt to derail the Lieutenant-Governor's train at Naraingarh on the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, referred to above. The enquiry resulted in the conviction of some Railway coolies. A number of gang cases were prosecuted with uniform success. As many as 93 per cent. of the persons tried were convicted. An interesting description is given of the break-up of a number of wandering gangs of Haburahs who were responsible for a formidable outbreak of road dacoity at the beginning of the year. These Haburahs were old jail-birds who hailed from the United Provinces. They moved into Bengal where they represented themselves as Karwals and Naths of a comparatively harmless type, and by this means succeeded for a time in diverting the suspicions of the local police.

The Criminal Investigation Department started active enquiries into their character and methods, which resulted in the arrest, on a given date, of all gangs of Karwals and Naths then halting in the Province. The identity of a number of them as Haburahs was established by means of finger-prints, and the true Karwal gangs were released. The results were excellent. Nearly 300 cases of dacoity, robbery and theft were traced to the gangs, most of whom were convicted in specific cases or bound down under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code. A large number were found to have as many as five or more previous convictions. It appears to be the case that the professional and hereditary criminal classes are steadily making more and more use of modern improvements in communication, so that they now appear in and exploit districts which had never heard of them before. It is also a difficulty in dealing with them that knowledge of their history and habits is practically an exclusive possession of the Criminal Investigation Department. The ordinary police, magistracy and public know little more than that there are some tribes of which they can distinguish perhaps the names of Naths, Bhars and Maghya Domes, which are specially addicted to crime. A clear and simple account of the principal criminal tribes, their characteristics, modus operandi, and area of operation would be of great service to the public and to the administration, since anything that tends to expose these pests of society must render them less dangerous. Other important cases in which the services of the Department were employed with success were the case of Bamapada Mukharji, a notorious swindler who was arrested at Ratlam, and the break up of the Calcutta-Midnapore gang of blackmailers. An interesting description of the methods of this gang is given on page 33 of the Report.

Continued progress is being made in the classification of finger-prints, the preparation of history-sheets and the photography of notorious criminals. Six Sub-Inspectors are being yearly deputed from districts to undergo a course of training in the finger-print system. The Lieutenant-Governor observes with satisfaction that the relations between the Department and the Calcutta Police and those of other provinces continue to be cordial.

15. The Police Department is still to some extent in a state of transition. Great improvements have been made in many departments. The strength of all ranks has been increased; and simultaneously with increase of numbers there have for years been continuous efforts at improvement in recruitment and training. To those who are brought into contact with police work the results are already apparent in many ways. If they are not equally visible in statistical results, it is perhaps because the changes are still far from complete, and cannot have nearly produced their full effects. It is also to be remembered that, with the degree of scarcity prevailing in some parts of the province and with the high prices which are universal, it is much that crime has been kept within normal limits. Finally, too, the advances made by the criminal classes in the utilization of all the instruments of modern civilization are not a matter of yesterday, but the growth of years, although it was long before any attempt was made to meet them by similar action on the part of the police; so that there has been great leeway to make up.

16. The Lieutenant-Governor has much pleasure in acknowledging the thorough administration of the department by Mr. Knyvett, and in thanking Mr. Morshead for his interesting report. His Honour is pleased to notice the names of the officers who have been specially recommended for good work. His acknowledgments are also due to Mr. Plowden for his services in the Criminal Investigation Department and to Mr. K. B. W. Thomas, Principal of the Police Training College.

Rate, land-revenue demand and gross rental.

3. In the 30 districts in which the Act is in force, both cesses were, as in the preceding year, levied at the maximum rate of one anna in each rupee of the annual value of lands or annual net profits of mines and other immoveable properties. The Act is not in force in Angul, the Khondmals, Sambalpur and parts of the Sonthal Parganas, where it is being gradually introduced. The current demand of land revenue of the 30 districts was Rs. 2,84,13,360 and the valuation, or gross rental, amounted to Rs. 12,87,56,860.

Demands, collections, balances and remissions.

4. * * * * In the following table the demands, collections, balances, and remissions of the year are compared with the two preceding years:—

Year.	Demand.			Collections	Percentage of total collections on current demand	Balance.	Percentage of the balance on the total demand.	Remissions.
	Current.	Arrear.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.		Rs.		Rs.
1905-06 ...	69,55,856	13,50,895	83,06,751	70,59,858	101·4	12,66,104	15·2	69,916
1906-07 ...	70,11,936	12,70,766	82,82,702	69,56,766	99·2	13,48,585	16·2	1,12,743
1907-08 ...	71,20,946	13,51,746	84,72,692	71,97,473	101·07	12,83,256	15·1	67,756

The increase of Rs. 1,09,010 in the current demand, as compared with the previous year, was mainly due to revaluations and to the revision of assessments of mines and forests in various districts. The valuation of profits derived by the owners and occupiers of coal mines lying in the Asansol subdivision, as well as the general revaluation in the district of Burdwan, yielded an increase of Rs. 52,900 in the current demand. In Manbhum, the old demand was enhanced by Rs. 43,584, owing partly to the rise in the price of coal and partly to the careful ascertainment of the actual profits of the colliery owners. It is noticeable that, with the large increase in the current demand, there was an increase in collections of Rs. 2,40,707, giving a percentage of 101·07, as against 99·2 in the preceding year. The year opened with a balance of Rs. 13,4[illegible],585, and the outstanding balance at its close was Rs. 12,83,256. The percentage of the balance on the total demand fell from 16·2 to 15·1, and was less than in the preceding three years The remissions and reductions amounted to Rs. 67,756 only, as against Rs. 1,12,743 in the previous year. The largest remissions were granted in Gaya (Rs. 16,005), Burdwan (Rs. 7,595), Muzaffarpur (Rs. 7,582) and Hazaribagh (Rs. 7,433). In Gaya the remissions were due mainly to the revision of the assessment of Mahal Deokali (belonging to the 7-annas Tikari estate) and certain Government estates; in Burdwan to the exemption of certain coal mines from assessment; in Muzaffarpur to the revision of assessment and other causes; and in Hazaribagh to the acquisition of lands for the construction of the Gaya-Barakar Railway and to the revision of assessment of mines and forests under Chapter V of the Cess Act.

Working of the certificate procedure.

7. The number of certificates filed for the realisation of cess arrears was 80,502, as against 78,609 of the previous year. There was a noticeable increase in the number of institutions in Midnapore (984), Hooghly, including Howrah (3,131), Bhagalpur (899) and Balasore (1,101). The increase in Midnapore was due to defaults in voluntary payments, and in Hooghly, including Howrah, to the filing of certificates for all arrears of rent-free lands, which had been amalgamated with their parent estates, the demands in these cases being non-recurring. The increase in Bhagalpur was chiefly due to the fact that in the previous year certificates were issued only for arrears exceeding Rs. 5, while, during the year under report, certificates for sums below Rs. 5 had also to be issued in order to avoid limitation. In Balasore the increase is attributed to the filing of a large number of certificates to avoid limitation in case of petty arrears due from revenue-free estates. The decrease in the number of institutions is most marked in Saran (1,481), Darbhanga (1,585) and Monghyr (1,522). The decrease in Saran was due to the issue of certificates for the kist of January 1908 after the close of the year. That in Darbhanga was due to larger voluntary payments owing to better harvests, the percentage of collections having risen from 86·09 in 1906-07, when famine prevailed, to 113·4 during the year under report. The decrease in Monghyr is reported to be due to the fact that a number of certificates for the arrears of the third kist could not be filed within the year.

8. Including 22,367 certificates pending from last year, there was a total of 102,869 cases for disposal. Of these, 82,040 were disposed of during the year, leaving 20,829 cases pending at the end. The disposals exceeded the institutions in all the Divisions, except the Presidency and Orissa, and they were in excess of institutions by 1,538. The total number of certificates pending at the close of the year was less than in the preceding year, the percentage on the total number for disposal being 20·2 as against 21·7.

Objections against certificates.

9. The total number of objections against certificate cases was 5,455, of which 5,336 were disposed of. In the previous year the number filed and disposed of came to 6,096 and 5,998, respectively. In 941 cases, as against 770 in the preceding year, the certificates were cancelled on account of the death or desertion of judgment-debtors, double assessments, the exemption of lands lying within municipal jurisdiction, non-registration of names of rent-free land-holders, and errors in the Land Registration registers and the cess ledgers. The number of cases in which reductions were made in the certificate demand was 146, as against 175 in 1906-07.

Stage of procedure at which demands were satisfied.

10. The mere issue of notices was sufficient to secure payment in 22,803 cases; in 30,387 cases payments were made on the issue of notice for the sale of the defaulters' moveable properties, and in 16,463 on the issue of notice for the sale of immoveable properties. Of the total number of sales, 1,893 (as against 2,169 in 1906-07), 932 (as against 1,160 in the preceding year) were set aside under sections 20 and 21 of the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act, I of 1895, as amended by Bengal Act I of 1897.

Valuations and revaluations.

11. * * * * During the year valuations or revaluations, partial or complete, were in progress in 18 out of the 30 districts in which the Act is in force.

12. General revaluations on an extensive scale were completed in Burdwan, Bankura, Darbhanga, and Palamau. The revaluation of Burdwan was completed on 31st March 1908, and resulted in a total increase of Rs. 5,32,134 in the valuation and of Rs. 27,948 in the cess demand, amounting in each case to about 8 per cent. The operations in Bankura were completed in July 1907, and resulted in a decrease of Rs. 5,070 in the cess demand. This decrease was anticipated before the revaluation was taken in hand, because, in the previous revaluation, simple raiyati holdings had been treated as tenures and the assessment thereby artificially inflated. The general revaluation of the district of Darbhanga, which was commenced in 1906, was completed during the year. The result is a decrease of Rs. 10,193 in the cess demand, which was due to a more correct assessment on the basis of the settlement records. Here too the decrease was anticipated. In Palamau the new assessment yielded an increase of Rs. 28,317 in the cess demand.

* * * * * *

Gross rental.

16. * * * * The gross rental of the Province shows an increase of Rs. 20,25,598 over that of the preceding year, the increase being derived mainly from valuations and revaluations and the annual revision of assessments of mines and forests.

Amendment of the Cess Act.

18. The proposals for the amendment of the Cess Act have during the year been submitted to the Government of India and sanction has been asked for the introduction of the Bill in the Bengal Legislative Council.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. The rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.

Service of notice of settlement of rents.

65. In the case of a settlement of fair rents under Part II of Chapter X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, when a settlement of revenue is being, or is about to be, made, the Revenue-officer shall serve a notice by proclamation and beat of drum, and by posting it, in the presence of not less than two persons, in some conspicuous place in the village comprising the lands under settlement.

The notice shall be in Form 14 in Schedule I and shall set forth that, on a date named and at a place named, the Revenue-officer will settle fair rents in respect of all estates, tenures or holdings, and for unsettled lands included in such village. A schedule may, when the Revenue-officer thinks fit, be appended to the notice, giving such particulars as he may think necessary relating to the names and numbers of all estates, tenures, and holdings paying revenue or rent to Government, and of unsettled lands for which rent will be settled. Such notice shall be served at least one week previous to the date fixed for settlement of fair rents. When such notice has been served, it shall be held that all persons have, subject to the provisions of Rule 73, been sufficiently warned of the date fixed:

Provided that in cases in which a table of rates is prepared under the provisions of section 104B, the notice shall not be published until the table of rates has been confirmed under sub-section (5) of that section.

Table of rates where necessary.

66. A table of rates shall not ordinarily be prepared when it is found that the tenants of the local area in question hold their lands at lump rentals, and no rates actually exist, or when the rates are so numerous and varied, and are so little dependent on the class of soil, that no table of existing rates can be prepared. When the above conditions do not obtain, and it is possible to prepare a table of existing rates which are generally of a uniform character and in accordance with certain ascertainable classes of soil, a table of rates may be prepared in accordance with the provisions of section 104A (c):

Provided that when the Revenue-officer is of opinion, for reasons to be recorded by him in writing, and submitted to, and approved by, the authority empowered to confirm the table of rates, that the rents stated as the existing rents by the landlord and tenants are not the rents that are legally payable, and that it is impossible to ascertain those rents, a table of rates fairly and equitably payable may be prepared and shall be based on the rates or rents payable in those neighbouring villages, the lands of which are fairly comparable with the lands of the village.

Preparation of table of rates.

67. When the Revenue-officer has decided to settle rents in any local area on the basis of a table of rates, under section 104A (c), he shall first prepare a table of existing rates and shall then either maintain those rates or shall proceed to enhance or reduce them, having regard to the general principles laid down n the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, for the enhancement or reduction of rents, and especially to section 30 (b), (c) and (d).

Contents of table of rates.

68. The table of rates finally prepared by the Revenue-officer and published by him under section 104B (2) shall contain the particulars noted in section 104B (1), and shall show—

(a) the classes of land, as locally known, that have been adopted in the fixation f rates;

(b) the area, expressed in local measure, for which each rate is fixed;

(c) the existing rates, if any, taken as the basis of the table of rates; and (d) the rates of rent fixed as fairly and equitably payable by tenants holding land of each class whose rent is liable to alteration.

Publication of table of rates.

69. (a) When a table of rates has been prepared under section 104B, a notice in Form 15 in Schedule I shall be posted up in the landlord's office in the village or, in the presence of not less than two persons, in some conspicuous place in the village, stating that the table of rates will be published in the village on a day to be specified, not less than a week from the date of the posting of such notice, and calling on all persons interested to attend on the date so specified.

(b) On the date fixed for the publication of the table of rates, the Revenue-officer shall proceed to the village and shall explain to so many of the parties as attend, the proposed rates and the grounds on which they are based and shall hear and consider any objections that may be raised to any entries in the table. He shall at the same time inform the parties who attend that the table of rates will be open to inspection for not less than one month in the office of the Revenue-officer or in such other convenient place as the Revenue-officer may determine, and that any person who objects to any entry in the table of rates may present a petition to him on the subject, within one month of the date of the publication of the table of rates, which will be duly considered under section 104B (3).

Record of grounds of order.

70. The Revenue-officer shall record the grounds of his final order in every case in which he disposes of an objection to a table of rates under section 104B (4).

Submission of proceedings to confirming authority.

71. In submitting his proceedings to the confirming authority under section 104B (4), the Revenue-officer shall describe the land classification adopted by him for the purposes of his table of rates, and shall show in tabular form the rates which were found by him to exist for the classes of land described, and the rates he proposes to substitute for the existing rates, explaining in each case his grounds for maintaining, enhancing or reducing the rates

Confirming authorities.

72. (a) The following Revenue Authorities are empowered, under section 104B (4), to confirm tables of rates prepared under the Bengal Tenancy Act:—

(i) when the total rents to which the table of rates is to be applied will not, in the opinion of the Revenue-officer, exceed Rs. 1,000 the Collector of the District;

Provided that when a Revenue-officer proposes to alter an existing rent, and the parties have not attended in compliance with the general notice prescribed in rule 65 above, the Revenue-officer shall serve each person interested with a special notice, and the fair rent shall not be settled in the absence of such person until after due service of such special notice has been proved.

74. The Settlement Rent-roll shall contain the particulars prescribed in section 104A (2), and the fair rent settled for each tenant shall be entered in it by the Revenue-officer himself at the time that such rent is settled.

Provided that a second appeal shall lie from any order on appeal settling the amount of a fair rent passed by a Settlement Officer or Collector under this rule to the Commissioner of the Division, and that, when the proposed annual rental of any tenancy exceeds 100 rupees per annum, a final appeal shall, in all such cases, lie to the Board of Revenue.

77. As soon as the Settlement Rent-roll has been sanctioned by the Confirming Authority, it shall be incorporated in the record-of-rights by the entry of the fair rents settled in a column of the khatian to be set apart for that purpose.

There will be three classes of looms—(a) not exceeding Rs. 50 in selling price, (b) not exceeding Rs. 125, (c) exceeding Rs. 125. In case of any dispute as to the selling price the Committee's opinion will be final.

Special Prize.

(a) A special prize of Rs. 500 will be placed at the disposal of the judges to be awarded to the best loom entered for any of the competitions, provided that such loom is well suited to the requirements of Native hand-weavers and is capable of doing satisfactory work on both fine and coarse counts. The judges will be required to satisfy themselves that the initial cost of the loom is reasonable, that it is not likely to get out of order, that it can be easily repaired, that with but slight modifications it is capable of being worked on both fine and coarse counts, that it requires no uncommon dexterity to obtain good results from it, and generally that its adoption by the weaving community would enable them largely to increase their output.

A second special prize will be awarded to the loom that best fulfils the above conditions in respect of the coarse counts.

(b) Additional prizes will be given at the discretion of the Committee for looms or weaving accessories not specially contemplated in the above conditions, provided that they are worked during the Exhibition.

General.

Any number of looms of the same make may be entered for any competition, but only one prize will be awarded in each competition, to one particular make of the loom. Special weavers' prizes of Rs. 25 each will be awarded to the weavers themselves. Three such prizes will be awarded in each competition by the judges, who will only take into account the skill and dexterity of the weaver independently of the merits of the loom.

Intending competitors should send their looms so as to reach the Secretaries to the Exhibition Committee before the 1st November 1908. They should send in their entries from 1st to 15th October in the form attached.

The workmen should report themselves to the Secretaries at least two days before the date of the competition.

The exhibitors will have to make their own arrangements, at their own cost, for setting up their looms.

Competitors entering a number of looms will, as far as space permits, be allowed to make arrangements for winding pirns on the premises.

Looms may be worked as a practical exhibit or kept on view during the whole of the Exhibition in the shed where the competition will be held.

Arrangements will be made to bring in parties of weavers to see the looms from the most important weaving centres of the Provinces.

to repeal the Howrah and Suburban Municipal Police Act, 1884.

WHEREAS it is expedient to repeal the Howrah and Suburban Municipal Police Act, 1884 ; It is hereby enacted as follows :— Ben. Act, IV of 1884.

Short title. 1. This Act may be called the Bengal Repealing Act, 1908.

Repeal of Bengal Act IV of 1884. 2. The Howrah and Suburban Municipal Police Act, 1884, is hereby repealed.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Howrah Municipality has been relieved by the Government of India, with effect from the 1st April, 1908, of all liabilities formerly imposed on it on account of police charges, and the Suburban Municipality was abolished in the year 1888.

It is, therefore, unnecessary to retain the Howrah and Suburban Municipal Police Act, 1884 (Ben. Act IV of 1884), on the Statute Book, and it is accordingly proposed to repeal it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

STATE TECHNICAL SCHOLARSHIPS.

The Hon'ble BABU RADHA CHARAN PAL said:—

In the Gazette of India of the 23rd January, 1904, in paragraph 6 of the Despatch No. 8, dated Simla, the 9th October, 1902, from the Government of India, Home Department, to His Majesty's Secretary of State for India, it is stated that "the Local Governments and Administrations will be required to bear in mind the importance of ensuring that the returned scholar shall find scope for his skill and ability * * * * * * * If the early results of the scheme are successful, we think that the services of the returned scholars are sure to be in good demand, and that, failing private employment, Government will be glad to turn their abilities to account as teachers in industrial schools or in other capacities connected with the improvement of local industries."

Will the Government be pleased to state whether any of the returned scholars have been taken into the Government service?

In paragraph 3 of the same Despatch it is stated that "they proposed to give two (scholarships) to the Madras Presidency, two to the Bombay Presidency, two to Bengal and to distribute the remaining four among the other provinces."

Subsequently in paragraph 2 of the Government Notification published in the Statesman of the 20th March, 1908, it is stated that the Government of India have now decided to award during the year 1908 and the following years one scholarship annually to each province, * * *

Will the Government be pleased to state the cause of reduction in the number of scholarships from two to one?

It is stated in the Government Notification (published in the Statesman of the 20th March, 1908) that "as far as Bengal was concerned, it was decided that the mining industry offered the most * * * * * favourable field, * * * * * and the scholarships hitherto awarded on the recommendation of the Government of Bengal have been utilized for the encouragement of that industry. Eleven State Technical scholars have been sent from Bengal in the four years, 1904 to 1907."

Will the Government be pleased to state how many of the said scholars have returned after completing their period of scholarships, with what qualifications, and how they have been employed?

Since the institution of the said scholarships, rules under section 20 of the Indian Mines Act, 1901 (VIII of 1901), fixing qualifications for Mine Managers, were published in the Gazette of India, dated 21st April, 1906, and came into operation from 21st October, 1906.

Will the Government be pleased to state whether such rules have facilitated the employment of the scholars in any way; if so, what steps have been taken to ensure the success of the scheme and to turn the ability of the returned scholars into practical utility?

The Hon'ble MR. STREATFEILD replied:—

"Since 1904 ten scholars have gone to England, where seven are still pursuing their studies. One scholar threw up his work with the object of being called to the Bar. Two scholars have obtained the degree of B. Sc. in Mining. One has not yet reported his arrival in India to Government. The second returned to India last November and has lately applied to Government for employment. This is therefore the only case coming under Part I of the Hon'ble Member's question.

"The Government has been informed that this last gentleman failed to pass the recent examination held by the Mining Board under the rules made by the Government of India under section 20 of the Indian Mines Act, VIII of 1901. This result is surprisingly unsatisfactory and careful inquiry will be made into all the facts of the case. The Government is anxious to give all possible help to deserving scholars on their return to India, but it certainly does not propose to provide employment in all cases irrespective of merit. It is moreover eminently desirable that the services of returned scholars should be utilized as far as possible in private employment.

"There is no reason to doubt the value of the examination prescribed by the rules framed under section 20 of the Indian Mines Act. The object of this examination is not to facilitate the employment of scholars, but to prevent the employment as Mine Managers of persons who are not reasonably qualified for such employment. The examination is understood to be such as any mining scholar should pass without difficulty.

"Formerly two scholarships were awarded to each of the Governments of Madras, Bombay and Bengal, the remaining four being distributed among other Local Governments. The Government of India considered that this arrangement was unfair, as it did not give every province an opportunity of nominating a scholar every year. The ten scholarships have therefore been re-distributed and one scholarship has been made available annually for each province. There has been no reduction in the total number of scholarships. It has been decided that this re-distribution shall not prevent any Local Government from receiving more than one scholarship in any year if there is a dearth of eligible candidates in other provinces. Two scholars from this province have been accepted this year by the Government of India. One is to undergo a course of training in mining and the other in leather industries."

TECHNICAL SCHOLARSHIPS FOR MINING.

The Hon'ble BABU RADHA CHARAN PAL asked:—

Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is under contemplation in any Department of Government, or it has been recommended, to abolish the present system of Technical scholarships for Mining study on the ground that a course of Mining training has recently been introduced in the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur; whether the course of education in Mining training in the Sibpur College includes practical training in any up-to-date collieries; and whether the Sibpur College Laboratory has been well-equipped with up-to-date Mining Machinery, Experimental Mine, etc., Electrical Machinery, Metallurgical Laboratory with furnaces and Geological Laboratory necessary for Mining study similar to what are provided for in the University of Birmingham, where such Technical scholars are usually sent?

The Hon'ble MR. STREATFEILD replied:—

"This Government is not aware of any proposal to abolish the present system of Technical Scholarships for mining. The Sibpur course includes a period of practical surveying in a mining district with actual underground work. The College has been well equipped, as far as is practicable and as far as funds permit; but it cannot pretend to an equipment equal to that of the Birmingham University."

OVERFLOW OF THE RIVER BODAI.

The Hon'ble BABU JOGENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE asked:—

Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the condition of the ancient and populous villages of Hadal, Narayanpore and others situated within thana Vishnupore in the district of Bankura, which are every year under water on account of the overflow of the waters of the River Bodai and have become all but deserted in consequence? Will the Government be pleased to inquire and to take steps to remedy this state of things?

The Hon'ble MR. INGLIS replied:—

"The attention of Government has not been drawn to this matter, and there is no present information in respect to it. An inquiry will be made."

BABU DURGA CHARAN SANAYAL'S CASE.

The Hon'ble BABU JOGENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE asked:—

(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the observations of the Indian Daily News, the Empire, the Capital, and all the Indian papers of Bengal regarding the conviction and sentence of Babu Durga Charan Sanyal? Does the Government intend to take any steps in the matter?

(b) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the observations in the judgment of the High Court in the above case describing the pitiable condition of the accused, an old pleader of over 60 years, who has lost many children and whose bereavements and disappointments in life have told seriously on his health and mind? Will the Government be pleased to remit his sentence on the above considerations?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to consider whether the said old prisoner should not be treated with kindness and not required to undergo hard labour as long as his matter is under consideration and also as long as he is in jail?

The Hon'ble MR. STREATFEILD replied:—

"The prisoner in question is being carefully observed, and his case is receiving due attention. As the offence for which he has been convicted was committed within the province of Eastern Bengal and Assam, this Government is not in a position to deal finally with the matter except in consultation with the Government of that province. It is impossible to express any opinion on this case at present."

SCARCITY IN BIHAR.

The Hon'ble BABU GAJADHAR PRASAD asked:—

Is the Government aware that on account of drought, bhadoi crops in Bihar are almost destroyed and the prospects of paddy there are quite gloomy? If so, will it please the Government to take the necessary measures for the relief of the people of Bihar?

The Hon'ble MR. DUKE replied:—

"Government is aware that owing to failure of the rains the crop prospects are very gloomy in certain districts of Bihar. It is hoped that the situation has been improved in the south and west by recent heavy rain. The local officers have already been addressed with a view to action being taken as soon as it may become necessary. They have applied for takavi loans to be distributed as soon as rain makes the cultivation of the rabi crop possible and these have been arranged for."

THE CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY BILL, 1908.

The Hon'ble Mr. Vincent presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend and consolidate certain enactments relating to the law of Landlord and Tenant and the settlement of rents in Chota Nagpur.

The Hon'ble Mr. Vincent also moved that the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration by the Council on the 19th instant.

The motion was put and agreed to.

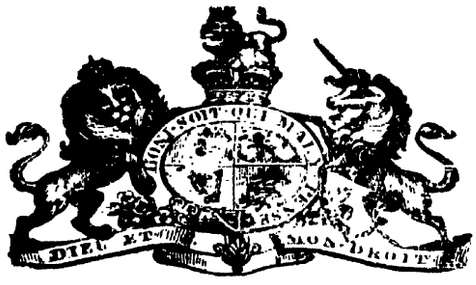
THE BENGAL REPEALING BILL, 1908.

The Hon'ble Mr. Oldham moved for leave to introduce a Bill to repeal the Howrah and Suburban Municipal Police Act, 1884. He said:—

"The Howrah Municipality has been relieved by the Government of India of all liabilities formerly imposed on it on account of police charges, and the Suburban Municipality was abolished in the year 1888. It is unnecessary therefore to retain the Howrah and Suburban Municipal Police Act, 1884 (Bengal Act IV of 1884), on the Statute Book, and it is accordingly proposed to repeal it."

The Hon'ble Mr. Oldham also introduced the Bill, and moved that it be read in Council.

The motion was put and agreed to, and the Secretary accordingly read the title of the Bill.



The Hon'ble Mr. Oldham also moved that the Bill be taken into consideration by the Council on the 19th instant.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council was then adjourned to Saturday, the 19th September, 1908.

CAUTION WHEN APPROACHING GERMAN COASTAL WATERS.

No. 360 (second publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 1202 of 1908), are republished:—

Subject.—The German Government has given Notice that under certain circumstances, such as manœuvres, ordinary exercises, or for other causes, it may be necessary to prohibit free entrance into German harbours and river mouths by night.

Signals.—To indicate that entrance to a harbour is closed, or that obstructions exist therein, three red balls by day and three red lights by night, placed vertically one above the other, will be shown in a conspicuous position near the approach to the harbour.

Caution.—Vessels must then approach the harbour with the greatest caution. At night it is advisable, when possible, to anchor until daybreak outside the prohibited area.

The same course should be pursued if search lights are at work, or signals given, the meaning of which is not recognisable from the Sailing Directions or Light Lists.

Examination—

Service.—All merchant vessels desirous then to enter or leave these privileged harbours, must not enter or leave without a pilot, and must submit to examination if required.

The establishment of an Examination service will not be notified publicly, but, so far as possible, the requisite reports and directions will be given to approaching vessels by Patrol ships, which will also carry the abovementioned signals, viz., three red balls by day and three red lights by night, and also, under certain circumstances, the pilot flag.

The Examination commission (and pilots) are on board the Patrol ships; it is in the real interest of Masters of vessels to comply with all directions received from them.

Under all circumstances vessels are prohibited from passing the line of Patrol ships without communicating with them.

On a gun being fired or signal made from a Patrol ship, all merchant vessels must stop immediately.
